OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 4, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 14th June; from Allahabad and Madras to the 12th June; and from Calcutta to the 14th June.

AT the meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council, at Simla, on June 8, the Hon. Mr. Peile introduced the Game Preservation Bill; which, he said, would not curtail the privileges of sportsmen, but would enable Local Governments to sanction rules prohibiting the sale of game during certain seasons in Municipal and Cantonment markets. The Hon. Mr. Quinton then moved for leave to introduce the Bill for establishing a university at Allahabad.

THE Select Committee on the Punjab Land Bills is now sitting three times a week at Simla, so that the report is likely to be soon ready for presentation to Council.

THE Viceroy has addressed letters to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and the Sheriff of Calcutta saying that, as it seemed no longer doubtful that the Sir John Lawrence and the Retriever have been lost in the late cyclone in the Bay of Bengal, he cannot refrain from expressing the deep grief with which he has heard of the calamity as well as other distressing consequences of the great storm. He desired his personal feelings of sympathy, as well as those of the other members of the Government of India, to be made known to the friends of those who have perished.

LADY DUFFERIN gave a very successful garden fête at Simla on the 4th June, the object being to collect funds in connection with the Women's Ward of the Ripon Hospital.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS gave his annual Eton dinner at Snowdon last Saturday week. Amongst the fourteen "old boys" present were the Viceroy, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, Sir Auckland Colvin, Colonel Leigh, of the Highland Light Infantry, and Lord William Beresford.

SIR ALFRED LYALL will leave Allahabad on the 20th Novembernext, Sir Auckland Colvin assuming charge of the Lieutenant-Governorship of the North-West Provinces on the following day. Captain Leonard Gordon, now on the Viceroy's staff, will be Sir Auckland Colvin's Aide-de-Camp, and Lieut. J. R. C. Colvin, 9th Bengal Lancers, his Private Secretary.

SIR COMER PETHERAM, the Chief Justice of Bengal, has been selected as the successor of Sir W. W. Hunter in the Vice-Chancellorship of the Calcutta University.

THE Bishop of Calcutta will probably proceed home on leave next year. A great meeting of Bishops belonging to the Anglican Church is being arranged for, at which his Lordship is expected to be present.

THE labours of the Mobilisation Committee at Simla are drawing to a close, and the proceedings will be ready for submission to the Home authorities in a few weeks. The Secretary of State is thoroughly at one with the Government in completing the preparations which are essential to the military defence of India.

THE new Lee and Lee-Burton rifles sent out for experiment have reached India, and will be shortly served out.

The ex-Wali of Kandahar, Sirdar Shere Ali, who has been lately staying in Bombay, has returned to Karachi.

A FORTIFIED Sarai is about to be built at Lundi Kotal which will probably include quarters for the Political Officer in charge of the Kyber, who may from time to time spend a few weeks there with his tribal Jezailchis, who have done such good work in keeping open the Pass during the past six years. Lieut. J. R. L Macdonald, R.E., will have charge of the detachment of Sappers going to Lundi Kotal to build the Sarai alluded to.

A RATHER disastrous skirmish is reported from Burma to break the series of bloodless successes that have been reported of late. It appears that a pretender, named Sak Yamin, was found strongly stockaded at a place called Toungma, near Pyinulwin, which lies to the north-east of Mandalay in the district of the First Brigade. On the 5th June Lieutenant Cuppage, of the 5th Bengal Infantry, with a party of his regiment, accompanied by Lieutenant Darrah, late of the 17th Bengal Cavalry, and subsequently Assistant Commissioner, advanced to drive him out. They rushed on the stockade and expelled the enemy with loss, but in the charge Lieutenant Darrah was mortally wounded, and Lieutenant Cuppage severely, while one Sepoy was killed and four wounded. Lieutenant Darrah died on the 7th. In another skirmish, in one of the districts of the Northern Division, Ressaidar Muhammad Ali, of the 3rd Regiment of Cavalry, Hyderabad Contingent, with fifteen lancers of his corps, broke up and dispersed a gang of dacoits headed by Prince Lagaing Myutha. The Deputy Commissioner of Shwebo has thanked the Ressaidar for his services.

Notes of the Week.

"NOT too much Jubilee, but nearly Jubilee enough," is perhaps the general sentiment in London just now, for even Mr. Punch has suggested that it would be as well to drop the motley and return to "business." But pleasure is still the business of the moment, and there is still much Jubilee work to be done.

THE first and most important of that work will be the laying of the foundation-stone of the Imperial Institute to-day, and if the programme published be carried out in its entirety the ceremonial will not be the least striking and brilliant of the Jubilee ceremonials. The object is, at least, very definite and important, and if the Institution fulfils only a tithe of the high aims which it is credited with, it will be a very noble memorial of the Jubilee year of the Victorian era. But how about the funds required to carry out its purposes as they ought to be carried out? A telegram from India to-day states that "it is expected" that the Indian subscriptions will amount to five lakhs. Surely there must be some mistake, and five lakhs should be read as a misprint intended for fifty lakhs? If the former sum is to represent India's contribution to the Institute, England's "ducky daughter" must be put down as "poor indeed!"

A RUMOUR is going about to the effect that the new Institute is to absorb the present Colonial one and all the Associations here connected with India, including even the Northbrook Club. The rumour is a strange one, but the reason assigned is that such centralisation will contribute more to the successful carrying out of the large ideas entertained of the purposes for which the Institution has been founded, and will also be the means of attracting greater and better organised support. But perhaps the story is only a concoction of the "lying jade" after all.

HOWEVER, with a day of Indian sunshine which to-day promises, and with all the pomp and pageantry arranged for, the ceremony ought to be a very brilliant and impressive one; and not the least attractive feature in the scene will be the galaxy of Indian Princes and nobles who will grace it with their presence.

THE knowledge of India, its princes and peoples, which is now being displayed by some of the London newspapers, is great and amusing. An evening contemporary tells its readers that the Investiture ceremony could not have been held in public because "there would have been difficulties." And then some of the difficulties are mentioned. "Holkar is not so bold as to kneel before an unveiled woman, let her tap him on the shoulder, and then kiss her hand, and bow in withdrawing from her presence. Nor could the Nizam's temper be trusted when it came to his ears that the Nawab Bahadur had thus made an exhibition of his master. The feeling that would shock both Mahratta and Moslem has no concern with disloyalty. They may be devoted to the British crown—doubtless they are—but when its representative is a Queen, certain time-hoary fancies, usages and superstitions, cannot be excluded." Then follows a bit of what is intended for an historical incident in the life of the first Holkar—"he never saw his mother-wife's features." "The Mahratta is nothing if not orthodox."

BUT, says the writer, "What a grand spectacle it might have been under circumstances quite different!" Not a doubt of it; but besides orthodoxy standing in the way, there were other shortcomings. "In truth, there are some ugly gaps in our list. Where were the representatives of Cashmir, of Afghanistan—above all, of Sindhia?" The writer seems to be under the impression that Afghanistan is an integral part of the Indian Empire, and that Sindhia is the name of a territory in that Empire. We live and learn much about India from Fleet-street.

A CORRESPONDENT to an Indian contemporary thus disposes of the Punjab Maharaja's knowledge of his own language:—"In an account recently given of Dhulip Singh by a Native gentleman it is stated that he speaks Punjabi with great fluency. This is a direct contradiction of what the Maharaja says of himself, for in 1874, in a letter to his aunt, which the writer of this was asked to acknowledge, he said:—'My dear Aunt,—I regret I am not able to write to you in our own language, which, I am ashamed to say, I have forgotten entirely.' That he could have acquired a knowledge of his own language since 1874, to speak it with the fluency of a Native, is very doubtful, for though he may learn to read and write it, there are no books in Punjabi that would teach its idioms to a foreigner, such as Dhulip Singh must be accounted."

POPE'S distich of

"How much a dunce who's been to Rome

may not apply to Mr. Herbert Gladstone, for he is not a dunce, and it is India which he has returned from, not Rome. A voyage to that country, and a hurried tour through certain parts of it, have inspired the young politician to discourse of his impressions in the Nineteenth Century magazine, in a paper which one critic says is "remarkable chiefly for its infantile English." But this does not prevent him from instructing others. He tells us how India ought to be governed. We ought to be just, we ought to be honest, we ought to be considerate in our dealings with the Natives. He believes that the English Government has "in the main" the interest of the people at heart, but "it is hampered by the constantly asserted and predominant interests of Europeans as Europeans." And so he gives advice gratis: "It should be our constant policy to make the interests of Natives and Europeans so far identical as to be harmonious. And while this should be the task of the Government, scarcely less valuable work can be done by all classes of non-official residents in India as well as by the friends of India at home. Greater sympathy and tolerance must be shown on all sides by a people so gifted and so happy in its position as the British towards the less fortunate inhabitants of the country for whose welfare and good government we are now responsible." Better advice could not have come from "the good young man that died," as a once popular song hath it.

BUT what will papa say to Master Herbert insisting that we should continue to hold India for ourselves, and should not reduce a single British soldier there? He says:—

To state that we must work for evacuation may be a well-meant, but it is a sentimental and . . . . a dangerously misleading assertion. No one can foresee the time when such evacuation will be either wise or necessary. . . . But it is a fact worth noticing that of all countries comprised in the British Empire Ireland is the most heavily garrisoned, so India in proportion to her vast population is the lightest.

Is this an unconscious tribute to the truth that Home Rule will not do for India, at all events?

THE London Chamber of Commerce may not be in favour of the new contract with the P. and O. Company regarding the carrying of the East India and China Mails, but a memorial, signed by upwards of one hundred leading merchants and bankers doing business with those countries, approving of that contract, cannot be without its influence upon the public as well as upon the House of Commons. The debate in the House was a little acrimonious, and it is difficult to believe that all the arguments brought forward by Mr. Raikes's opponents were free from party or personal interests, and were solely used for the benefit of Imperial ones. "There are wheels within wheels" says a very old proverb, and it was not falsified during the debate.

ALL Anglo-Indians will, with ourselves, regret to hear of the serious indisposition of the Hon. Sir Ashley Eden, and will join with us in the wish for his speedy and complete restoration to health. A man of such ripe and varied experience on Indian questions can ill be spared from the Indian Council just now.

SIR SALAR JUNG, when at Constantinople last week, said "that Dhulip Sing is simply up for sale to the highest bidder, and the British Government, knowing his real position in India, is not likely to bid for him at all. His name at no time carried weight in India, but by his recent performances he has succeeded entirely in forfeiting the respect of his fellow-countrymen of whatever religious faith. The idea of the son of the old Lion of Lahore sneaking about the Continent of Europe under the alias of Patrick Casey!" When questioned as to the interest taken by India in the future control of the Bosphorus Salar Jung replied, "The head of the Ottoman Empire is the head of my Church—the father of the faithful here and in India. With improving means of communication the connection grows each year closer. I scout the idea that England can ever be indifferent as to who owns the sacred shrine of St. Sophia."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JULY 3.

The report of the Director-General of Railways for the last financial year gives an interesting account of the steady progress in railway construction, and the improved results of existing lines; 1,025½ miles of new railways were completed during the year under review, bringing the total mileage open to 13,390½. The total sanctioned mileage open and under construction on March 31 was 16,596. The most important additions to the open mileage were 261¼ miles on the Southern Mahratta line, 81½ miles from Pirchowki to Quetta on the Quetta loop of the Sind-Pishin line, 74 miles on the Sind-Pisbin main line, and 120 miles on the Sind-Sagar section of the North-Western Railway. The most important new line sanctioned was the Toungoo-Mandalay extension of the Burma Railway. The Jubilee bridge over the Hooghly near Calcutta and the Gunduck bridge in Tirhoot were opened shortly before the close of the year, while in May the Ferozepore bridge over the Sutlej and the Sind-Sagar bridge over the Jhelum were also opened. The bridge over the Jumna at Kalpi, and those over the Ganges at Benares and Balwala, were nearly finished. As regards revenue and traffic the general result is a return of 5·90 per cent. on capital, as against 5·84 in the previous year. Among other subjects discussed by the Director-General is the petroleum borings at Khatun, which it is hoped will before long supply the Sind-Pishin line with fuel.

Rukmabhai, after having allowed her husband, Dadajee's, exposition to remain unanswered for over two months, has now published a reply, in which she gives a direct contradiction to several of his statements. She repeats that at the time of the marriage she was eleven, not thirteen years of age. She denies that the marriage was sought for by her family, and says that, on the contrary, it was sought by Dadajee's family. Her property, she asserts, is not worth even half of 25,000 rupees the amount stated by her husband, and she adds that her father left that property absolutely to her mother, and that she herself received it purely from her mother's affection. She again asserts that Dadajee led a wild and reckless life amid objectionable surroundings, which made her conceive a strong aversion for him, and she declares that there is no truth in his statement that her property and not herself was the real bone of contention. While Rukmabhai seems to have made a very complete answer to Dadajee's allegations it cannot be denied that she made an unfortunate tactical blunder in so long delaying the publication.

The question of the adoption of an heir to the great Burdwan estates, the largest property in Lower Bengal, has been before the public for some weeks past, and is exciting much interest, especially among Hindoos. The facts are briefly these. The Maharajah Mahtab Chund of Burdwan, who was perhaps the best known and most deservedly popular among the noblemen of Bengal, died about eight years ago, leaving a widow, now generally known as the Dowager Maharanee, and an adopted son, Aftab Chund, who succeeded him. Aftab died childless in 1885, and left a widow whom by his will he empowered to adopt a son. The widow being under age, the Court of Wards assumed the charge of the vast family estates. Some months ago the widow announced her intention of adopting the son of Sala Bun Behari Kapoor, who is related to the family, and who is one of the managers of the estate under the Court of Wards. The Dowager Maharanee objected to the proposed adoption, urging that it would under Hindoo law be invalid for three reasons — first, because the boy was the only son of his natural father; secondly, because his mother was sister of the Maharaja Aftab Chund; thirdly, because he was over five years of age. The property being under the Court of Wards the assent of the Goverment to the adoption is necessary, and the question was argued by counsel at great length before the Board of Revenue, the authority which advises the Government on such matters. The Board, consisting of Messrs. Halliday and Beames, have now given their decision. They hold that the objections would have been valid had the family been subject to the Hindoo law which prevails over the greater part of India. The Burdwan family, however, came originally from the Punjab, and the Board consider it is still governed by the customary law of that province, under which such adoption would be valid, and as they think the selection to be in other respects an excellent one they recommend the Lieutenant-Governor to sanction the adoption. It is not yet announced whether Sir Steuart Bayley means to act upon the recommendation.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 3.

Mr. Crosthwaite has arrived at Mandalay, where he will remain for a few weeks before proceeding to Bhamo. During his voyage up the Irrawaddy he found the country between Thayetmyo and Mandalay quiet, except the Taundurnggee district, which is disturbed. There is considerable scarcity in Yen and Shwebo, but the price of food in those districts is insufficient to draw rice from Mandalay, where there is a good supply. There is plenty of work in progress for those in want of work. Arrangements are being made to ration the coolies where the local supply of paddy is insufficient. While there is distress in certain districts, the Chief Commissioner is of opinion, after careful examination of the question, that there is no fear of famine.

Ngamoung, a noted dacoit leader, who has several times attacked the English troops, surrendered to Brigadier-General Wolseley, who was marching with a force to attack him. After being prisoner for three days, Ngamoung was allowed to escape, and is again at large at the head of his band.

The Alaungpra pretender has again assembled a large body of dacoits near Pymalwin. A column has been despatched to attack him.

The Government are now receiving from miners an ad valorem duty of thirty per cent. on all rubies found in the ruby mine district. The general opinion in Burma is that the Goverment ought to retain the management of the ruby mines in their own hands for some years, until their value and capabilities have been accurately ascertained.

CALCUTTA, or at any rate that part of it that does not migrate to the hills—is delighted that Sir Steuart Bayley has delayed his trip to Darjeeling till the middle of May, it having hitherto been usual for the Lieutenant-Governor to quit the metropolis at the end of March. Notwithstanding the heat, Sir Steuart has had a hard time of it. Beyond his regular official work, which always occupies many hours, he has had to receive all sorts of deputations with addresses, and make suitable replies thereto, to say nothing of his unveiling the statue of Sir Ashley Eden and the portrait of Sir Rivers Thompson, and laying the foundation-stone of the Eden Hospital at the very hottest time of the year. For there can be no doubt that though the thermometer has often been higher in Calcutta during the hot weather, there has been seldom more trying weather than lately, when the thermometer has varied in the shade ninety-eight degrees to ninety-five degrees, and the nights have been correspondingly hot and oppressive.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

IN THE YEAR '57.—II.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Who in the world is the officer with the painful illegible signature who writes to the great "J. L." as "My dear Lawrence?" Major Lake—the man who has nominated the officers to the Ludhianah regiment. He wants recuits—more recuits for his levies. "J. L." disposes of him in a dozen lines. "Miller"—who is Miller?—"must recruit for Lake. Miller has got all his own men." Some one evidently has dissented from this, for in pencil below is written:—Write as above, please," "J. L." is not going to waste time over frivolous objections from underlings.

To this docket succeeds a letter from Colonel Sandeman, commanding the 33rd Native Infantry at Jullundur. Such a pitiful command, and such a pitiful letter! Some clerk has copied it, but the appeal of the gallant soldier—the human voice under the official form cries out.

Nicholson—a meteor in the Province—has disarmed the 33rd—has taken away all but their bayonets—and has dropped them at Jullundur while he hurries north to catch the Sialkote mutineers hastening on Gurdaspore, and to slay them by hundreds at Trimmoo Ghat on the banks of the Ravee. On the 6th of July—having then been disarmed for nearly a fortnight, Colonel Sandeman writes to "J. L." it is easy to see that the heart of the Commandant of the 33rd is sick within him. "I think," says he, "no officer could have pursued the system of unvarying trust in the men further than I could have done, and to its exhibition I attribute, in no small degree, the preservation of my corps from the prevalent mania." Unvarying trust! That groundless faith sent unarmed officers down to the parade ground to be slaughtered by their "children," as the officers of Peshawur called them. How far the 33rd are tainted with the "prevalent mania," may be judged from the fact that "Nicholson has disarmed my regiment, merely as a measure of precaution," and that men are "quiet and subordinate in all respects, but depressed, of course, from the recent disarming, the execution of deserters and the state of affairs generally." "Here we are then"—at Jullundur—"awaiting orders with much carriage to pay, trusting our men." How that man loved his regiment! He will continue to trust. There are some bad characters in every regiment—there must be—but he will continue to trust—and his officers will sleep in camp as usual—not among the men, for that might hurt the men's feelings.

Now comes the pith of the whole letter. The Colonel has heard something about the Army being brought into arrears of pay. Whatever happens, pay must be given to all or none. If the men must be unpaid, put the officers in arrears also. The latter will undergo any personal inconvenience sooner than take pay while their men are unpaid.

"The worst men in the corps—and I doubt not that there are some bad" will foment discontent over this "invidious distinction." Nicholson was right, the Colonel thinks, in the partial disarming of the 33rd. "Powerful and inexplicable influences" are at work all over the country. Even his trusted men may give way with the rest, and he prays, therefore, that matters may not be made too hard for them. Poor Colonel Sandeman! "J. L" has no time for sentiment. He writes on the 15th July:—"Since this, men, officers and all, have been brought under the same rules. It is a matter of necessity. So the brooding semi disarmed 33rd at Jullundur waiting for Nicholson's return, and perhaps their muskets, if they behave themselves, are disposed of.

The last paragraph of Colonel Sandeman's letter contains an allusion to "the new cartridge and the new rifle." New rifle! The Enfield—mother of the Snider, grandmother of the Martini, soon to give place to the Schuloff or Lee Burton. Never did a rifle bring greater bloodshed than the old Enfield—bad at four hundred yards. Twenty copies of a pamphlet printed at Lahore have found their way into that infected camp at Jullundur, and have had a good effect on the men's minds "as regards the new cartridge and the new rifle." "J. L." takes no notice of this piece of news. If the men are favourably impressed, well and good. If not, they have only their bayonets, and are fairly safe at Jullundur.

Here tumble out two letters from George Henry Ricketts, D.C. of Ludhianah. Ricketts has stepped out of his province as a Civilian, and apologises for it; but when a man's district is threatened by Mutineers, what can one do? He has done his best to stop the rush of the Jullundur men before noted; and on the 17th July, writes to bring to notice the conduct of Lieutenant Williams who, with three companies of the 4th Sikhs, helped him to fight a good fight on the Sutlej bank, and to keep Ludhianah from open rebellion. "Lieutenant Williams was the only military man present, and as he would never allude to his conduct, it devolves on me to bring all the circumstances to your notice." Lieutenant Williams has, inter alia, attacked the rebels at night, and made them exceedingly uncomfortable; though one hundred men out of his poor three companies were recruits, who were forbidden to fire. Lieutenant Williams has done many other notable things, and has received a bullet in his side in the bargain. Neville Chamberlain writes some complimentary remarks on both Ricketts and Williams, and the whole goes up to "J. L.," who merely says "send copy to Government in continuation of former—that is to say, Ricketts's first account of the trouble at Ludhianah."

The second letter from that Deputy Commissioner is by no means so genial. The Jullundur mutineers, during their uninvited stay with him, released the prisoners in Ludhianah Gaol, and the Gaol Guard behaved infamously. No one can explain anything. Perhaps they were gawbry. George Henry Ricketts is furiously angry:—It is impossible, in my opinion, to conceive a more glaring instance of thorough cowardice even if there was no treachery." What is to be done with or to the Gaol Guard? Macpherson, the Military Secretary says:—"dismiss the whole of them." "J. L." says:—"keep in arrest pending orders." That is all. What orders were passed? Did Ricketts deal with that Gaol Guard after the manner of the time, or were the sinners released when the trouble blew over? The docket gives no reply, but the broad, dashed signature bears witness after thirty years, that Ricketts, D.O. was very wrath.

"Any use in keeping a copy of the roll?" is the legend on a fat blue envelope more worn than the rest. Who was the man who wanted to get rid of the unpleasant memento of the "late" 10th Irregu'ar Cavalry, who started the mutiny at Nowshera, on June the 21st, and some of them shared the awful fate Nicholson prepared for the 55th. The roll is very neatly written, and has been conned many times. Rajput, Pathan, Syed, Mogul, Brahmin, Sikh—they have all been false to their salt—saving two men—and the estate of the Native commissioned and noncommissioned officers are now to be confiscated. Lieutenant Griffiths sends in the roll, and signs himself for the last time, "Adjutant, Late 10th I. C." He must have been disgusted, this Englishman. "Jemmadar Jellary Khan and Duffadar Ahmed Khan"—let Cotton's testimony in their favour be set down now, "should not have their estates confiscated. I have deemed it expedient," says the great l ead of the Peshawur Division, "to save them from the ruin in which their regiment was involved." Does Jemmadar Jellary Khan—he would only be sixty-six years old—l've still near Shahjehanpore in the Bareilly district.

After that blue envelope come scores of little letters—indents for forage, ammunition, recruits—always more recruits—sago, shot, rupees—estimates for the cost of Native regiments to supply the place of the old ones—and Lieutenant Williams's demand for a wound gratuity for the bullet in his side—if ever man deserves one, Williams does, for now that he is on the sick list he is recruiting, and "J. L." seems pleased with his work. A Lieutenant Sam Black—will he, in time, come to great honour, and after teaching grown men how to fight, teaches little chieflets how to rule?—sends in some papers connected with Lieutenant Williams. Sandwiched between these papers are copies of telegrams from Delhi. The rebels attacked here, were repulsed there, taking off Lieutenant Jones's leg. There has been no attack for two days—Lieutenant Jones is much worse—will somebody send someone to examine the arms taken from the mutinous regiments before reissue to new corps? And so on and so on and so on—every docket and dirty little slip of paper to the address of "J. L.," or referred to him for orders.

The levies are giving trouble. A Captain Salmon thinks that the middle of a mutiny is the proper time to quarrel with the quality of his recruits. He writes, the day after he commenced to form the Ferozepore Punjab battalion, begging to observe that out of three hundred men "certainly not more than 150 are fitted for a corps of the line, from their being old and undersized; many being under 5ft. 6in. and ill-formed. The few lads there are, are weakly, and will, I fear, soon break down." Captain Salmon is not a wise man. Hereon "J. L." grimly says:—"I think it will have a very bad effect discharging men for the reasons given by Captain Salmon. I would tell him not to do so, and point out that this is not the time for disgusting men. My opinion is that an officer who thinks and writes in this fashion will not answer for us. Tell him so in a polite way. He can pick pretty men if he likes when they first come, but it is too bad to discharge ugly and short men." Decidedly this is "one" for Captain Salmon, even if the Military Secretary softens it down in the re-writing. Do we not know many cold-blooded fish like this Salmon to-day? Men who would stickle for the due sizing of a front rank, if the next moment were to be their last. How little do the generations change!

DEVELOPMENT OF BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

It is quite evident that, as the country settles down, trade is reviving, and there is every prospect of the most sanguine expectations as to the commercial development of Burma being realised. Already there are indications that a considerable increase of trade has taken place. In the early part of 1886, trade was altogether congested. Fears were entertained, though fortunately they were not realised, that in the then disturbed state of even Lower Burma the rice crop would not be brought to market. But though this fear proved groundless, and the Burmans brought in their paddy readily enough, they were not equally ready to take back imported goods in exchange. In the early part of last year, though paddy came in, imported goods did not move off, and every merchant in the place was complaining that his godowns were full, and that he could not find any buyers for his imported goods. Now, not only have these heavy stocks been all moved off, but though the imports for the past official year show a considerable increase over preceding years, merchants' godowns are now comparatively empty. We have not the figures for the year 1886-87, but they must show a considerable increase over 1885-86; and this increase plus the enormous stocks in the hands of the original importers a little more than a year ago is the measure of the increased commercial activity the annexation of Upper Burma has brought about, during what is really only the first year of the new régime. We may expect this to increase gradually as the people of Upper Burma become less poverty-stricken, that is after they have reaped a few good harvests and pocketed the proceeds themselves, instead of having them filched away by dacoits, or by the scarcely less unscrupulous Burmese officials, which has been their chief experience of enjoying the fruits of their labours in the past. Though we have not got by us the figures for the whole year, the comparative statement of the collections at the several customs-houses of Burma for the first three months of 1887 as compared with the same period in 1886 shows a remarkable increase in the current year. The total import and export duties during the first quarter of 1886 was, in round numbers, about 27 lakhs; in the first quarter of 1887 30 lakhs has been realised from this source of revenue. The increase is very nearly three lakhs; and three lakhs extra duty means an enormously increased volume of trade. But taken in this way, for three months only, the total is scarcely a fair index, as various causes may lead to an increased import or export during certain months, to be counterbalanced by a corresponding diminution in other months. This would specially apply to the export duty on rice. Similarly there is an increase of over half a lakh in the import duty on salt, which apparently is not due to the whole country paying three annas per maund on the salt it uses; for if we remember rightly, it was doing this even in 1886, the alteration having been made immediately after the annexation. But salt vessels are apt to crowd in during the earlier months of the year; so it will be safer not to lay too much stress on this. The increase in the general import duty, which must be chiefly derived from liquor, as Manchester and most other goods are free, is over a lakh of rupees. The figures for the quarter are a striking corroboration of the fact, already well known to all importing merchants, that the annexation of Upper Burma has already given a considerable impetus to trade.

THE PESHIN PLATEAU.

(Pioneer.)

Now that Peshin has been opened out by the railway, and its strategic value from a military point of view consequently increased a hundredfold, it is very desirable that attention should be paid to the development of its natural resources. The plateau produces little or nothing in the way of food or fuel and only a limited supply of forage, and there are consequently great drawbacks to massing large numbers of troops there in case of emergency. Yet there can be little doubt that the soil is sufficiently good to repay cultivation and forestry. Water is needed, it is true, and irrigation works in the ordinary sense of the term are impossible, as the rivers have cut for themselves channels so deep that their streams cannot be diverted. But in Afghanistan and Persia, where similar conditions obtain, the cultivators secure an abundant supply of water by the karez system, which is one of lines of wells connected by underground channels, these being so ingeniously carried out that the difficulty of varying water-level is quite overcome. The karezes in some districts extend for many miles, and are the real public works of the country. Skilled labour is not needed to construct them, as the cultivators make them for themselves, and there would thus be no difficulty in applying them to Peshin, as labour could be drawn from the adjacent Afghan districts. In starting forestry, fodder and fuel reserves and so forth, in a place like Peshin, the initial trouble is that the various departments concerned with such projects will not launch into expenditure from which no immediate return is possible: they cannot trench on their existing revenue unless specially ordered to do so, and they have no spare capital to invest. What, in our opinion, is needed is some plan by which the general scheme of developing the resources of Peshin should be worked as a whole and not in departmental sections. Thus it is pretty certain that the extension of the water supply by the karez system would pay quickly and handsomely, as cultivation generally would be stimulated. Grass-farms would, after a short time at least, cover their expenses; forestry would take years before any return could be expected. There would thus be a profit shown in one direction, a balance of accounts in another and a loss in a third. But if the matter were regarded as a whole, there would be actually little or no loss to the State after a year or two, while the advantages gained by converting the wilderness into a well-watered, highly cultivated and fairly wooded district need not be enumerated. We can only hope that the Government of India will frame some scheme under which the various departments concerned may pull together and convert the Peshin plateau into a really fruitful and more than self-supporting tract.

BENGAL.

THE appeal made by Sir A. Wilson, the Sheriff of Calcutta, for contributions to the relief fund for the sufferers by the loss of the Sir John Lawrence and the Retriever has already been promptly responded to. Messrs. MacNeill and Co., agents of the former vessel, head the list with a donation of 1,000 rupees.

THE Darjeeling paper says:—"We gather that there is such a dearth of young men and such a wealth of young ladies just now at Darjeeling that old boys are no longer at a discount at the various dances, and are so much in demand that our local tradesmen have trouble in meeting the heavy demands made on them for joint ointment, gloves, ties, pumps, &c. Old fellows who have not danced for years may now be seen looking brisk and bright, skipping along and humming or whistling popular waltzes."

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has received the following telegram from His Excellency the Viceroy:—"I cannot express to you my deep feelings of sorrow and regret at the terrible disaster which has overtaken so many families in Calcutta through the loss of the Sir John Lawrence. As far as you can do so, pray convey to those who have lost friends or relatives, and to others who are sufferers, the deepest sympathy of myself and my colleagues. If a subscription is opened, I shall, of course, be happy to contribute." In forwarding the above to Calcutta Sir Steuart Bayley adds an expression of his own deep sorrow at the affliction which has befallen these families.

WITH regard to the report furnished to the Englishman recently of the effects of the late cyclone in the Balasore District, Mr. A. C. Tute, the collector of the district, writes to that paper:—"I wish to state for the benefit of those who are interested in Balasore that the report is a grossly exaggerated one. Since the cyclone I have been through Bhudrock, and am writing from Chandbally. The only loss of life I have had as yet reported is the loss of three lives on Shortt's Island and two in the district. A great number of thatched huts have, it is true, been unroofed and blown down, but no damage to crops occurred, for the very good reason that there were no crops in the ground to be damaged. The report is calculated to alarm those who have friends in Balasore, and I hasten to give the true version of the damage done." The Englishman says it received the report in question from an Ooryah.

MADRAS.

AT the suggestion of Colonel Porteous, Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Northern Range, Madras, and with the concurrence of the Inspector-General of Police of that Presidency, the Madras Government have sanctioned the formation at Waltair of a class for instruction in Army-signalling. A few men are to be selected from the police reserves in each of the hill districts who will go through a four-months' course of instruction under the superintendence of Colonel Porteous, assisted by a passed instructor in Army-signalling, at the expiration of which period the man so instructed will be sent back to their respective reserves, where they will be employed in instructing the others.

FINAL orders have, it is stated, now been passed for the closing of the gunpowder factory at Madras, notwithstanding the remonstrances of the local Chamber of Commerce and the Madras Government. Before the factory is finally closed, however, the Secretary of State for India requires to be shown that all necessary precautions have been taken to guard against any dangers which might accrue to the Southern Presidency from its not having a sufficient supply of powder in hand. Although all work will cease at the factory, a sufficient establishment is still to be maintained to keep the building and machinery in efficient order, so that the work of manufacture can be at once recommenced when required.

A SHORT time ago a committee sat at Madras to consider whether any reductions were feasible in the establishments of the Madras Railway, and appear to have recommended some considerable reductions. This, however, did not meet with the approval of the agent and manager of the railway, and a meeting has just been held at his office, at which the Government Consulting Engineer for Railways and his deputy, the Examiner of Guaranteed Railway Accounts, and the heads of various departments of the railway were present. The railway authorities contended that no reductions could be carried out at present, as the report of the committee had not as yet received the approval of either the Local or Supreme Governments, the Secretary of State for India, or the board of directors of the railway company in England. No immediate action will therefore be taken.

THE BANGALORE BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.—A Bangalore paper says that on Saturday Mr. Rhenius, being produced by his surety, the Rev. Mr. Lyons, before Colonel H. M. S. Magrath, Civil Judge, Civil and Military Station, Bangalore, for the purpose of being sent to jail for not paying up the Rs. 10,000 awarded as damages to the plaintiff, Mrs. Havelock, the judge suggested to the defendant the advisability of effecting a compromise, if he chose to do so. Mr. Rhenius, in reply, said that he was totally unable to pay any money, or give any property to plaintiff, and that, as the case was brought against him through vindictiveness and spite, he had no inclination to attempt a compromise, but was fully prepared to go to jail and there suffer imprisonment. Mr. Sidney Smith, who appeared for the defendant in place of Mr. Lawrance, requested the Court to adjourn the case for a few minutes, to enable him to hold a consultation outside the Court house with Mr. Rhenius and his friends, and the plaintiff's counsel, and see what could be done in the matter. After about a quarter of an hour it was decided by the mutual consent of both parties that defendant should be allowed time till next Tuesday noon to consult his people, and make the best compromise he could; and a motion being made to this effect, the Court granted the time on the Rev. Mr. Lyons' again standing surety for Mr. Rhenius.

BOMBAY.

REGARDING the recent memorial of the citizens of Bombay and reply from the Local Government on the question of a civilian being appointed to the Chief Magistrateship of that town, Mr. Malabari writes in the Indian Spectator of the 5th:—"An opponent, driven into a corner, is apt to grow desperate. Such seems to be the case with the European petitioners in town (the Native signatories may be taken as thikathik), who have been disputing the right of Government to give the place of Chief Presidency Magistrate to a civilian barrister of position. Defeated in argument, the opponents have now taken to declamation. They are angry with the reply of the Government, which, they say, is very harsh. Now, considering the tone of the petition and the writing in the newspapers supporting it, the reply is not so very harsh as it is alleged to be. That it is crushing is no fault of the Government. The latter have met the petitioners on almost all important points raised by them, and anticipated them on those points which were held over their heads in terrorem. They, perhaps, see that the reply of Government has made it impossible for them to make good their threat of going to the home authorities and to Parliament. Hinc illæ lacrymæ!"

IT will be remembered that Mr. Gibson, of the Bombay Forest Department, was recently mauled by a tigress in the Khandeish district. The following narrative of the adventure has been supplied by the gentleman in question to a Bombay paper:—'On the afternoon of the 16th April, in the extreme west of the Khandeish district, I was loafing about the jungle, looking for anything that might turn up, when I saw the tigress, a very large one, at some little distance. I got a shot at her and wounded her, but she made off. Unfortunately it was getting too late in the afternoon to follow up her track. Early next morning a small party of followers set out with me to look for the wounded brute. We searched for her until close upon two o'clock in the afternoon. Suddenly we came upon a river-bed where we found, half hidden by the grass, the body of a Native boy of about fifteen or sixteen years of age. He had been dreadfully mauled by the tigress. His flesh was badly torn, and he had apparently been killed during the night or early morning. We were standing examining the boy when the tigress rose from the opposite side of the river, about forty yards away, and charged at us. All my men immediately made away as quickly as their legs could carry them, taking with them my spare guns and everything else, leaving me only an Express rifle. I had one shot at her at about fifteen yards, struck her, but failed to stop her. The other charge I preserved until she was about four yards off. She was mortally wounded, but she turned literally head over heels, and with an impetus came 'bump' up against me, knocking me down. She was partly on the top of me, and in her dying agony gave me first of all a bite in the arm, and then sent her two fangs into my thigh. She crushed no bones, nor did she give me any claw wound, but lacerated my flesh severely in two places. She lay on the top of me dying, when one of my party, a Bheel, quite a young fellow, came up and despatched her."

NATIVE PRESS.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONARIES.—Both the English and Irish are Christians. The English are Protestants and the Irish are Roman Catholics. Formerly the English maintained Protestant missionaries in Ireland at the expense of the Irish, as the Irish are conquered like ourselves. The Irish began a terrible agitation, and some liberal-minded Englishmen joined them. The Government was at last compelled to do its duty. If it was considered improper to maintain Protestant missionaries at the expense of the Irish who are Christians, how can it be proper to maintain Christian missionaries at the expense of the people of India? There are various sorts of religion in this country, but none of them have any concern with Christianity, and it is a matter of wonder that the Christian missionaries are supported at the expense of the people. If the Government is too anxious to give us the light of Christianity, let the expense be borne by the Treasury of England. If this were done, we should not have to bear the income tax. We shall then consider whether Christianity is good or bad.—The Suravi and Pataka.

IRELAND AN EXAMPLE FOR INDIA.—National unity is the basis of agitation, so first of all we ought to secure national unity. In this respect the example of Ireland will have to be followed. We have learnt a great deal from Ireland, and now we ought to carry those lessons into practice. We ought to love one another, give up selfishness, and agitate on all matters fearlessly. Then we shall be able to secure political advancement. Our loyalty is unshaken: and this will be our guide. Besides, the European nations are our models. Why should we, then, be in different? Besides, we have received another lesson from Ireland—that many in England are opposed to the advancement of other nations, otherwise why should the god-like Mr. Gladstone lose the Premiership?—The Sangbad Pravakar.

THE HINDU CHILD WIDOW.—The friends and relations of child widows treat them most brutally. The widow daughter does not even receive kind treatment from the mother. But on the death of the mother she is treated as a menial servant in the house of her brother or father-in-law. Every Hindu is well aware of this fact. Under English rule this hard lot of the widow has not been mitigated by law. In these days of civilization the Indian women have not been able to secure exemption from harsh treatment through the legislation of a nation under whose administration the oppression of the weak by the strong has disappeared. Legislature, we do not know how to curse you! Language does not furnish us with adequate expressions.—The Paridarshak.

BURMESE BRAVERY.—The people of Burma have no arms. They have no worthy leader nor sufficient means for conducting military operations. The British troops, on the other hand, are led by able commanders. They have good material for war, and are in no want of money or food; under such circumstances the people of Burma are undoubtedly to be praised for their valour and perseverance. There are brave men among them. Lord Dufferin's assertion that they are incapable of self-defence appears to be erroneous. If the Burmese had a worthy leader and sufficient arms, we do not think that the English could enter Burma. The Burmese are unfortunate, but they are not cowards.—The Bharatbasi.

THE POVERTY OF INDIA.—In no part of the British Empire are the people so miserable as in India. If there be no crops for two years, famine occurs. Within 30 years the taxes have been more than doubled. When the people are poor the Empire is in danger. Poverty is the cause of the disturbances in Ireland. If you must raise the number of troops, then reduce the cost of administration. You will suffer more if your Empire is ruined. —Bangabasi.

THE IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.

We are authorised to state that the following kings, princes, and princesses will be present at the grand ceremonial of laying the foundation stone of the Imperial Institute by the Queen today at South Kensington. They will form part of Her Majesty's procession from the entrance of the building in Exhibition-road. Their exact positions have not yet been decided upon, but will be as nearly as possible as follows:—

Prince George of Wales, Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud of Wales, with the Prince and Princess of Wales, King of Denmark, King of Greece, Duke of Sparta, Prince George of Greece, Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, Princesses Victoria, Sofia, and Margaret of Prussia, Duchess of Edinburgh, Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Prince and Princess Christian, Princes Christian Victor and Albert John of Sleswick Holstein, Princesses Victoria and Franziska of Sleswick Holstein, Princess Louise and Marquis of Lorne, Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg, Duchess of Albany, Grand Duke of Hesse, Hereditary Grand Duke of Hesse, Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse, Duke of Cambridge, Duke and Duchess of Teck, Prince and Princess Leiningen, Prince and Princess Victor of Hohenlohe, Prince and Princess Louis of Battenburg, Count and Countess de Paris, Duc d'Orleans, Prince Henry d'Orleans, Princesses Helene and Marguerite d'Orleans, Duc de Chartres, and Duc d'Aumale.

We are further able to announce that the procession of Her Majesty from Paddington Station to South Kensington, which will be viâ London-street, Cambridge-terrace, Bayswater-road, Victoria-gate, across Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens, over the Serpentine Bridge to Exhibition-road, will be in semi-State. Her Majesty arrives at Paddington from Windsor at a quarter past eleven, where she will be received by all the great officials of State, mounted and Foot Guards of Honour, and six carriages. The latter are the same State carriages used at the Grand Thanksgiving Service on June 1st, but the cream-coloured horses will not be used. The first four carriages will bear the great officers of State and the fifth members of the Royal Family, while in the sixth, which will be drawn by four bay horses, will be seated the Queen, escorted by a Captain's escort of Life Guards. The Queen, after the ceremony, will pass to the Albert Hall, and from thence will return to Windsor by the same route as she arrived and accompanied by the same officers of State and Mounted Guard of Honour.

HER Majesty, previous to the Volunteer Review on Saturday, conferred in person the Jubilee medal on the officers of the Indian escort.

THE Regulation just passed by the Government of India relating to rubies and other precious stones in Upper Burma applies to the whole of our new province except the Shan States. Under its provisions the Local Government has power to grant ordinary licenses for mining to Native residents in the stone tracts working by Native methods, and extraordinary licenses to mine by any method. No one is to cut or dress stones within the limits of a stone tract, or without a license beyond such limits. Ordinary licenses will be granted to headmen on existing claims after a list has been made out of all Native residents in the stone tracts. Stones raised under ordinary licenses will have to be sold at the owner's valuation to the lessees holding an extraordinary license, or such percentage of value will be paid as the Local Government may decide. A ruby mart is to be re-established at Mandalay, and all precious stones are to be carefully registered. Special provisions are made to prevent smuggling or illicit sales, power of search being given to Government officials. The general idea of the regulations is to permit those Natives whose families have worked the mines for generations to continue working existing claims, while the exploitation of stone tracts on a large scale by the lessees holding the extraordinary license will be sanctioned by Government on the payment of an annual rental. Messrs. Streeter and Co. have for some time past been in negotiation with the Government for such an extraordinary license, the terms being four lakhs per annum for five years.

THE QUEEN AND THE INDIAN DEPUTATIONS.

The Queen held a Court at Windsor Castle on Thursday at three o'clock, at which Her Majesty received personal congratulations and addresses from the Indian chiefs, deputations from Native Indian States, from the municipal corporations of Calcutta and Bombay, and from the inhabitants of the Presidency of Madras.

The following officers of the Indian Contingent were on duty in the Green Drawing Room :—

Captain C. W. Muir, Captain G. A. Money, Subadar Sheik Imdad Ali, Ressaldar-Major Nurul Hussum, Ressaldar Lall Singh, Ressaldar Hafiz Muhammad, Nawaz Khan, Ressaldar-Major Nadir, Ali Khan, Ressaldar-Major Isri Singh, Ressaldar Sher Singh, Sirdar Bahadoor, Ressaldar-Major Zufar Ali Khan, Ressaldar-Major Moozuffer Khan, Woordie Major Lena Singh, Subadar Ibrahim Khan, Jemadar Kanchan Singh, Ressaldar Muhammad Buksh. His Highness Maharajah Holkar of Ind re was introduced into Her Majesty's presence by the Secretary of State. Sir Lepel Griffin was announced to the Queen by the Secretary of State, and the members of his Highness's suite by the political Aide-de-Camp. His Highness offered his personal congratulations to Her Majesty, and requested her gracious acceptance of a memento of the auspicious occasion of Her Majesty's Jubilee. The Queen-Empress having presented to his Highness an enamelled medallion of herself in commemoration of his presence at her Jubilee celebration, conferred the honour of Knighthood on the Maharajah, and invested his Highness with the insignia of a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, which was handed to Her Majesty by the Registrar of the Order.

His Highness knelt and Her Majesty placed the riband over the right shoulder, passing it obliquely to the left side. Her Majesty delivered to his Highness the Star of the Order. His Highness, after kissing her Majesty's hand, arose, and with his suite retired with the usual reverences.

Her Majesty was also graciously pleased to receive gifts from, and presented similar medallions to the following Indian chiefs. Each chief was accompanied by the political officer and attended by his suite, the same ceremonial being observed at each audience.

His Highness the Rao of Kutch, who also presented the address read by him from the Gadi on Feb. 16, 1887.

The Sovereign conferred the honour of Knighthood on his Highness, and invested him with the insignia of a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, by placing the riband of the Order over the right shoulder and passing it obliquely to the left side. Her Majesty delivered the Star of the Order to his Highness, who kissed Her Majesty's hand and rose.

His Highness was accompanied by his brother, Kumar Shri Kalooba, who was invested by the Queen with the badge of a Companion of the said Most Eminent Order. He kissed Her Majesty's hand and retired with his Highness the Rao, accompanied as on introduction.

Their Highnesses the Maharajah and Maharani of Kuch Behar.

His Highness the Thakore Sahib of Morvi.

The Thakore Sahib of Limri.

The Thakore Sahib of Gondal, K.C.I.E., LL.D.,

Who also, in conjunction with Colonel Wodehouse as a deputation from the chiefs of Katiaway, presented an address to Her Majesty from that province.

His Highness the Thakore Sahib of Morvi and the Thakore Sahib of Limri respectively received from Her Majesty the honour of Knighthood, and was invested with the insignia of a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, by Her Majesty placing the riband and badge round their necks. The Queen then delivered to them the Star of their dignity in the Order, after which they kissed Her Majesty's hand and rose. The Thakore Sahib of Gondal, K.C.I.E., LL.D., also had the honour of kissing Her Majesty's hand, and the deputation retired.

The following deputations from Indian Native States were next introduced to Her Majesty, being announced by the political aide-de-camp :—

Deputation from his Highness the Nizam, G.C.S.I.

The Nawab Amir-i-Akbar Asman Jah Bahadur was graciously permitted to present a memorial gift, and received from Her Majesty's hands an enamelled miniature.

Deputation from his Highness the Gaikwar of Baroda, G.C.S.I.

Deputation from his Highness the Maharajah of Bhurtpore, G.C.S.I.

Deputation from his Highness the Rajah of Kapurthalla.

At the conclusion of the audiences to the Native chiefs and deputations from Native States, Her Majesty received deputations from the Municipal Corporations of Calcutta and Bombay, and from the inhabitants of the Presidency of Madras, who were announced by the political aide-de-camp. After presenting the address the head of each deputation had the honour of kissing Her Majesty's hand, and retired.

After the presentation of the addresses Captain Henry Morland and Mr. Charles Lawson received the honour of knighthood.

The Maharaj Sir Pertab Singh, K.C.S I., who was in attendance on the Queen, then offered personal congratulations to Her Majesty on behalf of his brother, his Highness the Maharajah of Jodhpore, G.C.S.I., and requested her acceptance of a small token of his own loyalty and attachment to Her Majesty and her family. The Queen presented a miniature of herself to the Maharaj, who kissed Her Majesty's hand, and returned to his place.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn then presented to Her Majesty the following addresses :—

Large silver and gold casket, containing an address to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress from the inhabitants of Poona, Bombay.

Casket, containing an humble address to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress from the University of Bombay.

An address from the inhabitants of Sanand, in the Zilla of Ahmedabad.

An address from the District Grand Lodge of Bombay and its territories was presented by Mr. Edward Tyrrell Leith, District Grand Master for Bombay.

After which his Royal Highness presented to the Queen the following members of his personal staff :—Lieut.-Colonel Cavage, Major Hannay, Aide-de-Camp ; Captain Herbert, Aide-de-Camp.

Mr. S. Vesey Fitzgerald, C.S.I., then presented to Her Majesty an address from the district of Ajmere-Merwarra, on a shield, in accordance with Rajput custom.

Her Majesty then descended to the Royal entrance in the quadrangle, and his Highness the Thakore Sahib of Morvi rode up and presented to Her Majesty a fully caparisoned charger.

Captain Burne, Assistant Political Aide-de-Camp, assisted by Major Talbot, C.I.E., arranged minor details, and saw that each audience took place in the order given.

ANOTHER ENCOUNTER WITH A TIGER.—Mr. Gibson, Conservator of Forests of the Khandeish district, has been admitted into the European General Hospital, suffering from injuries inflicted by a wounded tigress. It appears that on the 17th May Mr. Gibson shot the tigress. Finding that the shot had not proved fatal, he left it at nightfall and returned next day. On reaching the spot where he had left the wounded brute, he found a Native boy lying upon the ground. On examination he found that the unfortunate lad had been killed by the tigress. While engaged in examining the boy, Mr. Gibson was suddenly attacked by the animal, which mauled him severely about the thigh and right fore-arm. Luckily for him assistance was at hand. A Bheel with a well-aimed ball shot the tigress in the head and despatched her. Colonel Pullen then took charge of Mr. Gibson and sent him down to the hospital. Arriving here, it was found that his injuries, although such as to render his removal to the hospital highly desirable, were not of a very extensive or serious nature. Mr. Gibson has been comfortably lodged in the hospital, and under the skilful treatment of Dr. Baker he is quickly recovering.

AN INCIDENT OF THE CAMPAIGN IN BURMA.—A correspondent, writing from the head-quarters of General Sartorius's command in Upper Burma, mentions an incident which illustrates some of the horrors of a war such as that which has been carried on against the dacoits :—"A Native officer of Colonel Sartorius's regiment getting kubber of the arrival of some dacoits at a village some twelve miles from the new post of Toungmyo, took a handful of men, quietly surrounded the village by night, and killed thirteen of the dacoits, besides wounding a number as they bolted into the jungle. One sepoy was killed and one wounded. It was a grim spectacle which was formed by a group outside the Belooch Mess on the evening of the 5th May, as a number of officers and men of both services stood round the head of one of the dacoits which was brought in for identification as that of an important Boh. The lower jaw had been partially chopped away in the rude process of decapitation ; and the critical air of the regimental surgeon, as he expressed his conviction that the operator did not seem to know how to cut off heads, caused a roar of laughter. A warmly congratulatory telegram has been received by Colonel Sartorius from General Lockhart upon the good work done by the regiment and details under his command."

AFTER-DINNER FROLICS AT SIMLA.—The Simla Argus of the 25th May gives the following account of frolics indulged by a number of gentlemen who seemed to have dined, not wisely, but too well :—"On last Wednesday night seven or eight persons, who had been dining at a house near the Government of India offices, set out on a game of frolic. After promenading the Mall near the Telegraph office, abstracting a ricksha from Messrs. Williams and Co's verandah and endeavouring to smash a lamp-post, in which they were prevented by a policeman, they were seen to enter a neighbouring house. Afterwards the party divided, some going down the way towards the Court House and the other towards Christ Church. The party going down hill smashed a board belonging to the entrance of the Roman Catholic School and also the gateway of Ripon-place. With portions of the latter these men destroyed all the instruments for registering temperature, &c., in the Observatory just below. The names of the parties are known, and it is hoped that they will be brought to justice. The property destroyed is valued at between one hundred and fifty and two hundred rupees."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

The present number of the "National," which is of unusual interest and variety, fittingly opens with an article on "The True Lessons of the Jubilee." It is, as the writer aptly remarks, "something more than a coincidence" that the Jubilee year should have seen, on the "one hand, the alliance of one of the great historical parties of the State with men bent on the disruption of the Empire, and, on the other, the meeting in council of representatives from all the chief colonies of England for the purpose of promoting common Imperial interests." We are reminded that Her Majesty has been the first monarch of the House of Hanover who has not, as though of necessity, been more or less a partisan. To which it may be added, that, during the period of the Regency and of George IV.'s reign, female influence at Court was "conspicuous by its absence," while the personal character of the excellent Queen Adelaide hardly found scope, during her husband's brief reign, to assert itself. Providence seemed, indeed, so to have ordered matters that the period of Victoria's accession should precisely be that at which the personal and political influence of a female Sovereign was especially valuable. And to trace the effect of this double influence, which it has been the glory of the Queen to have exercised solely for the benefit of her people, on the political events of her reign, is the object of a paper which, it is safe to assert, will be read by everyone.

Mr. Leonard West deserves commendation for his unsparing exposure of the Separatist attack on fundamental principles, and for pointing out (p. 705) how entirely the Separatists have departed from the principles of Bentham, who is sometimes quoted on their behalf. As Mr. West says, the great publicist would be not a little startled at being credited with the parentage of some of their doctrines; which he has, indeed, disclaimed almost in so many words. The utter inconsistency and recklessness of the Separatist leader are well shown by Mr. Austin in an effective comparison between him and his great rival, Lord Beaconsfield, under the title "Character and Ability in Politics." Mr. Austin ought, however, to be more exact in his references. It was the Emperor Charles who liberated his prisoner Francis I. of France subsequently to the battle of Pavia; not Philip of Spain (p. 669), for the very sufficient reason that Philip did not ascend the throne of Spain till after the death of Francis;† nor can we acquiesce in Mr. Austin's substitution of "honeste" (p. 672)—which will not fit the metre—for "recte," in the well-worn quotation from Horace's Epistle to Mæcenas.

Mr. Flanagan's paper on "Leasehold Enfranchisement" strikes us as an exceedingly well-argued exposure of the probably injurious results of the measure (advocated by the Radical "tail") even if enacted in a less "anti-landlord" form than has usually been proposed by its supporters. The unsigned article on "Art in Public Schools" contains an account, instructive as well as entertaining, of the writer's experiences in qualifying himself for the profession of a painter. But he has fallen into the error (long since abandoned, as we had hoped, by all thoughtful writers) of making "artist" synonymous with "painter." Surely Phidias was an "Artist" no less than Apelles. The French and Germans use the term in a far wider and truer sense.

A German Resident's account of Alsace and Lorraine, though avowedly written from the Teutonic point of view, will interest all those who intelligently follow foreign politics, and who care to forecast the probable consequences of the death of the King of Holland, on the occurrence of which event the once impregnable Luxemburg, neutralized under the London treaty of 1867, falls to the Duke of Nassau (p. 600), a circumstance, which, the writer thinks, might conceivably lead to the restoration of Metz to France.

Captain Hubert Foster, of the "Sappers," has a short but well thought out paper on Russia's strength and weakness as to war. We think him much too optimistic in underestimating the mischief which Russia, or, indeed, any hostile Power, could inflict on ourselves, an insular people, dependent for three-fourths of our consumption of food-stuffs on the integrity of our transoceanic communications.

Mr. Evershed's paper on Irish Dairy Farming is most suggestive, but touches only the fringe of a subject, the importance of which to the sister island it is difficult to overrate. Dairy farming and poultry breeding, with the possible addition of tobacco cultivation, would be the salvation of Ireland, if the eccentric and perfervid race which inhabit it could, for the first time in its recorded existence, settle down steadily to anything whatever.

We desire, in conclusion, prominently to call the attention of every lady-reader to Miss Twining's excellent article on "Fifty Years of Woman's Work," which will interest everyone.

THE ASIATIC QUARTERLY REVIEW.*

The Jubilee of the Empress-Queen, which all of us have so joyously celebrated, receives due honour in this issue of the Asiatic Quarterly, in the shape of an able retrospect, by Sir R. Temple, of the many and varied occurrences which India has seen, and of the progress which she has made, during the Jubilee reign. Known though the facts be to "every schoolboy," this is one of the "times to speak" once again concerning them. That the British Empire in the East has, during the last half-century, increased by 525,000 square miles, that the population has been augmented, losses from famine notwithstanding, by nearly 80 millions of human beings, are facts of such magnitude that it suffices to mention them in order to fix attention. That the commerce of our splendid Dependency has, during the same period, increased sixfold, that arterial railways have been constructed in almost every direction, that a sustained effort has, for the first time in history, been made to establish satisfactory means of internal communication, thus limiting the area, and mitigating the severity, of future famines, are all pleasing evidences of enlightened government, and of its natural results. Most gratifying of all is the vast and undoubted improvement which the Pax Britannica, and half a century's steady and fairly consistent administration, have wrought in the welfare and prosperity of the mass of the population. The cessation of intestine warfare, the suppression of Thuggee, and, in a great measure, of Dacoity, the encouragement given to social reforms, which have signalised the reign of the Empress-Queen, have been significant marks of advance in the amelioration of the lot of the toiling millions of Hindustan. The burning question of the position of woman yet remains. But much has been accomplished; and the heart of a Briton may reasonably swell with pride when he compares India as it was in 1837 with what it now is.

Yet, even in the Jubilee year, we must not be unduly optimistic; the Roman Consul was attended in his triumph by the sable monitor of death; and the Editor of this Review, doubtless emulating so good an example, and fearful lest, like a certain Apostle, we might be "exalted above measure" by the abundance of our Indian achievements, has thoughtfully provided for us "a thorn in the flesh," in the shape of an article immediately following that of Sir R. Temple, from Professor Arminius Vambéry, on "Central Asian Politics." The worthy Professor shows, in no ambiguous language, that, by the pertinacity and astuteness of the Russians, we have been beaten all along the line: we have lost ground, diplomatically, in every country from Turkey to China. No nation, as all history shows, ever prevailed in the long run by perpetually yielding, or by perpetually standing on the defensive. In no part of the world is this verity more emphatically true than in the East. We have been seen everywhere drawing in our horns, while, no less ubiquitously, the Russian eagles have been seen advancing. It has come to be regarded, not only in Asia, but, alas! (p. 58) in Europe, as a matter of course, that the Briton should recede before the Russ, and we are scarcely "surprised to hear" that the rumour of our having tacitly surrendered Herat, and made the Helmund our future line of defence, has (p. 57) "found credit with Persians, Afghans, and Turks." Of the whole article (which, though unpleasant reading to an Englishman, deserves attentive perusal) perhaps nothing will strike the reader more than the fact (p. 52) that China, for whose friendship we have striven in Burma, and to gratify whom we renounced the mission to Tibet under Mr. Macaulay, has not only shown a "benevolent neutrality" towards Russia in Turkestan, but has allowed a Russian commercial house to do precisely what Mr. Macaulay was prevented undertaking. That Russian gold, with Russian envoys and consuls to distribute it, sown broadcast, may count for something is doubtless true; nor is it less so that the richer country is not the least likely to win in such a game; at which two can well play.

Sir W. W. Hunter's address to the Calcutta University, in his official capacity as its Vice-Chancellor, and Mr. Ginwalla's paper on the Indian Civil Service, are both—the latter directly, the former incidentally—concerned with the vexed question of the employment of Natives in the higher grades of the Government service. The problem—what to do with our Native graduates when we have made them, is rendered the more difficult by the circumstance that the training which they have received has been purely academical and unpractical, or, as Sir R. Temple mildly puts it (p. 35), "too exclusively literary and philosophic." Mr. Ginwalla, recognising the deficiencies of the Native mind,† proposes (p. 220) the establishment of a Covenanted Civil Service solely for Natives, who should hold all lower-grade appointments, but should no longer compete for the Indian Civil Service in England, though they should be required to pass a couple of years in that country before entering on active duty. There are obvious difficulties in the working of such a scheme; not the least of which would be that it would, probably, not find favour with the very people to benefit whom it is designed; but the paper merits attention as an original suggestion towards the settlement of a difficult question.

In an entertaining narrative, Professor R. K. Douglas reminds us that the Chinese can keep a Jubilee as gorgeously as the Outer Barbarians. Nay, in 1790, they beat us, for their Emperor was eighty years old, and had reigned (as, Inshallah, may Victoria reign!) fifty-five years. The Professor's account of the festivities will well repay perusal.

The Dragon, the effigy of which is literally omnipresent in China, has played a most important part in Asiatic mythologies. This is well brought out in Miss E. M. Clerke's learned article on the "Dragon Myths in the East," which testifies to a very extensive and minute acquaintance, on the part of the fair writer, with the literature of this recondite subject.

The two remaining papers, Mr. Hutton's on the well-known "brothers Shirley" of Wiston, in Sussex (long the seat of the Gorings), and that edited by Mr. Boulger, on "Early English Voyages to Chusan," are chiefly of antiquarian interest. The latter, drawn, it would seem, from the India Office Records, though of great length, may be summed up in the words:—Extortion on the part of the Chinese, long suffering on the part of the merchants.

THE FALL OF THE MOGHUL EMPIRE OF HINDUSTAN.*

Mr. Keene is one of the very few writers whose works on Eastern subjects are widely read by the public. Nor should this occasion surprise, for his style is vigorous, his language is polished, and his narrative clear; hence the need of a third edition of his well-known work—the best extant—on the "Fall of the Moghul Empire," now published in a neat compact volume, suitable for the travelling-bag if not for the pocket. It is, perhaps, needless to refer to the marvellous tale of the unrivalled rise, and unparalleled decline, of one of the finest Empires in the annals of the East. All who wish to know anent this strange and fascinating history have read Mr. Keene's work in its earlier editions; but to the rising generation, who have yet to learn, we would commend to their notice a volume as haply in its language as it is fascinating in its story—a work calculated to instruct, interest, and charm.

"Good as usual" contains in a few words the monthly criticism on the Century Illustrated Monthly Magazine. Perhaps the best amongst the many good things in the number is the article on "Locomotion," illustrated by diagrams; but there is an immense deal of interesting reading, and all the pictures are excellent.

The Art Journal for July contains a magnificent engraving of Koller's celebrated picture of the Emperor Mamimilian and Albert Durer. At Jubilee time the "Queen's dogs" will be sure to find many an admirer; while the friends of Sir Walter Scott will meet with plenty to interest them in the chapter which treats of the immortal novelist's country.

A STRANGE MEAL.

A correspondent signing himself "Rana" sends the Madras Mail the following interesting communication:—

"To such of your readers as may be interested in snakes and their ways, I send the following account of an incident which came under my notice this afternoon. I have had in my possession for the last three months a large specimen of the common green treesnake (Passerita myeterizans). Up till to-day he has persistently refused food of any kind, so that he must latterly have felt somewhat 'peckish.' Confined along with him in the same cage was an example—about eighteen inches in length—of the pretty green striped snake (Tropidonotus stolatus) so common in our compounds during the wet season. A number of live frogs having been placed in the cage the snakes simultaneously seized hold of one of these, the tree snake caught hold of the head and the smaller snake held on to one of the hind legs. In a very short time their noses met over the back of the unfortunate amphibian. The small snake now appeared to see that he had gone too far, and a wicked look in the eye of his opponent probably made him sensible of his danger. At any rate, he made violent efforts to disgorge his share of the bonne bouche, but the slight backward inclination of his teeth appeared to prevent a successful withdrawal. A few gulps more, and both the frog and the head of the Tropidonotus had passed into the mouth of the tree snake. Then began a battle short and furious. The little fellow coiled his body several times around the neck of his opponent, and made a gallant attempt to strangulate him. But in vain; brute force prevailed. Slowly but surely his body commenced its downward journey, and in about five minutes an elongated swelling in the stomachic region of Passerita indicated the last resting-place of the two victims. Although the fact is well-known that certain snakes, e.g., the Hamadryad, habitually feed on other snakes, yet I do not think that instances of a harmless snake accidentally swallowing another can be of common occurrence."

OBITUARY.

MAJOR-GENERAL HERBERT RABAN.—The death is announced of Major-General Herbert Raban, retired Bengal, Staff Corps. The deceased officer, who was born in 1820, arrived in India in March, 1841. He had previously entered Exeter College, Oxford, and took his B.A. degree many years later while on furlough. His first service was with the army of the Sutlej, and he was present at the battle of Aliwal in 1845. His principal employment was, however, in connection with the police, and he filled several responsible posts in Sylhet and also at Calcutta till he at last attained the grade of Deputy Inspector-General. He was twice employed as private secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, first in 1857 and again in 1865. He retired from the service in 1875.

THE Maharajah of Jodhpore has given a donation of £10,000 to the Imperial Institute through his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

ALL smokers, but especially Anglo-Indians, will be delighted to hear that Messrs. Bewlay and Co, the well-known tobacconists, have for some years past devoted their attention to the importation of Trichinopoly cigars and cheroots from Madras, and Burma cheroots and Lunkahs. The encouragement Messrs. Bewlay's agents have given to the Native manufacturers, both in Madras and Burma, has led to a very marked increase in this industry, and also greater care in the manufacture of Tricnes and Lunkahs. Anglo-Indians who have not visited Bewlay's should do so, as here they will find a very choice collection of all their old favourites, including the finest brands of Manilla cheeroots and cigars. A very pleasant half-hour may be spent at this establishment, which has more smoking reminiscences attached to it than any other house now existing. Bewlay's shag, the historical tobacco par excellence, has been supplied by the firm to three generations of smokers, including that prince of smokers, H.R.H. the late Duke of Sussex, and can still be obtained at the same old establishment, which is situated in what the late Lord Beaconsfield termed "the most interesting street in London."

ROBURITE, THE NEW EXPLOSIVE.—We have much pleasure to announce that Roburite, which is one of the most powerful of modern explosives, and possessing at the same time the elements of absolute safety, is likely very soon to come into general use. A company has been formed, with a board of directors, whose names are so well-known, both in the commercial and scientific world, as to be a guarantee for the bonâ fides of the enterprise. Roburite is the invention of Dr. Carl Roch, one of the public analysts of Berlin, who, after repeated experiments, has succeeded in perfecting this explosive, which has been proved to possess greater and more effective power for mining purposes than dynamite, gun-cotton, or similar explosives, possessing at the same time the elements of absolute safety. Roburite has passed the severe scrutiny of the Scientific Investigation Department of the German Patent Office as "New and Original." The factory at Rüdersdorff, Berlin, has lately been visited by Mr. C. Napier Hake, late chief assistant to Professor Dupré, of the Explosives Department, Home Office, who writes:—"I would add that from experiments I myself have witnessed at the works at Rüdersdorf, and from those carried out under Mr. Bainbridge's superintendence at Witten, I am of opinion that Roburite is undoubtedly a most powerful explosive, having at the same time the advantage of being exceptionally inert under ordinary conditions. Roburite consists of two non-explosive harmless substances, and perfectly safe to handle without fear of accident from either concussion, fire, or friction, it requiring a specially powerful fulminate detonater to cause its explosion. The amount of noxious gases produced on explosion of Roburite is infinitesimal, and when exploded as a mining charge emits no spark or flame capable of igniting either fire-damp or coal dust." Mr. E. Bainbridge, the eminent mining engineer, thus sums up his report:—"Roburite is an explosive of great value, according to the experiments which have been made with it in the brief time it has been before the mining world. Its special features are:—(a) the safety with which it can be handled; (b) the special means which are required to explode it; (c) the flameless character of its explosion when used for mining: (d) the improvement it appears to give over powder in producing large coal. Such an undertaking should have not only a commercial success, but prove a safe investment." Already a large number of applications have been received for shares.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 4, 1887.

INDIAN PRINCES IN ENGLAND.

THIRTY years ago one of those brilliant men who helped to make the reputation of the Calcutta Review by discussing therein Indian questions from the standpoints of sympathy and experience wrote :—

To the Government we would suggest, with all humility, the adoption of a practice which, recommended as it is by reason and endorsed by history, we cannot but wonder it has so long overlooked. We would recommend that it takes a leaf from the book of Roman polity and practice in dealing with the upper ten thousand of Native Indian society. Native princes and noblemen and men of independent fortune should be invited, encouraged, urged, we had almost written forced, to go to England. They would there behold in all its majesty the spectacle of English power and science and refinement. They would there learn the utter worthlessness of Indian prejudice and pride; the utter insignificance of Indian pomp and pageantry. With opened eyes and awakened understandings they would return to their own country humbler, wiser, and better men. They would return to be firmer allies, truer and more active friends, more intelligent citizens and more loyal subjects. They would return with weakened prejudice and heightened and more sagacious appreciation to teach their subjects, their associates and their dependents the goodly lesson they had learnt, and to lay the foundation of and pave the way for that general awakening and enlightenment of the Indian people which we all so fervently desire.

When this was written the storm of the great Mutiny had burst, but its dark clouds were still over the land, and the advice tendered fell on listless ears. And to many who then read it it must have seemed as the sentimental philosophy of some Utopian dreamer which was beyond the region of possibilities. It even now, perhaps, reads as hoping too much for the experiment it recommends, for it takes for granted that the nature of the Oriental visitor to these shores is susceptible of receiving and retaining all the good impressions which such a visit might offer to his mind. But allowing for the sanguine aspirations of the writer, and forgiving some of his enthusiasm, it seems strange that the experiment has remained almost untried until now. The event of Her Majesty's Jubilee has, however, afforded an opportunity which has wisely been taken advantage of, and the presence of the Maharaja Holkar and other Indian Princes in England to-day is an historical fact of no little significance. Whether the coming of the Ruler of Indore was the result of his own spontaneous wish, it boots us not to inquire; the fact is that he is here, and there is a probability that some others of the powerful chiefs of India may follow him to English soil. The matter is one which gives cause for congratulation even if it involves some anxiety as to the future. But it certainly should not be regarded, as certain ultra-Radical writers have pretended to regard it, as one fraught with danger to our distinguished Indian visitors and ourselves. Writing with the audacity of ignorance regarding India and everything pertaining to it, one journalist tells his readers that the effect of this visit to England will be to upset the minds of these Indian chiefs, souring them with discontent, for they will return to find themselves lowered in the eyes of their own peoples by the contamination with English habits and ceremonies. It has been pointed out that their presence in Westminster Abbey, taking part in a Christian service of prayer and thanksgiving, will in India be interpreted to their prejudice, will weaken their hold over their subjects, and stir up the latter to intense hatred against British rule. A more vicious and uncalled-for assertion could hardly be penned, and although the whole tenor of the article is of an evidently political party bias, and written for party purposes, it is mischievous in its conclusions, if innocent in its intentions. It is, unfortunately, however, no new thing for Englishmen to-day to attempt to drag the good name of England through certain gutters of journalism. The "friends of every country but their own" are, it is well to know, in a minority, and their influence for evil is infinitesimal here. And although the seditious stuff which they bring forth may reach India, and be repeated in some of the vernacular papers there, little harm will, we imagine, be done. We have said that the experiment of this visit of the Indian Princes is one which involves some anxiety, for it brings a responsibility to bear upon our statesmen and upon ourselves as Englishmen. We are glad to find the able editor of the well-conducted Review, the Asiatic Quarterly, touching upon the subject as he does in the current number of that periodical. After pointing out how much it is to the credit of these Indian nobles to have crossed the ocean to testify their loyalty in their own persons in spite of prejudices and many heavy social and other discomforts, he admits that it is an experiment which is involved in their visit—but an experiment which all Englishmen must wish should succeed. "But this," he adds, "is a question of hopeful anticipation rather than absolute certainty. Sympathy may be alienated by trifles as well as by grave political shortcomings. It is to the interest of both the Indian Princes and ourselves that no contretemps should occur, that they should see the best side of English life and English character, and that they should go back to India with the knowledge that the real strength of the Anglo-Indian administration lies in its drawing its resources from the inexhaustible supply of an energetic, vigorous, and courageous people. On the other hand, it is to our advantage to recognise that princes like Maharaja Holkar have their useful place in the organisation of Indian rule, and that to bring them into closer sympathy with ourselves, and to combine their resources with our own, would be a high feat of statescraft."

Such a feat is worthy of every effort which can be made to accomplish it, and ought to command, as it deserves, success.

LOSS OF THE P. AND O. STEAMER "TASMANIA."

On the 27th ult. the official inquiry into the loss of the steamship Tasmania, which was wrecked on the Monachi Rocks, off the South Coast of Corsica, on April 17 last, was commenced at the Sessions House, Westminster, before the Wreck Commissioner, Mr. Rothery. Dr. Raikes and Mr. Baden-Powell appeared for the Board of Trade; the P. and O. Steamship Company (the owners of the Tasmania) were represented by Mr. Charles Hall, Q.C., and Mr. Mansel Jones; Mr. Kennedy, Q.C., and Mr. Sceales attended on behalf of some forty passengers of the vessel; and Mr. Myburgh, Q.C., and Mr. Howard Smith represented the officers of the Tasmania.

Dr. Raikes opened the case for the Board of Trade, and Mr. Edwin William De Russett, naval architect to the P. and O. Company, gave evidence as to the construction of the Tasmania and her equipment. Evidence was also given with respect to the officers and crew, a denial being given to the suggestion that the captain was in bad health William J. B. Watkins, chief officer of the Tasmania, deposed that he held a master's certificate, and was chief officer of the Tasmania on her last voyage from Bombay. She was loaded with a general cargo, 144 passengers, and the homeward Indian mails. The vessel went through the Straits of Messina to the Straits of Bonifacio. He took observations at half-past five on the evening prior to the accident. They were then on the east side of Sardinia. He entered the result of the observations in the deck log-book, but had now no memorandum of them. His watch terminated at 8 P.M. on the 16th, and he was due again at four o'clock on the morning of the 17th. The vessel was steered by a Thompson compass from the "flying" bridge. They had boat drill on the morning of the 16th, and by the rules of the ship an officer was told off to each boat. At the time he left the deck at eight o'clock all the ports were open on both sides. The ship was then fifty or sixty miles outside the Straits of Bonifacio. He did not remember what course they were steering when he left the deck. He was called for his watch at four A.M., and just as he was called the ship struck. He immediately went on the bridge, but did not notice the lights or the land. As a matter of fact he knew where the ship was. The commander of the ship was then cool and collected, and was not suffering from bad health. The usual signals of distress were given. Half-an-hour after he got on deck the vessel had a strong list to port. When it became impossible to launch the boats on that side the boats on the starboard side were lowered. This operation was only carried out with great difficulty, as the boats weighed three tons each, and everything had to be done by hand. The lifeboat was lowered with second, third, and fourth officers in her. There was also in the boat Mr. Andrews, the supernumerary officer, and some of the engineers. The lifeboat left the ship at one minute to eight. The Earl of Buckinghamshire was on the second raft, which was made on deck, when it was swept overboard by a heavy sea. He managed to regain the ship, but the serang of the Lascars was drowned. Soon afterwards the captain was swept away by a heavy sea, and although the witness, with the aid of some of the passengers, nearly succeeded in rescuing him, they were struck by a succession of heavy seas, and the captain was washed overboard. The other passengers, who had taken refuge in the smoking-room, included two ladies, who would not leave their husbands. Early on the morning of the 18th a steam yacht, the Norseman, came up and sent two boats to them. A French steamer afterwards came up.—By Mr. Kennedy: The captain was not more or less indisposed during the voyage. He knew that articles of value were found upon the stewards which belonged to passengers. Dr. Raikes submitted that such evidence was not necessary.—Mr. Hall said that on behalf of the company he was most anxious the charge should be inquired into.—Examination continued by Mr. Kennedy: He knew of one case in which jewellery was taken from the stewards which had been found on board. The witness had ultimately found a great many of the things which it was at first supposed had been plundered. Before he obtained protection from the French Government robbers from Sardinia and Corsica visited the steamer and looted it.—By Mr. Hall: It was not true that several of the officers looted the cabins. It was untrue that he (the witness) was almost deserted by the crew after the loss of the captain. Considering the trying circumstances, good discipline was maintained throughout. In his opinion they had sufficient Europeans on board the vessel to navigate it properly.

William J. B. Watkins, the first officer of the Tasmania, was again called on the 28th ult., and, in answer to Mr. Hall, Q.C., on behalf of the company, said that the accounts of pilfering by the stewards were greatly exaggerated. There were only one or two cases. Witness stated that when they got on board the company's steamer from the wreck all the stewards were searched. Only one, a man named Donne, was found to have anything of value on him, and that was a lady's gold bracelet. There were many thousands of pounds worth of property lying about the saloons, but nothing had been touched. The reason that all the port boats were smashed was that a very heavy sea continually washed over the deck, and the vessel rolled considerably.—Cross-examined by Mr. Baden-Powell witness said he had been through the Straits of Bonifacio before, but he did not remember having seen the light. When witness went on deck after the vessel had struck the beacon light on the Monarchi rocks was about fifty yards distant. In reply to Mr. Myburgh, witness spoke in high terms of the four officers. He thought the officers had no difficulty in getting their orders carried out by the Lascars. Re-examined by Mr. Baden-Powell, witness said that he did not enter upon the navigation of the Straits with the master. In reply to the Wreck Commissioner, witness said the second, third, and fourth officers and Mr. Andrews, a supernumerary officer, were on the lifeboat. The second officer had orders to go on shore and telegraph for assistance. Mr. Andrews could perfectly well have brought the boat back, and the third and fourth officers were therefore unnecessary. He called the third and fourth officers out of the boat, but they did not leave it. He considered that three Lascars would do the work of two Europeans. He had not been through the Straits of Bonifacio before in the Tasmania, but had been through the Straits four or five times in other vessels.

Mr. John Richard Budd Curtis, the second officer, in reply to Dr. Raikes, said that he held an extra master's certificate. His watch was from 12 P.M. to 4 A.M., and he relieved the third officer. He saw in the log book that observations had been taken to ascertain the errors in the compass. Witness was then examined at length upon memoranda he had made of the course the Tasmania steered on the day of the accident. Witness continued:—The captain told him what course to take about 3·20, and then went first into the chart room, and thence to the cabin, but he had not come on deck again between that time and 3·30. He did not give witness any particular instructions before going below. Some time during the watch the captain had asked witness to go into the chart room and loook at the sailing directions for the purpose of reading about the Monarchi rocks.

The captain remarked that the course he had laid down would take the ship about three miles off the Monarchi beacon. Since the disaster he had marked the course off on the chart and found it would bring them within two or two and a quarter miles of the beacon. As they were going through the Straits the weather became very dark. They always had a European at the helm. Quartermaster Bruce was on the lookout in the forecastle head from two to four; a Lascar was with him. Quartermaster Hall relieved him at four o'clock. There were a Lascar and a man at the wheel on the bridge with witness. A few minutes before the ship struck, Hall, who had just relieved Bruce, called out, "Breakers ahead." Witness gave the order to starboard the helm, but the order was not obeyed, and the man at the wheel said he had not heard the order. The ship struck immediately after. When he felt her strike he stopped the engines. She struck at three minutes past four. After the vessel struck the captain was the first to come on the bridge. The captain then took charge and put the engines full speed astern. The ship was bumping heavily, but did not come off the rocks. The captain seemed quite self-possessed. Witness went into the lifeboat to take charge of it by the captain's orders. The captain showed him the chart and pointed out the best course to take. Witness's orders were to be careful, to get the passengers on shore, and as soon as possible obtain assistance. The boat was to be sent back. About twenty men were lowered in the boat. The third and fourth officers and Andrews were in the boat also. Witness asked the third officer why he was on the boat, and was told that the captain had given him orders to go with it. After the boat was lowered the passengers were passed in. The captain was at the top of the gangway, and the chief officer about half-way down the ladder helping the people. He heard the captain and the chief officer call out, "Some of you come out of the boats," and then they called out for the third and fourth officers to come out. The engineers who were in the boat got out, but the third and fourth officers did not. Witness heard the captain tell the third officer to stay where he was; what was said subsequently to the fourth witness could not say. There were about seventy-two souls on board the boat, including about twelve or fourteen of the crew. They could only work six oars. If the order to starboard the helm had been obeyed he did not think it would have made much difference in the result. The captain, considering, was not flurried or dazed. The crew all behaved very well; the Lascars especially. He thought the Lascars were better sailors in the emergency than English sailors. If he had a choice to-morrow between the English and a Lascar crew he would prefer to go to sea with the Lascars. He found no fault with the compasses. He attributed the accident to the current. It was not true that when the lifeboat landed the crew dropped their oars and ran away. They helped the ladies out. The statement that after she struck the captain was utterly dazed, almost helpless, and quite incapable of taking his proper place, was false and unfair. The discipline of the crew throughout from the time the vessel ran ashore was very good.

On the 29th the Wreck Commissioner, addressing Mr. Hall, the counsel for the P. and O. Company, said the evidence given the previous day by the second officer was very important, and as the captain was not there, and he was not represented, it was incumbent upon the Court to watch the case very carefully on his behalf. The character of the captain was as valuable to his friends as the character of the second mate was to himself. It appeared to him (the Commissioner) that the character of the captain was also especially valuable to the company themselves, because if it was proved that the casualty was due in any way to the incompetency of the captain there would be some blame attached to the company. It was extraordinary that the captain, whom they had every reason to believe was a man of experience, should have set a double course of 12 deg. N. instead of the proper course, which was a straight one. The second officer had stated that he set the course by the direction of the captain, and it was for them to determine whether the captain actually gave that order, or whether the second officer set that course on his own responsibility. The second mate had also stated that the place of actual danger was in the boats, and it was, therefore, the right place for the third and fourth officers. He (the Commissioner) wished to know why, if that was the case, did the captain place the women and children in the boats instead of keeping them on the ship. Mr. Myburgh said that he was directed to represent the captain and the officers, both living and dead, and he should take care that no injustice was done.

Mr. H. R. Richardson was then called, and said he was a passenger on board the Tasmania; on the night of the wreck he saw one of the boats adrift with no one in it, and he jumped overboard and got in. He drifted near the ship for some time, and attempted to pick some one out of the water. He afterwards drifted towards the shore. Frederick Fagg said he was a quartermaster on the Tasmania, and on the night of the wreck was on duty at the wheel. The captain told him to set a course of N. 65 W., and while the captain was below the second officer told him to alter it to N. 55 W. The captain afterwards told him to port 5 degrees. The commissioner said that he had been making out the course given by the second officer and Quartermaster Fagg, and he had found that the course being altered to 12 degrees N. was the cause of the vessel running on the rocks. Robert Leslie, the chief engineer, said it was absolutely false that the captain was "dazed," or that he was incompetent to do his duty. Perfect discipline was maintained on board.

On the 30th ult. Walter Henry Darton, carpenter of the Tasmania, stated that at half-past three o'clock on the morning of the accident he received orders to close the ports as far as the saloon galley; and, having carried out the order, he turned in. He was awakened by the ship striking the rocks. He then took soundings and found three feet of water in the forehold, five feet in the main, and three feet in the afthold. Five minutes afterwards he found from 18 feet to 20 feet of water in the forehold. The mail boat drifted off, and seeing this witness jumped overboard, and, with the doctor, was hauled in. Afterwards the boat took on board a number of ladies, and these with children were landed. An attempt to re-launch the boat was unsuccessful, as she became embedded in the sand. The jolly-boat, coming from the port side of the vessel, landed shortly before the mail boat, a little to the eastward. An attempt to reach the ship by means of the lifeboat was unsuccessful through her not having her full complement of crew. George Cook, quartermaster, said that at half-past three on the morning of the disaster he heard the captain tell the carpenter to shut the port holes. By direction of the captain he took soundings, and he reported to the engine-room that the vessel's speed was 13 knots. That was the speed of the vessel when she struck. After the striking, witness, by order of the captain, fired off 14 rockets and a number of patent signals. He then assisted in getting off the boats, and when the boats were despatched, in making rafts. He spent the whole of the night on deck, and with the chief steward was the only European who did so. The night was very cold, and he and the chief steward huddled together, covering their heads with a blanket. In the morning he saw about 16 of the natives lying about dead. Cross-examined—The captain was very active in securing the safety and comfort of his passengers and crew, and was fully capable of doing his duty. He did not see any Europeans come out of the smoking-room during the night in order to allow some of the Lascars to enter. Mr. Henry William Powell, surgeon of the Tasmania, stated that the captain was suffering from the fever of the country when he was at Bombay, but he had recovered when he was north of the Canal, and was perfectly competent to manage the ship.

Mr. T. H. Steward, first-class passenger, said he had a berth on the starboard side, and was awakened by the bumping of the vessel. He went on deck and returned and dressed himself. He went on deck again with a bag of sovereigns in his hand. Most of the natives went up into the rigging until three o'clock in the afternoon. He saw two Africans in a state of stupor, and they made no attempt to keep up circulation, but lay about like dogs. He did not think the Lascar crew acted as they ought to have done. After the wreck he went into his cabin, and found that one of his portmanteaus was missing and others had been opened, and also a despatch box. Articles had also been taken from his drawers, principally jewellry. He knew that the missing portmanteau had been broken open, because he saw two of the passengers wearing coats which had been in it. In fact, he believed orders had been given to persons to go down and get things to keep them warm.

THE AMIR'S POSITION.

The Allahabad paper, in a leading article reviewing the state of affairs in Afghanistan, says:—The position at the present moment is that undoubtedly a large body of the southern Ghilzais are in revolt, and that the Amir has not moved sufficient troops into the disturbed districts to enable his officers even to check the rebellion, though of late he has sent further reinforcements to Ghazni; that he himself is still at Kabul with a large force of picked troops, and that his presence there holds the northern Ghilzais in check. His chances of success have to be calculated on the basis that the troops about him remain loyal, and here we have the real danger that menaces him. There are many Ghilzais among his regular troops, and upon their loyalty he must stand or fall. So far we have not heard of desertions at Kabul itself or at Ghazni, but rumours have come of men deserting Gholam Hyder Orakzai, at Mukur. If the Amir can for the next few weeks keep his Ghilzai troops together, and with the men of other tribes gain any striking success, he may weather the storm; but the revolt of even a few hundred Ghilzai regulars would probably set all the northern clans in arms from Laghman to Ghazni, and then the end could not be far distant. Abdur Rahman may know his own strength better than we in India know it—he certainly shows no want of confidence so far; but we cannot overlook the danger which threatens him from a general rising among so powerful a tribe as the Ghilzais. That the present rebellion is in any way a fanatical one we are certainly not prepared to admit; it owes its origin solely to the tyrannical mode of government adopted by the Amir; he has tried the temper of the Ghilzais too severely, and the southern sections of the tribe, with their warlike instincts, are making a desperate effort to overthrow his authority. The fact of his being the protégé of the British Government has in no way inspired the insurgents to rebellion; they have even sought to enlist the sympathy of the Government of India in their behalf; but all the same the disturbances in Eastern Afghanistan cannot fail to react powerfully on our policy towards Afghanistan. We are not likely to move a man to help the Amir, as we should by interference run the risk of reviving the distrust and hatred of a large section of the people of Afghanistan, which we have been at such pains to allay since the campaigns of 1878-80. What our cause of action may be if Abdur Rahman succumbs to the rebellion, and anarchy threatens Afghanistan, is another and a wider question. It is linked with the possible action of that rival European Power in Central Asia which desires nothing better than to see the present Amir overthrown, and the northern provinces of Afghanistan freed for the moment from the control of a central authority at Kabul.

THE moonsoon is so far very weak. In eastern and northern India complaints of want of rain are beginning to be heard, especially in the North-Western Provinces.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

THE

AND

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING COMPANY'S

SYSTEMS OF

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle on-Tyne,
May 25, 1887.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

(Signed) LAMB AND ARMSTRONG, Architects.

To the Secretary of the Æolus Waterspray Company.

EXTRACTS.

THE COMPANY'S EXTRACTS are manufactured on a new principle, which yields products of the very best quality.

"Normal" Food Extract is superior to most, if not all, other Meat Extracts, owing to its richness in stimulating and restorative properties. It contains, as shown by analysis, less ash and water, and more substances soluble in alcohol, and more nitrogenous compounds than the best known Extracts.

THE

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

Passengers Homeward are received on arrival at the various docks by the representatives of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND Co., and especial attention is paid to Ladies, Children, and Invalids.

MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND Co.'s clerks meet the steamers of the P. and O. and other Lines, on arrival at Plymouth, Gravesend, and the Docks, to receive instructions and render such assistance as passengers may require.

Passengers' Baggage and Packages not immediately required may be stored in a dry Warehouse kept for that purpose, at a moderate rent, and facilities are afforded for examination when desired.

Goods, Baggage, and Parcels of every description are received for despatch to all parts of the world, or cleared and forwarded to their destination, in accordance with instructions.

Forms of Declaration for Customs and Insurance are furnished on application.

DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS.

The reputation of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS, originally introduced into England by the SOLE AGENTS, Messrs. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established, and the success of their enterprise has surpassed their expectations. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS afford the only instance hitherto attained of the perfect representation of real Diamonds by artificial means. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real Diamonds of great value at the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense to imitations. They attracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grand monde and élite of society, and are now worn at the Court Balls and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for intermixing with and replacing parures and other costly Diamond Ornaments, and can be worn at all times with confidence and security.

Every article is Mounted in 18-Carat Gold by the best Diamond Setters, exactly in the manner of the finest Brazilian Diamonds.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA,

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 Gt. Russell St., W.C.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons Justice purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

THE course of instruction is designed to PREPARE BOYS (Sons of Gentlemen, from 7 years of age) to occupy the positions of Land Owners and Occupiers, Land Agents, Surveyors, intending Colonists, &c. The education secured at this institution is of a very superior character, the whole object of the School being to impart a thoroughly practical and scientific knowledge of all agricultural subjects; a thorough moral, intellectual, and physical training, it pledges itself to send forth its pupils practically religious and sound scholars. The school is most pleasantly situated in a healthy locality. The greatest possible care is bestowed upon the health and domestic comfort of the pupils. The diet is excellent and unlimited. The school is very strongly recommended. References throughout Great Britain.—Address for prospectus the PRINCIPAL, Maypole Road, East Grinstead, Sussex.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scene from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 11, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 21st June; from Allahabad and Madras to the 19th June; and from Calcutta to the 18th June.

IN commemoration of the Jubilee anniversary of Her Majesty the 21st June was appointed in a Gazette Extraordinary to be observed as a holiday for the Armies of India.

A SALUTE of fifty guns was fired at daybreak from all forts and batteries from which salutes are usually fired. A release of military prisoners in the European and Native forces took place, and all regimental prisoners and defaulters in both services were excused further punishment.

THE Secretary of State having been pleased, on the recommendation of the Government of India, to sanction an increase of fifty appointments to the Second Class of the Order of British India, the increased establishment will stand as follows:—Bengal, including Punjab Frontier Force, Hyderabad Contingent, and Local Corps, 1st Class, 88; 2nd Class, 118. Madras, 53 and 63; and Bombay, 34 and 44.

LORD CONNEMARA unveiled the Queen's statue at Madras on the evening of June 20th amid much enthusiasm. Addressing the vast crowds present, he said he felt it his business to mention that there was no foundation for recent disquieting rumours of war on the North-West Frontier. Madras was brilliantly illuminated at night.

THE Government of India, in a Gazette Extraordinary, acknowledge their cordial recognition of the distinguished manner in which the army in Upper Burma has acquitted itself during a series of arduous and protracted operations.

THE distribution of a medal and gratuity to the troops is also announced.

SEVERAL severe engagements have taken place in Burma.

IN one encounter between a troop of the 3rd Madras Light Cavalry and a band of marauders from the Popa hills 193 dacoits were left dead on the field.

BEFORE coming to a final determination on the question of the execution of decrees for the restitution of conjugal rights the Government of India has sent a letter to the local Governments to ascertain their opinions on the subject.

THE incoming mail last week arrived forty-four hours after contract time, having been hove-to sixty-six hours to avoid running into a cyclone.

SHE, however, met with bad weather, and lost two boats and had several others damaged.

THE Murree Theatre was destroyed by fire on the evening of June 18th. The damage is estimated at Rs. 30,000.

EXTENSIVE defalcations have been discovered in the Bombay Paper Currency office; and a Eurasian named Thomas, who was in charge of the lost note department, has been arrested.

RAI BAHADUR THANAKOTI MUDALIAR, a wealthy citizen of Madras, having offered Rs. 20,000 towards some public object in connection with the Jubilee, the Governor has suggested its application to the purchase of a library for the Victoria Technical Institute.

H.H. THE NIZAM gave a banquet in honour of the Queen's Jubilee.

HER HIGHNESS THE BEGUM OF BHOPAL has subscribed Rs. 10,000 to the Imperial Institute.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has ordered the extension to the Punjab Chief Court of the rule under which officiating vacancies in High Courts when judges take privilege leave are not to be filled up.

SIR WILLIAM COMER PETHERAM, Chief Justice at Calcutta, contemplates leave of absence for one month with effect from the 22nd July to enable him to go to Europe. Sir Comer, on the expiration of this month's leave, enjoys the two months' High Court annual vacation.

THE Government Gazette notified the appointment of Mr. P. M. Mehta and Mr. K. T. Telang to be members of the Bombay Legislative Council. This is Mr. Telang's second term of office.

THE Nawab Nawazish Ali Khan, Kizilbash of Lahore, has been appointed Additional Member of the Legislative Council in connection with the Punjab Land Bills. He is a landholder and Fellow of the Lahore University.

THE Calcutta Chamber of Commerce have elected the Hon. Mr. Robert Steel their President in the place of Mr. Turner, who was called home last week on urgent private affairs.

IN order to bring the Sind-Sagar Railway into direct communication with the main line of the North-Western system it is contemplated to bridge the river at Mooltan. This would materially increase the strategic value of the frontier railways east of the Indus.

THE fast of the Ramazan does not seem so far to have had the effect of promoting any outburst of fanaticism among the Ghilzai insurgents. The latest reports from Kandahar show no spread of rebellion in the Maruf district, where the Amir's troops are still very dilatory in their movements.

THE Amir's troops from Jellalabad, assisted by Khugiani and Momund levies, have had some skirmishes with the Shinwaris lately; but the fighting has been of a very desultory character. From Kandahar it is reported that the Tokhi Ghilzais and the Alikozais came into collision recently at Jaldak, south of Khelat-i-Ghilzai. There was no decisive result, but the Alikozais lost seventeen killed and wounded.

THE rebellious Ghilzais assert that the Ghilzai troops at Herat have mutinied, and are en route to join them. The Amir's General at Maruf, and the Afghan officials generally, most positively deny the truth of this assertion.

THE road from Kandahar to Cabul is closed.

THE Limbin Prince, who recently surrendered to the Civil Officer with the Shan column, has been deported to Lower Burma.

AN example has been made by Subadar Sheik Aulum, of the 3rd Madras Cavalry, of a large band of dacoits in the Myingyan country. With a party of his regiment he came upon the enemy in open ground and killed no less than 193. Such a loss has seldom been inflicted on the wary dacoits, and is the more satisfactory as the time when Cavalry can work effectively must be very nearly at a close.

THE Court-Martial at Poona has acquitted Lieutenant Way of the Bombay Staff Corps of the charge on which he was recently tried; but that officer is now to be tried for borrowing money on the security of a subordinate of his and failing to meet the liability.

THE cost of either doubling or converting to broad-gauge the Rajputana-Malwa Railway has been found to be so great that it is questionable whether it will not be a wiser policy to make a new broad-gauge line from Godhra, on the Bombay-Baroda line, northwards through the heart of Central India, thus giving Bombay direct broad-guage communication with the Punjab. This line would open up a large tract of country that is now completely without railway communication of any kind, and it is much favoured in Bombay.

The net increase in the value of imports was Rs. 19,12,778, and there was an increase in every item in the list, with the exception of yarns and textile fabrics, which show a decrease of upwards of thirteen lakhs. In exports the net increase was Rs. 32,70,649, and here again every item shows an increase, with the exception of chemicals, drugs, medicines, narcotics, and dyeing and tanning materials, which show decrease of upwards of seventeen lakhs.

THE ENGLISH POLICY.—The English are not so much indebted to their mothers as they are indebted to India. India gives them the means of livelihood. By means of commerce the English are the wealthiest nation in the world, although they are natives of a small island. They have not such facilities for commerce elsewhere as they have in India. But India is not so happy under them as others are. If the English had feelings of gratitude and no selfishness they would have been anxious to do good to India. But the British Lion is the slave of fear. He considers 250 millions of Indian people as insects. The native princes and sirdars are to him small fry, for they are all loyal. The English have no fear of losing India. There is scarcely anything which they have not done to please the colonies. A conference was lately held with the colonial representatives, and it was resolved to assist all the colonies. But no mention was made of India. Neither was any representative taken from India. India will forever please and support England, and the English will drain away everything from India, for they do not fear India.—The Bangabasi.

Notes of the Week.

ANOTHER able and distinguished Anglo-Indian has gone over to the majority; the Hon. Sir Ashley Eden is dead. On Monday last we announced that he had been seized with a serious illness, but although some hope was entertained by his medical attendants and friends that his life would be prolonged, little hope was felt regarding his ultimate recovery. On Friday there was a report that he had rallied a little, but he died on Saturday at his residence, 31, Sackville-street. He died comparatively young, being in his 56th year.

ENTERING the Indian Service through Haileybury in 1852 he has done some thirty-five years of varied and laborious official work. His rise in the Service was rapid, for, although perhaps he owed something to the accident of birth and the patronage of powerful family connections, he had ability and energy enough to win his way to the front without extraneous aid. He was a Civilian of what is called the old school, and if his prejudices were sometimes strong he always had the courage of his convictions. His zeal was perhaps not always tempered with discretion, and it is said that he was a "good hater." But it is known also that he had warm and generous impulses, and was most staunch in his friendships.

HIS death is a loss to India, and he will be much missed at the Council Board. He had brought there his great experiences of Indian administrations, and he was a power with his colleagues. In any criticisms which may be made concerning him it should be remembered that when he retired from the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal he retired in the full sunshine of general popularity. Public meetings were held to record his distinguished services, a public banquet was given to him, and all classes of the Calcutta community, official and non-official, joined together to do him honour—Fortunæ majoris honos, erectus et acer.

THE P. and O. steamer Nizam, which arrived at Bombay with the English mails forty-four hours after contract time, had a narrow escape from being caught by the late cyclone which raged in the Indian Ocean. She arrived with not a boat left whole, her decks almost swept clean, the stern wheel platform torn from its position, the gangways smashed, and the vessel altogether in a woeful condition. Happily, however, there was no loss of life nor injuries to record, and for this and the saving of the ship the greatest credit is due to Captain Haslewood, the Commander, and to his officers and crew—not forgetting the Lascars.

Those lately much-abused individuals have entered a vigorous protest, which finds publicity in the Bombay papers just to hand, against the condemnation of their conduct in the wreck of the Tasmania; and it is only fair that what they have put forward in their own defence should be taken into account before final judgment is given. Regarding their behaviour on board the Nizam, the chief officer of that ship speaks in the highest terms. He declares that throughout the gale "there was no grumbling, nor any attempt to shirk work. They obeyed orders implicitly, and, in short, acquitted themselves as well as any crew could possibly have done."

THE Government of India has arrived at the conclusion that the examination of officers in Hindustani by the Lower Standard are being conducted in a very lax manner, and has resolved that in future the rules and regulations must be carried out to the letter before the grant of Rs. 180 can be earned. Henceforth the colloquial test is to be a strict and bonâ fide one. The conversation is to be conducted with an educated Native; at least thirty questions relating to matters of regimental or professional duty are to be put and answered, and it will not be allowable to give the same questions to several candidates; further, if any breach of these conditions is made the examination will be declared null and void. Of course, no one of these regulations is new; it is their stricter enforcement in the future that is insisted upon.

THE rumour which came from India some time ago to the effect that the Government there had under consideration some scheme for remodelling the Native Army on a territorial basis similar to that on which the British Army is now organised, has, we are glad to say, been officially contradicted. The explanation given is to the effect that the policy of linking battalions will be for regiments to have fixed headquarters, at which its battalions will serve in turn, but there is no scheme in hand for organising the Native Army on the lines indicated.

ACCORDING to the Pioneer, aspirants for appointments in the Bengal Police have been much disturbed by a sudden requisition to pass a competitive examination. Sir Steuart Bayley finds upwards of forty names on the roll of selected candidates; and, not knowing what to with them all, he has offered eight appointments to those who stand most successfully the test of an examination, giving the others to understand that the door is finally closed against them. The knowledge required is elementary; but most of the candidates left school long ago, and have proceeded, with all the haste of the average Englishman, to forget what they learnt there—and, after all, everyone cannot pass when the number of vacancies is smaller than the number of candidates. If this sort of thing is to be made a precedent the question, What shall we do with our boys?—those boys who cannot, or will not, pass any examination in any form—will become more painfully difficult than ever. Hitherto the Indian Police has been one of the favourite refuges for the destitute—a peaceful haven where the examiner is unknown, and an acquaintance with Chaucer and Conic Sections is at a discount; but if even this resting-place is to be denied to them it is hard to see what remains but cab-driving.

YET another Jubilee! Russia this year will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of railways in that country. On April 27 of last year it was fifty years since the Czar Nicholas gave his sanction to the construction of the first Russian railway—the line from St. Petersburg to Zarskoeselo and Paulovsk, seventeen miles long; but it was on October 30, 1837, that the line was actually opened, and that date consequently marks the jubilee. The construction and working of the Russian railways are to be gradually reorganised, and not only are new lines to be constructed by soldiers, under the supervision of engineer officers, but the working of existing lines is to be placed in the hands of the military engine-drivers and guards, being taken from the army. Our contemporary, Iron, which furnishes this information, does not consider it an encouraging sign of the times, nor do we. Russia's strategic line to the left bank of the Oxus is being pushed on with vigour, and we shall possibly hear more of "strategic" lines when the boundary question is settled; but when will that be?

THE Anglo-Indian newspapers have curious ideas regarding the news from India which is likely to be appreciated by English readers at home. The Pioneer, one of the leading political dailies in India, gives us, in its Overland Summary received this morning, nearly six columns describing some amateur theatricals at Mhow. One satisfactory reflection, however, can be draw from this—India is at peace and play.

THE claims and traditions of the old Indian Armies must have drifted under the cold shade when one of our leading Society weeklies can speak of General H. B. Pottinger, R.A., as "an outsider"—that is, as compared with Staff Corps men. This odd criticism is passed by way of mild censure on the appointment of General Pottinger as Military Secretary to the Bombay Government in succession to General Michael Willoughby, retired. The critic does chance to remember that General Pottinger was raised in the Bombay Artillery before that once-noted corps was "amalgamated" into the all-world Gunner Regiment. It might also be as well recalled that General Pottinger has been on the Staff of the Bombay Army, in the Quartermaster-General's Department, through a large portion of his career, besides occupying various special posts. Possibly the Society journal would like to see Military Secretaries to the Indian Government sent out direct from the War Office or Horse Guards. But the browsing of the patronage classes on the pastures of the Indian revenues has not got quite so far as that yet.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

CALCUTTA, JULY 10.

Authentic details of the mutiny at Herat last month have been received. As was to be expected, it was confined to the Ghilzais. One regiment called the "Hazari" from its numbering 1,000 bayonets, contained 800 Adari Ghilzais. These in conjunction with the officer second in command of the garrison, a Ghilzai chief named Taimar Shah, plotted to kill the Governor and the General, and to induce the rest of the Cabuli troops to rise and seize the town. The plot was discovered in time, but the Andaris mutinied, took as many breech-loading rifles and cartridges as they wanted from the arsenal, and attempted to kill the General. Failing to find him, they returned to barracks. The Governor first begged them to leave the city quickly, but on their refusal he plucked up courage and attacked them with 1,200 picked infantry and some guns. Thereupon the mutineers quitted Herat, after losing a few men, and marched without interruption, beyond the loss of some stragglers, through Obeh and Ghor along the southern edge of the Hazara country to the camp of the main body of rebels in Nawai Tarakhi. Their ringleader, Taimar Shah, fled towards Persia, but was captured at Kuhsan, and sent to Cabul. The detachments of troops sent from Candahar to intercept the rebels were too late.

Herat is quiet, though the authorities are naturally uneasy lest the mutiny should spread to other Cabuli regiments, of which there are three in Herat and one in Farah. The remainder of the Hazari regiment, 450 strong, is however staunch, and the Governor has enough Herati and Candahari soldiers to hold the city against the Cabulis, who, as a measure of precaution, have been encamped outside the city.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 10.

Lieutenant McSwirey and a squadron of the 3rd Cavalry of the Hyderabad Contingent have completed a very successful expedition against a body of dacoits near Baw. Two Bons and eight dacoits were killed, and one Boh and nineteen dacoits taken prisoners, ninety-three guns and sixty-four Dahs being captured, and 120 head of dacoited cattle retaken. Our casualties included one Jemadar and a trooper severely wounded and two horses killed.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

IN THE YEAR '57.—III.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

After Captain Salmon's frivolous complaint to "J. L." comes another sorrow of the same kind—a neatly-written letter enfolding two very clever water-colour sketches of two ruffians, who appear to be cross-bred between Pathan and Zouave. One of them, marked "Private," in case any one should mistake him for a thief, wears ankle-boots, yellow stockings—or, perhaps, the artist means the wash for skin—baggy blue breeks, loose Zouave jacket, and a sumptuous turban. The other, marked "Officer"—though he looks more like an Albanian dacoit—is dressed in brown leather knee-boots, baggy breeks, Zouave dolman with gold arabesques, turban and long loose cloak, which reaches down to his ankles, and hangs gracefully from two bed-tassels knotted round his throat. He also wears a turban twisted round a red skull-cap—not the stiff-pointed cap of the Border. Who was the daring man that fancied "J. L." would like to look at water-colour pictures in the middle of his office-work? Some one who wrote a femininely delicate hand, and had much to say. Raverty is his name—Lieutenant H. G. Raverty, of the 3rd Bombay Native Infantry. What right has a Bombay man to thrust his oar into our troubled waters of the North? Two years hence Mr. H. G. Raverty will get his step, and will publish, by subscription, a sumptuous quarto, "Dictionary of the Pushto Language," which everyone will say is immensely valuable, but which few people will care to read. Lieutenant Francis Norman will take a copy of it. Why does not Lieutenant Raverty go on with his book, and refrain from pestering "J. L."? He begins his letter from Multan, whereof he is Assistant Commissioner, in an unpromising sort of way. "At the present crisis it behoveth every officer to do his utmost, &c." Did "J. L." read any further before he wrote on the back—"Inform this officer that I do not consider it expedient to record his proposals to Government?" So much for water-colour sketches of Brigands and seven sheets of neat writing. People shall judge whether "J. L." is right in disposing of them so summarily.

"The trustworthiness of the Afghan soldier," says Lieutenant Raverty, "is conspicuous at the present time, and shows that implicit faith may be placed in him—particularly when opposed to others than his own countrymen." He has a temperament like the Irishman or the Scotch Highlander, must be led, not driven, and addressed in his own "rough and manly tongue." Lieutenant Raverty has studied him for nine years, and really knows something of this tongue. Lieutenant Raverty refers incidentally to his big Dictionary, which is now in the press, and hopes he will "not be considered presumptuous" if he offers his services to raise a levy of Afghans exclusively from "our northern and western frontiers." Here he enlarges on the political advantages of such a step; would flatter the Border chiefs by allowing them to pick recruits and send them down. He would enlist—"Eusufzis, Bajaueers, Khulils, Khattaks, Sherinis, and Suliman Khails," "men of gigantic stature and great strength." He would have companies by clans, and would officer, as far as possible, from the relatives and connections of the chiefs. "The dress and arms (a rough idea of which I enclose) to be something similar to the Algerian Zouaves." The English Officers should be put through a compulsory examination in Pushtoo, and the books and records of the regiment should be kept in Pushtoo. What an enthusiast it is! "A few days would be sufficint for me to translate into Pushtoo the first part of the "Field Exercises and Evolutions," including Company Drill, and Rifle, and Manual Exercise.

"From my knowledge of the Afghan character, and from the confidence I have already gained over the numbers I have met, I feel sanguine of success, if the sanction of the Government should be accorded, and that I could bring together in a few months a body of men which for size, strength and efficiency, would be unsurpassable by any others on the continent of Asia, and each of whom would be equal to at least ten Hindustanis." Lieutenant Raverty is a Lieutenant of at least eight years' standing, but he is almost too sanguine.

Only give him leave and within six weeks he will ride into Multan at the head of 1,500—or 2,000 horse and foot or even more—all good men and true, and all anxious to take part in the sack of Delhi. "J. L." evidently does not like the wholesale enrolment of Pathans, or perhaps the water-colour sketches prejudiced him. But we have lived to see some little portion of Raverty's notion carried out. If the record-room shelves could speak, what strange tales they could tell of pigeon-holed recommendations, schemes strangled at birth, or rising from the grave in after-years, when the original father was dead and a stranger reaped the credit!

Here follows a stately letter of much greater interest. "The Lord William Hay," as the Babu calls him—"Deputy Commissioner of Simla," has been quarrelling with authorities of the State. In plain English, the Lord William Hay is "huffy." Mutineers have been looting Kalka and Pinjore, and that flustered and aristocratic D. C. has been sending a detachment of the 1st Fusiliers flying up and down the hills. First he ordered them down to Kalka. Then the people of Simla were afraid of being left alone, and they were ordered up again. Next Barnes, the Commissioner of the Cis-Sutlej States, who in May had raised a six per cent. loan from the Native States, and needed men as chronically as he needed money, sent up an urgent request for some English troops, and those Fusiliers were hurried down to Umballa. How they must have sworn tramping through the early July dust! Evidently the Lord William has been told not to bucket Her Majesty's troops about. He wraps himself in his virtue, and though always "your obedient servant," is "quite at a loss to conceive" how he has done wrong. The burden of his letter, like the rest, is "more troops." "J. L." dismisses that appeal in stony silence. What is the use of arguing with a Deputy Commissioner on a hill-top? Simla is safe enough; for the Goorkhas at Jutogh are good little men, and will not as the ladies of Simla devoutedly believe, march in to massacre.

Here, pitchforked among the rest, turns up a hasty genial letter from Van Cortlandt, on the war-path at some illegible camp. Order reigns where Van Cortlandt has been. He says:—"There is no fear of anything going wrong in the Sirsa District, if Oliver does not draw the strings too tight." H'm! Evidently Van Cortlandt mistrusts Oliver, and would recommend conciliation. "Oliver is a zubberdust fellow, he requires to be kept in hand a little." This is a naked truth with a vengeance; but Barnes the Commissioner of the Cis-Sutlej States, is not likely to be hard on that zubberdust Oliver for a little heavy-handedness. The revenue must be collected, that the people may know that the great Indian Government still sits at the receipt of custom.

Now, what in the world does Van Cortlandt mean by this? "Mrs. Van Cortlandt does not understand these things, or she would not have asked you for a pass for Hira Nand." Hira Nand is a Tehsildar in the Hissar district, but what has happened? Has Mrs Van Cortlandt been putting her delicate fingers into the very mixed political pie of the period? Who can answer? The letter is incomplete.

Everything is incomplete, fragmentary, jumbled, leading nowhere.

But, after a while, as one turns the letters over, the sense of the distance that separates the affable, eloquent, impartial, educated Present, from the hard-pressed, brutal, and sternly practical Past, dies away.

At first, all seems like the disorderly procession of a dream—a rush of shadows from the dark to the dark. Here a soldier in the foreground fighting for the dear life; there another, who has sheathed sword a moment and wipes his forehead. Behind him, a herd of frightened women and helpless invalids against a gloomy sky. Then a voice—the voice of the very strong man Nicholson—calling cheerily out of a dust-storm that "Her Majesty's 52nd Regiment is like a big mastiff trying to catch half a-dozen jackals." Next, rushes of armed men, north, south, east and west, and a pause. Then the tale of the slain read out by a voice that seems to have no concern with living or dead—the voice of the official statement—the Chorus of the Tragedy—"of one council with the Gods."

Follows a glimpse of a city in the South, ringed with fire and crumbling to rubbish under the blows of a sun-smitten, sickness-stricken army. To this succeeds a city in the extreme North, very quiet and very strong, a buttress of defence guarded by clear-eyed men who speak slowly, and whose words carry far across the din between north and south.

But, above the clamour of command and countercommand, the bustle of alarums and excursions, through the smoke and the dust, runs a steel link of purpose and dominance—the will and the hand and the power of John Lawrence, Chief Commissioner of the Punjab.

It is no longer the rush of an evil dream that we are looking at, but a length of great living frieze, where the figures are fixed for the moment, as they slide by, in strenuous, labouring attitudes—strong, hopeful, despairing, agonised, or coldly and bitterly masterful, as Fate has laid their burdens upon them.

One face recurs and recurs; and on that face there is no outward sign of trouble, nothing but determination and sleepless vigilance. In the end, peace will come back, and then, and not till then, those lips will frame the question:—"Will you be governed by the Pen or by the Sword?"

THE GRIEVANCES OF THE UNCOVENANTED.

(Bombay Gazette.)

In approaching the question whether the European Uncovenanted servants of the Government are fairly dealt with, it should be borne in mind that the conditions of service of which they complain are not all open to complaint on the same grounds. For instance, officials who expected that they would get a sterling pension when they left the service, or a rupee pension worth two shillings to the rupee, and who now find that three, four or five thousand rupees a year will be worth only one-and-fourpence to the rupee, are the victims of a disappointment essentially different from that which is complained of by the victims of illiberal leave rules. In this latter respect, although the position of the Unconvenanted official is distinctly inferior to that of the Covenanted Civilian, it is no worse than it was when he joined the service. Here, although there may be much inequality of treatment, there is no semblance of a breach of faith, and the Unconvenanted have to show that there is something essentially illiberal in the conditions under which they have to work. And there are not a few amongst the dozen or so of complaints that they bring forward of which this may be said. Frequent supersession by covenanted and military officers is one. The refusal to allow service before the age of twenty-two to count as service before pension is another. This would be a plain injustice even if there were not the much easier conditions imposed upon the covenanted civilian to compare it with. For the term of service of the Uncovenanted is long enough. If he wants a pension he must have one of two things—either a medical certificate or a record of thirty years' service, in which leave, not even on medical certificate, must not be counted. The official apology for the rule doubtless is that it is impolitic to attach as much value to the service that a man can render before twenty-one as to the labour of his later years. But if that is so the only logical course for the Government to take is to prohibit entrance into the Uncovenanted Service before the age of twenty-two. So long, however, as the work of young men under that age is accepted and paid for it is as illogical as it is unfair to exclude it from the period of service which counts towards pension. The leave question may very fairly be settled on its merits, and without too close regard to what the Government have thought to be due to their favoured "protegés" of the Civil Service. A very simple principle underlies the problem—the principle that the object of leave and furlough is not to confer pleasure upon an official, but to make him an efficient instrument for his work. This consideration justifies the liberality of the leave rules for the Covenanted Service, and it condemns the rules in force amongst the Un-covenanted. One year's leave in ten years' service and two years in eighteen are an obviously and lamentably deficient allowance. No other employers of labour than the Government thinking it worth while to pay for European skill and intelligence would also think it worth while to use it with so little regard to the rest and climatic change that are necessary to keep it in efficiency. The appeal in this matter therefore lies, not to the generosity of the Government, but to its utilitarian sense. In a word, it no more pays to overwork an Uncovenanted Civilian than it pays to overwork a horse.

The pension rules certainly do not err on the side of generosity. Such benefit as the Government offers its Uncovenanted servants under them is better than nothing, except in the not infrequent cases in which they offer nothing at all. But that is the most that can be said. Much is to be said by anyone who cares to approach the question on that point against the principle of granting pensions. But the Government have not yet abrogated the principle, and so long as they act upon it they should apply it fairly. To refuse one class of servants a pension on medical certificate before fifteen years' service in India, and to grant it to another class after five is capricious and inequitable, and such a provision could only be understood if it were explained as a means purposely invented for awakening discontent. As to the general complaint of the Uncovenanted that the maximum limit of pensions is too low, we should probably hear little of this if the pensions, such as they are, were paid in a coin that did not year by year fall in value. This is perhaps the part of the case in which the Uncovenanted Service have the strongest claims upon the sympathy of Parliament.

DOMESTIC SERVANTS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

In many parts of India we are already confronted with a difficulty which threatens, unless boldly grappled with, to assume serious proportions, and it may not be out of place here to offer a few remarks upon our domestic servants; upon the position they occupy in regard to us; and upon the position which they occasionally permit us to occupy towards them. In England our household servants have long been the curse of the householder and the cross—variously borne—of the housewife; they have triumphantly answered in the negative the pertinent question, "Is life worth living?" In England, as in India, the old family servant has practically ceased to exist. Far be it from us to declare for one moment that the old servant had any very remarkable qualities of head or heart which rendered his services more valuable than those of the young man or young woman who now replaces him; but the old servant had managed to get into one's ways; he knew exactly what he might move, and what he was on no account to touch; and, however great his speculations, he generally took very good care—from purely personal motives—that he alone should put his hand into his master's long-suffering pocket. Ask any old Anglo-Indian to glance round at the several khitmutgars waiting behind their masters at any large dinner, and he will tell you that in his young days not one of those men would have been admitted into a gentleman's house. Formerly the traditions of service were handed down through generations, and servants in their several capacities were a race apart and distinct. Now any man who can do nothing else poses as a servant of one sort or another. The chit nuisance has much to do with this. As long as we engage domestics, simply from the remarkable specimens of caligraphy which they display to us, so long shall we find our servants get worse and worse. In days gone by good servants were passed on from one master to another; they were known, and had no difficulty in obtaining fresh situations; now, except in rare cases, all servants, good, bad, and indifferent, press forward for engagement, their chits being all there is to go by and to guide us in selection. In consequence of this, quite a trade has sprung up in chits, and these valuable testimonials are bought, sold, stolen and borrowed; until the good servant and the scoundrelly impostor have identically the same chances of engagement.

BENGAL.

THE HON. ROBERT STEEL has been elected President of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

MESSRS HAMILTON & Co. will sell by public auction, next month, a large collection of jewels and an heterogenous assortment of valuable articles at Calcutta. The sale will extend over twelve days, and amongst the articles to be disposed of is the historical "Lingam God," consisting "of an extraordinary chrysoberyl cat's-eye of great size and brilliancy, set in a very large yellow topaz, the whole supported in an Indian Native gold base, encrusted with diamonds, and set round with nine gems called the 'nine charms.'"

IT is now some years ago, says a Calcutta paper, since strict orders were issued against throwing dead bodies or the carcases of animals into the Hooghly near Calcutta. It seems, however, that these orders are being steadily disobeyed, for last year no less than seventy human bodies and 4,853 carcases of animals were found floating in the river by the River Police. These figures show a considerable increase over those of both 1884 and 1885, and seem to point to the fact that less diligence is now used to prevent pollution of the river than was formerly the case. The Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal thinks that the evil might be somewhat mitigated by the exercise of greater vigilance at the burning ghats at the thickly-populated places above Calcutta, and the attention of the Commissioners of the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions has been directed to the matter.

THE result of the rifle matches for the opening season of the Bengal Rifle Association has now been published, together with a financial statement, and is satisfactory evidence of the popularity of shooting in the army and volunteers. There were as many as 26,600 entries altogether, and 2,578 prizes, aggregating Rs. 17,726 in value. Competitions were held at the headquarter stations of divisions, districts, and brigades—at seventeen stations in all.

MADRAS.

A MUNIFICENT gift has just been made to the Madras Presidential Memorial of Her Majesty's Jubilee by Rai Bahadur Arcot Thanakoti Moodelliar, who has undertaken to find funds to the extent of no less than Rs. 20,000 for the establishment and equipment of the Technical Library, which is deemed by the committee a necessity for the Victoria Technical Institute. The donor preferred this gift for such purpose as might be named by Lord Connemara, who recommended its application to this object.

A REUTER'S telegram received at Madras states that Sir Frederick Abel, Secretary to the Committee of the Imperial Institute, has written a letter to Mr. Charles A. Lawson, the delegate deputed by the Madras Jubilee Commitee to present the presidential address to Her Majesty the Queen-Empress, stating that he has much appreciated the zeal shown throughout the Madras Presidency in connection with the Imperial Institute, and the successful efforts that have been made to promote the interests of the fund, and that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has derived great satisfaction from the perusal of the documents connected with the Madras subscriptions, and has expressed his thanks to the subscribers generally, and to Mr. Lawson personally, for his co-operation and his valued exertions as Honorary Secretary of the Madras Jubilee Executive Committee.

IN a Jubilee retrospect of irrigation in the Madras Presidency the local Mail says:—The net result during the last fifty years of the work of the Engineering Department in the matter of ordinary irrigation works, that is, old Native works, such as tanks and channels, may be summarised as follows. A great number of works have been kept in good repair, and others greatly improved; but the condition of the bulk of them is, in the year 1887, much what it was in 1837. On the other hand, much valuable information has been collected, at the cost of much time and trouble, and is recorded in a convenient shape, and matters have generally been put in train for the steady and continuous repair and upkeep of this important class of works on scientific principles. It may reasonably be hoped, therefore, that the reviewer of fifty years hence will be able to record great and uniform progress. If, in the matter of ordinary irrigation works, the progress cannot be considered altogether satisfactory in the conception and execution of works that are great in an engineering point of view, and successful beyond measure as pecuniary investments, and as a source of wealth and prosperity to the country, the fifty years since the accession of Her Majesty have been most fruitful.

BOMBAY.

DURING the absence of Captain Gordon, Lieutenant J. M. Dick will act as Adjutant of the Sind Volunteer Rifle Corps.

DURING the absence of Mr. J. B. Alcock, Mr. G. McCorkell, acting Judge of Hyderabad, will act as Judge and Sessions Judge of Skikarpoor in addition to his other duties.

SIR DINSHAW MANOCKJEE PETIT has promised to pay Rs. 10,000 towards the building funds of the Bombay Gymnastic Institution, provided Government give a plot of ground on the Esplande free of charge.

MR. A. D. YOUNGHUSBAND, C.S., will act as Assistant Collector, Surat. During the absence of Mr. James Scorgie, F.C.S., or till further orders, Mr. H. P. Jacob will act in the third grade of the Educational Department. Mr. G. M. Woodrow will act as Professor of Mechanism and Applied Sciences in the College of Science, Poona, in the fourth grade of the same department. Mr. H. M. Page will act as Lecturer on Botany and Agriculture in the College of Science, Poona; and Mr. N. A. Moos as Head Master in the College of Science, Poona.

THE offer of Mr. Tharia Topun to build and endow a hospital at Zanzibar has been accepted by the British Government, and Lord Salisbury has communicated the same through Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India to the local Government. Mr. Tharia Topun has set apart the munificent sum of Rs. 2,30,000 for the purpose of building the hospital and permanently maintaining it. The British Government will hold in trust the sum of Rs. 1,50,000 for the due maintenance of this charitable institution. It was by the influence of Mrs. Tharia Topun, an enlightened lady, that her husband was moved to bestow this benevolent gift. The hospital will be named after the donor.

DEATH OF A RETIRED MISSIONARY.—Many in Western India, says the Bombay Guardian, will hear with regret that the Rev. J. S. S. Robertson, of the Church Missionary Society, has been called away from earth. He came to India in 1838 and left it finally in 1877, though about ten years of the interim had been spent in Great Britain. He was for a number of years secretary of the C. M. S. in Western India. The first part of his missionary life was spent in Nassick. He was widely known and greatly loved for his catholic spirit. He took an active part in the preparation and revision of the Marathi Scriptures. The weekly meeting at his house for reading of the Scriptures, prayers and conference was an institution, and many no doubt remember it still with pleasure. Of late years, Mr. and Mrs. Robertson have been residing in London.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THERE is a rumour that a Circle Pay Office is likely to be formed in Burma on the closing of the present Field Pay Office.

THE following officers have been promoted to Lieutenant-Colonelcies on the completion of 26 years' service:—Majors A. H. Mayhew and F. M. Hunter, of the Staff Corps; and Major W. F. Hume and C. M. Brown, General List, Infanty.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL H. J. STOCK, S.C., and Surgeon-Major R. H. Batty, I.M.S., have retired from the service, the latter on a pension of £365.

COLONEL M. W. WILLOUGHBY, C.S.I., became entitled to the Colonel's allowance on June 9th, on which date his services were placed at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR THOMAS BAKER, K.C.B., commanding the Allahabad Divison, has proceeded on short leave, and the command of the station has devolved on Colonel A. F. Hart, 1st Battalion East Surrey Regiment.

THE attention of officers commanding stations and columns in Upper Burma has been called to the necessity there is for the reduction of miscellaneous expenditure and discontinuance of charges which have been warranted only by urgent military necessity during the winter operations.

"SURRA" appears to have made its appearance in the 7th Bengal Cavalry at the Arakan Pagoda.

BRIGADE-SURGEON RADDOCK intends retiring from the service on August 6th.

COLONEL R. D. CAMPBELL, commanding 30th Punjab Infantry, vacates command on June 27th, on attaining the age of fifty-five.

LIEUTENANT F. C. H. BOEHMER, 2nd Bedfordshire Regiment, Adjutant Madras Railway Volunteer Rifles, has been transferred to Bengal as Adjutant of the East India Railway Volunteer Corps, in succession to Sir C. Leslie, Bart.

THE 18th Bengal Infantry now in the Chindwin Valley are to return to India directly. This is only the beginning of an extensive withdrawal of troops to be carried on during the next few months, provided, of course, the country remains quiet. The police organisation is now so well established that fewer troops are required, while the reserve battalions of police formed in India can be drawn upon if necessary.

THE Naval Brigade engaged in Upper Burma are to receive a gratuity similar to that granted to the military forces, and volunteers are also to be included in the list. Each share is Rs. 38, and the following is the scale for officers:—Lieut.-General and Major-General 152 shares with 100 extra shares if in chief command. A Brigadier-General 57, with 50 shares extra if in chief command. A regimental Colonel or Departmental Officer having the relative rank of Colonel 40. A Colonel (other than above) and Lieut.-Colonel 32. A Major 16; a Captain 12; and a Lieutenant 7½. A Warrant Officer receives 4; and Non-Commissioned British Officers and men from 3 to 1 share according to their status. Native Officers from the rank of Subadar to Woordie-Major receive Rs. 190; Jemadars and Naib Ressaldars, Rs. 76; Havildars, Rs. 38. Followers are not granted gratuity, which is perhaps only reasonable, considering their high rate of pay as compared with sepoys.

FOUR extra pensions of £100 per annum each are allowed to the senior officers of the Indian Medical Service in the proportion of two for the Bengal, and one each for the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, as compensation for the withdrawal of the rank and privileges of a Deputy Surgeon-General formerly allowed to officers of that branch of the service holding the appointments of Sanitary Commissioners. These extra pensions will be offered yearly in rotation to Surgeons-General, Deputy Surgeons-General, and to all Brigade Surgeons, but under no circumstances will the extra pension be given to a Surgeon-General or Deputy Surgeon-General until he has completed three years' actual service in the grade, excluding all leave except privilege leave, and then only when from failing health or other unforeseen causes he may be unable to complete his full tour of service. Should the full number of pensions not be accepted in any one official year the balance will lapse, and will not be offered during the following year.

LOSS OF THE P. AND O. STEAMER "TASMANIA."

At the Westminster Session House Mr. H. C. Rothery, the Wreck Commissioner, and Captain Beasley, Captain Harland, and Admiral Moresby, assessors, have continued the inquiry, ordered by the Board of Trade, and opened on 27th ult., respecting the stranding and consequent loss of the P. and O. steamship Tasmania, on the Monachi Rocks, off the south coast of Corsica, in April last.

On the 1st inst. Mr. Henry William Powell, the surgeon of the Tasmania, in his evidence with respect to Captain Perrin, said the captain was in perfect health, and during the time that he had been with him, which was some ten months, he had only consulted witness for slight ailments once or twice, and he was perfectly competent to take charge of the ship under any circumstances. Mr. G. W. Allen, a first-class passenger, said that after the vessel struck he saw a man firing off rockets, but most of them failed. There was no attempt to crowd into the boats at all, the passengers appearing to be very calm. He heard the captain tell Charles Andrews that he might go in charge of the lifeboat, and after it went away he heard the passengers complaining of three officers going in that boat. With regard to the behaviour of the native crew, the serang, the head man of the Lascars, was the only one who helped at all. As to the captain, he should say that he was a man of indifferent health, and it was a matter of common notoriety that he was subject to small ailments. He should say that for all the ordinary purposes of a ship the captain was in sufficiently good health, but perhaps he was not vigorous enough to meet the very great risks that a captain in charge of a vessel had to encounter. By Mr. Hall: The Lascars might have helped to make the raft, but he did not see them. Mr. Charles Bill, a first-class passenger, considered that the Lascars did not act as they ought to have done. With regard to the captain, he was not quite so strong as he might have been. If the lifeboat had been properly manned she would have been able to get back to the ship, though not without some difficulty. Mr. C. H. W. Bliss, another first-class passenger, was of opinion that the captain was not quite up to his work. Mrs. Ada Bliss, the wife of the previous witness, said that the fourth officer complained that he was left without any orders, and Mr. Andrews said that he was not in charge. Witness related how that she and a Mrs. Carr had begged and bullied the crew after landing to launch the boat and return to the ship, and at last they got the boat away and returned in about four hours without having succeeded in reaching the vessel. Andrew Mackay, the third engineer, did not observe any drunkenness among the crew, which had been spoken of by some of the previous witnesses, and with regard to the quartermaster, who had been particularly mentioned, he had been washed down the companion and was injured.

On the 2nd inst. Mr. George William Bird, third officer, in reply to Mr. Baden Powell, said that after the disaster he was engaged by the orders of the captain for three-quarters of an hour in firing the distress signals. The rockets went off all right, but some of the bombs misfired; they fired no flares. The ship carried two guns, but they were not used. After the cutter and the mail boat had gone away the captain called witness to his cabin and said that the second officer was going away in charge of the lifeboat, and when they had reached the shore that officer was to go for assistance. The captain added that witness was to get into the boat and bring her back to the ship. Witness went to the lifeboat, assisted to swing her, and got into the boat and helped to bring her round to the gangway. The chief officer sang out "Some of you must come out of the boat; there are too many in her." Two engineers got out of the boat in consequence. The chief officer also called witness out by name, but the captain said, "Remain where you are, Bird." He did not hear either Mr. Andrews or the fourth officer called out by name. It was decidedly wrong to say that Mr. Andrews came into the boat down the gangway; he was in the boat when she was lowered. They had about seventy-two on board when the captain gave orders to shove off. They found it impossible to get enough volunteers to take the boat back again. Witness asked Mr. Andrews to come into the boat. He did not come; he gave no reason, but he was limping and appeared to be hurt. The Wreck Commissioner said the Court would like to see Mr. Andrews, as some very serious charges had been made against him. Dr. Raikes said the Board of Trade had intended to call him, but they had received a medical certificate stating that Mr. Andrews was too ill to attend. Mr. Hall said the company had intended to call Mr. Andrews, but since the certificate sent to the Board of Trade another doctor had seen him and he certified that he was in bed with a very bad congestion of the liver, and it would be dangerous to bring him to the court. If it was at all possible to bring Mr. Andrews, he (the learned counsel) undertook that he should be brought. Witness, continuing, said that attempts were made to reach the ship, but they failed. The men who manned the boat were thoroughly exhausted, and most of them had to be assisted out of the boat. They had great difficulty in getting volunteers. The second-class passengers would not help to man the boat. Cross-examined, witness admitted that in getting the lifeboat away from the ship neither he nor Mr. Andrews did anything different from what an able-bodied seaman might do. Had the lifeboat been properly manned when they put off to reach the ship the attempt might have been successful. At Sardinia some of the second-class passengers got drinking and were noisy, and, at his suggestion, the Mayor put them under arrest. They had been employed by the Government in connection with the Nile boats, he believed; and they threatened to report their arrest to Lord Salisbury—(laughter). The fourth officer was very much exhausted when the lifeboat reached the shore, but he was very active in assisting the ladies. The Wreck Commissioner: Do you think it was a proper thing for three officers and Mr. Andrews to leave in that boat, and to leave only the chief officer and the captain in charge?—I do not know; I was only obeying orders. Was it a right thing for all those officers to leave in that boat?—Under the circum stances I think so, there being so many ladies and children to look after. It might have been better if one or two of us had been left behind. In reply to further questions witness said that the second-class passengers were ordered out of the boat by the captain. He bundled one out, and told two clergymen to go out, but they did not go. Some of the crew as well as the second-class passengers refused to return in the boat to the ship. Walter Berry, the gunner, said that when the vessel struck he had turned in. He got out at once, went into the forecastle to turn the hands out, and then went up to the hurricane deck. A general order was given to clear away the boats, and he heard the pipe go "All hands to stations." He assisted in getting the first cutter clear and was lowered in her. They had over 30 in the boat, crew and passengers, and rowed six oars at first, but she was so heavily loaded that he had to take two off the rowing to assist in baling the water out. After landing the doctor and he called the men together and tried to get the mail boat off, so as to return to the ship. They got about ten hands altogether. One of the second-class passengers refused to go in the boat; he said he had saved himself by the skin of his teeth, and he would have nothing more to do with it. They could not move the boat, she was so imbedded in the sand, although they tried to do so for about an hour. Lots of wreckage from the ship, such as bales of cotton, spars, and things of that sort, were washed on shore.

On the 5th inst. Mr. John Edward Manby, the fourth officer, was examined by Mr. Baden Powell as to the events that occurred from the moment the vessel struck until he took his place in the boat. The captain and the chief officer called out to the third officer and witness by name to leave the boat. He himself did not answer the call. He could not leave the boat because it was so crowded. In cross-examination, witness said that if he could have got to the gangway when ordered to leave the boat, the moment he had let go the line the boat would have drifted away. The captain was calm and collected, and did his work nobly. He had never served under an abler captain. Henry Baigent, chief steward, who remained on board the ship and stayed on deck all night, admitted that one of the stewards was in drink but the man was not drunk. He did not think before the men were searched at Ajaccio that they had had any opportunity of disposing of the alleged stolen property. Colonel Hozier, of Lloyd's, said that the Cape Feno light was not considered to be a satisfactory light. Sir Edward Bradford, political secretary at the India Office, stated that he was a passenger on board the Tasmania and remained on board after the boats went off. He did not think the discipline was very good. One of the stewards was the worse for liquor, and he heard the captain tell the men repeatedly to get out of the boat. Witness spoke to the captain and he was then cool. There was no rush to the boats, but he could not say that the native sailors behaved very well. He lost a watch and a pencil case off a table in his cabin, and Lady Bradford lost some rings which were in a drawer. At Ajaccio he thanked Mr. Manby for that officer's kindness to Lady Bradford on shore—in fact, they were all extremely kind.—Mr. John H. Dudley Ryder said that he was one of the passengers. One of the quartermasters was drunk, and also he believed one of the stewards. The quartermaster got better, however, and then worked like a man. He helped to get the lifeboat off. For a considerable time, perhaps an hour, until the lifeboat went off, the third mate and himself were standing at the stern, expecting the ship to go down, and waiting to jump overboard to a small raft. Witness was cross-examined with the object of showing that the third mate was engaged in firing rockets and bombs, that the little raft had been made by the third mate for witness personally, that witness was frightened, and that the third mate while performing his duties took occasional opportunities to cheer the witness up.

This concluded the case for the Board of Trade, and Dr. Raikes, the counsel for the Board of Trade, read a long statement, containing twenty-seven charges to be answered both by the officers and the company. Among the principal questions were those as to whether the officers took sufficient care in the navigation of the vessel; whether the Tasmania left Bombay properly manned for the voyage, and whether the crew were competent to do their work, whether proper precautions were taken to ascertain the position of the ship while in the Straits of Bonifacio, and whether a course was laid, making all allowance for a beam wind and sea. There were also questions as to whether proper discipline was maintained in lowering the boats, and under what circumstances the second, third, and fourth officers, and Mr. Andrews went away in the starboard lifeboat, and others respecting their conduct whilst on shore. Mr. Mansell Jones, for the P. and O. Company, and Mr. Howard Smith, for the officers, said the charges made were of a very grave nature, and they asked for an adjournment in order that they might have time to consider what witnesses they should call on behalf of their clients. The Court was then adjourned until the 11th inst.

THE NEW ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION (LIMITED).

The third ordinary general meeting of this Corporation was held on the 1st inst. at the offices, Threadneedle-street. Mr. W. W. Cargill, who presided, said that it would not be necessary to notice the accounts in detail, as they had been for some time in the hands of the shareholders, who had thus had ample opportunity to arrive at an understanding of the position of the affairs of the Bank. The business of the bank had continued to progress from the commencement. Beginning in 1883 with a small sum, their banking assets had rapidly increased until, by March 31, 1886, they amounted to £4,963,000, and at the same date this year they had further increased to £6,231,000. In the London accounts alone the amount of the turnover had very greatly increased. Although the directors had been urged from various quarters to establish new branches and agencies they had refrained for the present from so doing, but had made an exception in the case of Seychelles, a place where no banking facilities had hitherto existed, and which was of rising importance both commercially and as a health resort, since it had become a port of call for the steamers of the Messageries Maritimes. In view of the increasing business at Melbourne and Sydney the agencies in those places had been converted into branches. There was now a chance of their going into business in Australia without the risk that might have attended it during the height of the depression that had prevailed there. He might mention, as another evidence of the credit enjoyed by the bank, that they now held a considerable sum on deposit from more than one local Government. In India the Government business was all done with Indian banks, but in other places where the Government was not connected with India their bank had as good a chance as any other institution of obtaining their share of public business. Alluding to the "silver question," the Chairman said that the fall in exchange had caused the directors some anxiety, but no doubt by the adoption of a double circulating medium, or by some other means, matters would adjust themselves in due time. Meanwhile, the fall in exchange had not been without its advantages, inasmuch as it had brought about an increase in the export of several articles of produce from India. The value of the bank's capital employed in commercial operations had been carefully calculated with reference to the actual value of currency, so carefully that in the event of its affairs being wound-up at that moment, the share holders would sustain no loss. The Chairman concluded by proposing the adoption of the report and accounts. The motion was seconded by Mr. C. ALLHUSEN, and no questions being asked, it was carried nem. dis.

A motion that a dividend of 6s. per share, being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, for the half-year ended March 31 last, the same to be paid on July 16, was also carried. Major General Beville, C.B., was elected to the Board of Directors in the room of Mr. E. F. Harrison, deceased; and the retiring directors, Messrs. Allhusen and Boyle, were re-elected. Messrs. Quilter, Welton, and Co., were re-appointed auditors. The proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman, the directors and the officers of the bank.

In answer to a question by a Shareholder in the old bank, Mr. A. J. Macdonald stated that in the interest of many of the old creditors whose claims the bank held as agents, and also in the interest of old shareholders, the bank had protested against the sale of the outstanding assets of the old bank to the Assets Realisation Company. Unfortunately those efforts had failed. The Assets Company guaranteed the creditors 19s. 9d. in the pound, but the door was entirely shut to the old shareholders. Had he been a shareholder in the old bank he would have taken steps to appeal to the House of Lords—a proceeding which, he added, in answer to another question, would not, he believed, cost more than £1,000.

THE IRISH EXAMPLE.—The desires of the Irish will be fulfilled ultimately. In all countries the people have secured privileges by the diplay of courage and patience; courage alone will not do. Patience is necessary along with it. Then political privileges will be secured. The people of India have now opportunities of taking lessons from many sides. They should not despair. Courage will be wanting if disappointment is felt.—The Sahachar.

A SECOND gratuity has been sanctioned for the troops in the Burma Field Force. It will be granted to all officers and soldiers of the original Expeditionary Force, who remained after the 30th of April, 1886, and to all others in the force from that date to the 30th of April of the present year. Six months' batta will be given to the men, the British soldier thus receiving Rs. 38, and the sepoy Rs. 19. The gratuity to officers will be according to what is known as the War Office scale, under which shares are allotted according to rank, the unit being Rs. 38. "Batta late than never" will be the verdict in Burma.

MILITARY EXPENDITURE.—The English are gradually increasing their armies in India. The year previous to the Sepoy mutiny the expenditure on the army was twelve crores of rupees, and at the present moment it is not less than twenty crores. Whence does this money come? Of course from the Indian treasury, and who fills this Indian treasury? Of course the poor Indian people. In meeting these expenses the people are gradually becoming impoverished. The Government is draining away their blood by increasing the army. If you say that this is not for the natives of India, but for defending India against foreign aggression, we say that this is not in any way reasonable. It is vain to expect any good from a step which will increase the poverty of the people. The Government has committed a mistake. The financial pressure of the Indian Treasury is draining away the last farthing which the people possess. The poverty of this country will some day settle all questions.—The Charuvarta.

THE JUBILEE.—The Jubilee was celebrated in India only the other day. Have the people of India got any horses, elephants, dresses, or jaghirs? The titles are like diseases. The Hindus and the Mohamedans have lost their sovereignty in this country, and the English are governing it. The royal favours were not so worthless in any other rule as under the English Government. The English are not natives of this country, nor liberal towards it. The Hindu monarchs satisfied the people by showing them mercy, and the Mohamedan sovereigns gave them jaghirs. The people of India entertain great hopes. They most fervently expect that her most Gracious Majesty the Empress of India will turn a favourable eye on their miseries. We earnestly beseech the Government to confer some political privileges on us and thereby secure our blessings.—The Charuvarta.

SPIRIT WORKERS IN THE HOME CIRCLE.*

Spiritualism in some of its aspects has much to commend it, even to the everyday intelligence of the everyday world. To suppose that after death the disembodied souls of the departed revisit this earth in invisible form, and hover round the homes of those they loved is an idea which, whether or not sound, is at least beautiful. It is, moreover, repugnant to none of the instincts of mankind, who have in all ages had a belief in the existence of angelic beings charged with the protection of the good and pure in heart here below. But Mr. Theobald, in his most extraordinary work, goes far beyond this, and would have it believed that their spirits live amongst us on earth ready to do our bidding, if not exactly as and when we like, at any rate, to some considerable extent in accordance with our wishes. Let us take a few examples. For years we are told the spirits were wont to light the kitchen fire, to make tea, to turn on the gas, to carry trays up stairs, to guard the house against thieves, and such-like actions of everyday life. This is none too easy of belief, but it is but a drop in the ocean of difficulty compare with what follows. Mr. Theobald had a still-born child, which, according to his statement, not only went to the land of spirits, but when there grew and became an adult. How, it may be asked, amongst other things, did it learn to talk, read, and write? The answer is simple, but perplexing, Dr. Watt—presumably the great Dr. Watt—taught the child. But does this venerable saint take in hand all still-born children, or do others share with him in the gigantic and herculean task of instructing all dead-born infants in the realms above. This is neither the time nor the place to discuss medical questions, but if Mr. Theobald's doctrine be sound a very delicate and difficult problem would need solution as to what constitutes a still-born child.

Again, Saadi came to see his friends on earth. Now this, the greatest of Persian poets, lived some hundreds of years before the English had any connection with the East, and had probably never heard a word of our language spoken in his life; yet he writes English poetry, while a nigger cannot yet beyond the broken dialect, which apparently in death as in life characterises that despised and degraded race.

Judge, says Mr. Theobald, "by the light of reason. Where the reason cannot go nor penetrate you will be wise to refuse to follow," writes the spirit which comforts and consoles him. How, it may be asked in the name of all that is wonderful, are these injunctions to be carried out, and the incredible theories, the marvellous tales, the extraordinary adventures he narrates be accepted without solemn qualms of conscience and burning scruple of heart? Can one believe that his still-born son will come and play cards with his living father? Can one credit that a departed daughter will become "maid-of-all-work" in her mother's kitchen? Can one suppose that the spirits of the next world will be chums with your dog, but frighten your poor cat into agonies of terror? We have no wish to sneer at Mr. Theobald. He is either a most fortunate and honoured pet of the denizens of Paradise—or—well the description may well be left blank; but, in the words of Nicodemus, "How can these things be?"

ENGLISH HISTORY FROM CONTEMPORARY WRITERS.†

In this series, the plan, familiar to students of Indian history from the late Sir H. Elliott's admirable compilation in eight volumes, "The History of India, told by its own Historians," has been followed. The contemporary annalists have been allowed to tell their own story in their own words. The aim of the series, we are told, is to set forth "the facts of our National History, political and social, in a way not yet systematically tried in this country, but somewhat like that which Messrs. Hachette have successfully wrought out in France under the editorship of MM. Zeller, Darsy, Luchaire, &c. It is planned not only for educational use but for the general reader and especially for all those to whom the original contemporary authorities are for various reasons difficult of access. To each well-defined period of our history is given a little volume made up of extracts from the chronicles, state papers, memoirs, and letters of the time, as also from other contemporary literature, the whole chronologically arranged and chosen so as to give a living picture; the effect produced upon each generation by the political, religious, social, and intellectual movements in which it took part.

The object is a laudable one, and we are glad to see that the performance does not lag behind the design. The chief authorities for the reign of Henry III. up to 1248 are, of course, Matthew Paris and Robert Grosseteste, or Grostête, with passages from Adam de Marisco (or "of Marsh"), the friend of Grostête and the confidant of Simon de Montfort. From these writers, extracts—with here and there a few connecting lines from the editor's pen—are given, which are ample to serve their purpose of affording the student, or other reader, insight into the way in which each successive event was viewed by those who were affected by it. The "Misrule of Henry III." was, however, by no means confined to the years stated, 1236-1248, which can hardly be said to form a "well defined" period of history. Henry's misrule continued—at least, sufficiently to provoke a violent insurrection—till 1264, when the Barons, under the leadership of Simon de Montfort, in 1249 (see p. 126), Henry's Governor in Gascony, defeated the King on Mount Harry, at Lewes. We observe that the last extract in the volume is dated 1251, three years after the expiration of the "definite period," but thirteen years before the misrule had brought about the crisis which ended at Lewes. The little volume is illustrated with some woodcuts, and useful genealogical tables.

The "Wars of Edward III." fill a very interesting and important period of our history, and few students (unless when they have the sword of Damocles, in the shape of a University or Civil Service Examination impending) realise how much we owe as a nation to the legislation which took place in Edward's reign, and, in part, to the pecuniary necessities in which this great King was involved by his continual wars with the Scotch or with the French. The first clear declaration of the principle, that no taxation should be imposed except by the consent of Parliament, (p. 71), the Statute of Provisors, restraining papal encroachments (p. 138), the Statute of Præmunire, extending the last named, and itself extended in 1393 (p. 142), and, last, but not least, the Statute of Treasons, which contained the first statutory definition of the crime (p. 140), each mark a step forward, and a basis on which subsequent legislation has, in some degree at least, been content to rest. At the same time it must be admitted that the freedom which Edward allowed himself, of issuing (as at p. 86) a writ revoking a Statute to which he had given the Royal sanction, is an example "better honoured in the breach than in the observance."

The account of the battles of Nevill's Cross, with the quaint ballad on the subject, is worth reading; while the narratives of the battles of Crécy and Poitiers, and of the surrender of Calais, all illustrated by the oddest of woodcuts, deserve study by those who may not have Froissart's delightful narrative at hand.

The two little books afford an inexpensive means of drawing the stream of History, of the periods to which they relate, fresh from the spring, and without the often debasing influence of intermediate conduits. They may safely be recommended to those for whom they are designed, and we shall be surprised if they, and their successors, if equally well done, do not command very general patronage.

THE NIBELUNGEN LIED; A LAY OF THE NIBELUNG.*

"They were obliged to profess admiration, while at the same time they only knew what they admired by name." Such, in 1831, was Carlyle's verdict on his fellow-countrymen in regard to the Lay of the Nibelung; and is the satire less deserved in this our present day? True, many persons know somewhat of this great Iliad of Germany in so far as Wagner's music familiarised the names of some of the leading characters in the tales of chivalry and knightly prowess; but beyond this the Lay is but little read. These, then, are the circumstances in which Mr. Foster-Barham thinks it well to introduce the stirring scenes depicted in the German war-song to the notice of the English public.

And what is to be the verdict on his efforts? Can it be said that he has been successful? In all fairness it is not easy to answer in the affirmative; nor is it surprising. Translations of the great works which stand forth unapproached and unapproachable in the pages of the world's history are not possible. Of course any scholar of ordinary intelligence can give a rendering of the "meaning" of the original poem; but who can clothe in the real imagery, which appeals so strongly to the human instincts, sentiments and scenes which are inseparably linked with the traditions of the nation round which they centre? Can the ivy which clings to and forms part of the castle walls be torn down and planted in the midst of gay flowers and showy shrubs? It may live, but romance is gone; the creeper tells no tale of heroism and chivalry, proclaims no deeds of devotion and love!

Even, too, as regards mere language, what an impossible task confronts the translator at every turn! The finest poems owe their charm in part, it is true, to their sentiment, but in part also to the flowing sentences and polished phrases in which the author clothes his ideas. Take any of the great poets of the world, Shakespeare, Virgil, Homer, Dante, Schiller, Sàdi. Who dare lay a sacreligious hand on the masterpieces which live in the pages of immortality? So Mr. Foster-Barham has failed; but he has produced a very attractive volume, not so much from a poetical as a practical point of view. The scenes which he depicts are so stirring; the reader lives in such an atmosphere of romance and heroism; warriors are so bold, lovers so maidenly, knights so courtly, and foes so courageous, that an irresistible attraction is lent to the tale, which is at once interesting and full of adventure.

CANADA AND THE STATES.*

"A British Railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific!" Such has been one of the dreams of Sir Edward Watkin's life, and the problem has been solved. During the period 1851 to 1886, to which his work relates, "the American Continent has been spanned by three main routes of iron road, uniting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans; and one of these main routes passes exclusively through British territory—the Dominion of Canada. The problem of a 'North-West Passage' has been solved in a new and better way. It is no longer a question of threading dark and dismal seas within the limits of Arctic ice and snow, doubtful to find, and impossible, if found, to navigate." In this great and stupendous feat the member for Hythe has played an important and proud part; he suggested, he negotiated, he encouraged, he financed, and he triumphed. What he did and how he did it his present Recollections clearly and succinctly explain, and the story is pleasantly and profitably told.

It is refreshing, too, in the days of paltry selfishness and personal aggrandisement to find an individual working for his country's good, struggling as far as in him lays to advance the welfare of his native land, endeavouring to put aside the peddling notions of the village vestry and assume the rôle of the statesman. Equally satisfactory is it to learn that in the end such a man met with his reward. Mr. Edward Watkin, the Trent Railway manager, is now Sir Edward Watkin, Bart., M.P. He has lived to reap the fruit of his labours; an "Imperialist," he has witnessed the confederation of an empire; a loyalist, he has seen the growing patriotism of the Canadian Dominions reject with scorn and contumely the nefarious attempts of the "Separatists" to bring ruin and misery amongst a happy, prosperous, and contented nation; and we hope he will remain amidst us to a ripe old age, and join in the pæan which will resound under the vault of Heaven, when all the English-speaking races of the world are united in one common aim and object to extend the blessings of peace and civilisation in every direction where there is land to inhabit and air to breathe.

Sir Edward Watkin has written a very valuable work, which should be read by all who take an interest in the burning question of Imperial Federation, the grandest problem which the nineteenth century has propounded for the consideration of this "neat little, tight little island."

THE TOUCHSTONE OF PERIL.†

All who value Mr. Thomas's admirable tale of the Mutiny of 1857 will learn with pleasure that the public have been discerning enough to call for a second edition of that most fascinating novel, which possesses the additional merit that it is founded on fact.

THE INDIAN MAGAZINE.

The Indian Magazine for July (London: Kegan Paul; Bristol: Arrowsmith) opens, appropriately enough, with a notice by its indefatigable editor of the Jubilee day in London and in England generally, which is followed by Miss Roberts's sketch of the Empress Queen's Accession and of the earlier events of her reign. This will be found interesting by those readers of the magazine—should there be such—who have not previously read other accounts relating to the same period of history.

The question, a burning one in England, but even more so in India, of "woman," receives in this, as in previous issues of the Indian Magazine, full attention. A brief article on Female Education in Southern India gives encouraging particulars of progress, while the lamentable absence of proper medical aid for Indian women, at the most critical periods of their lives, is again, and not superfluously, insisted on by "Veritas." The meeting of the "Punjab Association in aid of Social Progress and Education" last April, on the occasion of the distribution of prizes, furnished the new Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. Lyall, with an opportunity of expressing his opinions on this most important subject, as well as on the education and marriage questions. It is encouraging to be informed on his authority, that female education is duly progressing in Mysore, that the Hindus in Madras may be expected, ere long, to seek (as their brethren in Bengal now do) educated young men instead of Kulin Brahmans, as husbands for their daughters, and that he looks forward to satisfactory results, as regards all these matters, in the Punjab. Turning to Bombay, we find not a little interesting information on "Marriage Customs in Western India" in Mr. Gulam Munshee's paper.

The July number of the Army and Navy Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) is a very good one, the most striking paper in it being, perhaps, that on "Our War Administration." It bears no signature, but it contains some very practical, if somewhat startling, suggestions, not the least of which is a recommendation that the Admiralty and War Office should be placed under the control of one Minister of War, and it is argued that such unification would result in decreased estimates and greater efficiency. The late Lord Sandhurst is said to have held a similar view, but the question is not an easy one to decide, and we doubt if the arrangement proposed would be considered feasible by the Services. We are glad to see Mr. C. T. Buckland amongst the contributors to the pages of this magazine. He, General Mitchell and Colonel Rivett-Carnac furnish very readable papers on "Hydrophobia in India," "Tommy Atkins as he is," and the "Early History of Bombay and Madras Presidencies." "A Visit to Norfolk Island" is interesting, and Mr. Van Weenen contributes a strange tale, "The Black Wreath." "On Leave" seems briefer, but not less brisk than usual.

In the Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) for May, Captain Gall continues his clever papers on "Modern Tactics"; General X. tells in capital style "The Invasion of Guernsey," and Mr. L'Estrange gives a further carefully compiled account of the Russian Army. The reminiscences of one who evidently knew the old 90th well form very pleasant reading, and in the illustrations given we recognise several familiar faces. "The British Empire as a Military Power" is an able paper by a Staff Officer, and the story of our Military Station in Cawnpore will be read with interest—a sad story, but one which will ever be remembered in English annals—whilst sacrifice and self-devotion are held in esteem by English hearts. The illustrations are varied and profuse, and quite up to the usual mark in this ably-conducted and popular magazine.

Messrs. Longmans' new and popular edition of Standard Authors embraces on this occasion "Thicker Than Water," by James Payn, and "In the Carquinez Woods," by Bret Harte, both works that have made their mark. Our comment is the usual praise, usque ad nauseam.

CAPTURE OF DACOITS IN CENTRAL INDIA.—The Central Provinces are attaining as unenviable a notoriety as Burma for dacoity. The exploits of Tantia Bheel are as daring as those of the renowned Robin Hood of old. There are also several gangs of Vilaiti dacoits, who, unlike Tantia, have recourse to murder and violence with very little hesitation. A heavy dacoity was committed about a month ago at Kattiagaon in his Highness Holkar's territories; Rs. 18,000 and five muskets were plundered, while two policemen were killed. Not long ago, again, there were two dacoities in Bhojpur, of the Bhopal State, where property of some value was plundered, and an old woman tortured. A large band of Vilaitis responsible for these offences had been traced to its hiding-place in the Vindhya range, on the borders of Bhopal and Nimawar. Arrangements were made which would have secured the capture of the whole crew, but at the last moment the leaders received a warning, and the gang has scattered. Several of them have, however, been picked up, and eleven are now in confinement in Bhopal waiting for trial. The difficulty is to obtain evidence sufficient for conviction, as the villagers give out that they dare not recognise either men or property, being persuaded that if they do their death at the hands of the dacoits is only a matter of time. Some of the captured men have, however, offered to turn Queen's evidence, and in this way a conviction may be established. So far very little of the stolen property has been obtained. Some Rs. 700 worth of ornaments worn by Hindu women have been recovered from certain houses in Bhopal where these Vilaitis, now under arrest, lived; but the bulk of the plunder has been effectually concealed. The leaders of the gang are still being closely pursued, but with their thorough knowledge of the country and people their escape is almost a certainty. It is believed that intimation of the projected attack on them was conveyed to these people through the treachery of one of the Bhopal police.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MR. BRIGHT ON INDIA.

IT can hardly be gratifying to Mr. A. K. Connell to find when he delivers his views upon India to an English audience, with Mr. John Bright in the chair, that the newspapers ignore the lecturer and his views, and report only what the chairman thinks fit to say. On Friday afternoon a meeting of the East India Association was held at the Westminster Town Hall, under the presidency of Mr. Bright, when a paper was read by Mr. Connell on the subject of "The Indian Civil Service and the Further Admission of Natives of India." A large number of Indian gentlemen were present, and a long discussion followed, in which Mr. Martin Wood, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, Dr. Leitner, Sir Charles Elliott, Sir R. Wilson, Mr. Nanderhal Ghosh, and others took part. But the newspapers which so far report the meeting do not trouble their readers with any precis even of the lecturer's views, or of those of the gentlemen who afterwards discussed them. The British public is supposed to interest itself only in what Mr. John Bright says upon the subject, and only Mr. Bright's sentiments are recorded. This seems hard upon Mr. Connell and his friends, but he has only himself to thank. He possibly thought, and correctly too, that Mr. Bright would be a "draw," otherwise there might have been a beggarly account of empty benches; but he hardly could have imagined that the reporters would altogether ignore himself and his subject, and give to the world only the sentiments of his chairman. Such, however, has been the case, and it is only with those sentiments that the Press has chosen to deal.

Mr. John Bright has often spoken upon Indian questions; indeed, he told Mr. Connell's audience on Friday last that he commenced taking an interest in such questions upwards of thirty years ago, and that in 1853 he did his best to prevent a renewal of the East India Company's Charter. He did not succeed in rendering that signal service to India, but in a debate in the House of Commons when Sir Charles Wood, as President of the Board of Control, made a speech of five hours' duration in eulogy of the East India Company's government of India, he replied in a speech of two hours' length. "I thought then as I think now, that I had very much the best of the argument," was the modest opinion which Mr. Bright gave utterance to in mentioning this circumstance. "I recollect that one of the statements I made against the East India Company was that in the town of Manchester, which I then represented in Parliament, and which then, I suppose, had not more than half of its present population, the municipal corporation had in the previous fourteen years expended more money in public improvements and advantages for the town and its population than the East India Company had expended in the same period through the whole of its vast territories, with their countless millions of population. I showed how entirely failing was the Indian Government of that time in the duties which we and the Indian people had a right to expect from it." This is one of those bold assertions which Mr. Bright never hesitates to make when at a loss for substantial arguments. Assertions with him often take the place of facts. In this instance he leaves it to be inferred that the East India Company did nothing for the material or moral improvement of the magnificent possession which in 1858 they made over to the Crown. "Since then there has been a wonderful step forward in India, although it might have been still more wonderful. There have been canals dug—some of them not very successful undertakings—railways made over a large but by no means sufficient area, and telegraphs established to all the principal portions of the country. There have been many steps taken on behalf of education, and there has also been in existence a free Press, and not only a free Press, but apparently a right of public meeting in various parts of India where are discussed freely all kinds of public questions." Did none of these things exist under the old company's rule? Mr. Bright was addressing an audience not altogether ignorant of Indian history, nor altogether wanting in personal experience of India itself, yet he coolly tells them as fact what they knew to be fiction; but none of them, in the discussion which followed, on the reading of Mr. Connell's paper had the courage to expose the audacity and ignorance, real or assumed, of the speaker. Mr. Bright's utterances about India have always been accepted by a certain class of persons as oracular, never to be questioned or gainsayed. His interest in and love for the Natives of that country have been accepted as sincere and profound, although he would at one time have had India perish rather than let the commercial interests of Manchester be imperilled. There is no English statesman living who has taken up Indian questions in so rash and perfunctory a manner. The eloquence which gives him his power over multitudes does not care to be always fettered to the hard logic of facts. And this leads the great orator into what the Times, commenting upon the speech we refer to, calls "characteristic exaggeration."

Mr. Connell and his friends, however, received little help from this great friend of India in discussing the question of the further admission of Natives into the Indian Civil Service—the object for which the meeting met. Mr. Connell has, of course, his own suggestions, which he has more than once offered for the consideration of Government, but the support which Mr. Bright afforded him could hardly have been what he expected. The great Tribune was modest and moderate in approaching the question. "I am not competent," said he, "to determine the mode or extent in which it should be done. I myself have never been in India, and there are many people who have been there a good while who do not know much about it; but I say with proper humility that if I had the whole of this matter to settle, if I had to draw up a Bill or proclamation or minutes of Council I should be very much puzzled what to do in these conditions. Because you could not say, for example, that a given per centage of the population in India should take offices to the same extent that Englishmen there do, for with the enormous population of 200,000,000 it is quite obvious that the Natives of India would have the whole of the offices in their own hands." This is what the aspiring Bengali Babú and his English admirers would wish done, but Mr. Bright continues: "No friend of India would say that the great bulk of the 200,000,000 are qualified by education, experience, or independence of character to undertake the great offices of such a vast country." And so all that Mr. Bright can suggest is to express a hope that as the attention of the people of England has been called to the matter "something may be done." This is "cold comfort" for Babúdom, but we rejoice to find that Mr. Bright is now on the side of those who would wait upon events rather than hasten them by unwise agitation. Let the aspirants and agitators content themselves with the assurance which he offers them, that "the English people are anxious that the Government of India should be a wise Government, and that all that is sensible and intelligent in that country among the Natives should have an opportunity of taking a share in that Government." It is impossible, says the Times, to find fault with sentiments thus moderately expressed. But fault will be found in the seditious Native papers of India, although it will be a new thing to read, as we shall do now, attacks in the vernacular upon the quondam idol of young India—John Bright. "The whirligig of Time brings in his revenges!"

Major E. V. Stace has resumed his appointment as Joint Administrator of Rajpipla.

THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE.—It is no easy thing to defeat the Russians on the other side of Kabul in open fighting. If it were not impossible the English would have tried to do it. As they do not possess the power to drive the Russians away, they ought to confine themselves to India, and they are practically doing so. But they are not silent. They are always anxious about Russia, and spending a great deal of money in making warlike preparations. But they will not be able to drive the Russians away if they double the number of their troops. If, after passing through Kabul, the Russians encamp at Peshawur, the English will not be able to check their advance. If they can reach Peshawur they will be able to conquer, and the English will not be able to do anything. The English may possess India without any anxiety if the Natives are satisfied, but by increasing the expenditure they are displeasing the Natives and thereby courting danger. Lord Mayo warned them, and John Bright has repeatedly drawn their attention to the subject. Will not the English come to their senses?—The Sahachar.

STATEMENT BY THE LASCAR CREW OF THE TASMANIA.

The following is a statement made by the Lascar crew of the Tasmania, who arrived in Bombay by the s.s. Malwa. The crew were interviewed by a representative of the Jame-Jamshed, to whom they narrated their story as follows :—

We were roused from sleep at four o'clock in the morning, when the steamer struck on the rock. We immediately hastened aft, and in a short time the chief officer ordered us to get the boats ready, upon which we went on to the port-side to set right the cutter, the lifeboat, and other boats. The ship was then partly resting upon the rock on its port-side, having the starboard-side overhead. We removed the canvas which covered the boats, corked the holes, and tried our best to swing out the cutter and the lifeboat, which had been swung in-board the previous day. But the heavy sea which constantly swept the deck filled up these boats with water before we could swing them out, and they were, with the heavy weight of the water and the buffeting of the waves, which were breaking over the ship every moment, smashed in no time. One jolly-boat, on this side, which was always kept ready with oars, rowlocks, &c., to be launched in the sea on any occasion of emergency, was tried to be lowered by the fifth officer and a European passenger. In this attempt the officer lost his life by being drowned. The passenger was seen to be in the boat, which began to drift away. As all the boats on this side were already smashed, the chief officer ordered us to shift to the starboard-side and get the boats on that side ready. We lost no time in removing the canvas from the boats on the starboard side. We are quite certain when we state that the canvas was removed from all the boats by us, and that they had been completely fitted up beforehand with masts, oars, rowlocks, buckets, &c. Some men were engaged in swinging out the cutter, the cock-boat, and the mail-boat, which were swung in-board the previous day. At the same time one European quartermaster attempted, with the assistance of two lascars, to lower the gig. While it was being lowered, a sudden rising of the waves flung the boat from side to side with violence and shipped a heavy sea in it, which shattered the boat to pieces in a moment. The mail boat, which was also swung in-board the previous day was then turned out, and lowered with the assistance of a lascar tindal, three lascars, and a few passengers. Two of the lascars went into the boat to prevent it from being smashed against the side of the ship. The boat was successfully lowered, but presently it began to go adrift with its two occupants, who tried their best to bring it forward. Seeing that the boat would drift away with the current, a lascar (named Fakir Mahomed), and simultaneously with him the doctor, the carpenter, and one passenger, jumped overboard to seize it. A quartermaster, who was clinging to the gig, which was smashed while being lowered, also went into the mail-boat, A lascar (named Adum Suleman), who was working near the cock-boat, fell overboard at this moment, and swam to join these men in their attempts at securing the mail-boat. They were all taken up on the boat by the two lascars who were already in possession of it, and by their joint efforts the boat was brought safe near the ladder where the ladies and children were standing prepared to go on shore. The captain and the chief officer, while standing on the gang way, handed down some of the ladies and children into the boat with the help of the friends and relations of those ladies. The boat was despatched in charge of the doctor, the carpenter, one quartermaster, and four lascars. It is a fact that a Seedee fireman had concealed himself in this boat. On the way the doctor in the mail boat observed the ship's jolly-boat at a distance, which contained only one European passenger. The boat was seen to drift in another direction. He immediately changed his course towards the jolly-boat, and, having overtaken it, transferred two of the lascars, one European steward, and one fireman from his boat to the jolly-boat, to help the European passenger. When it was thus equipped, the lascars tried to pull the boat to the shore, the European steward steering it. While nearing the shore a heavy wave upset the boat, and the inmates had to wade as best they could to the shore. The cutter, which was likewise turned in the day before, was by the order of the chief officer swung out and lowered by the lascars, assisted by some of the stewards, firemen, &c. The gunner or the boatswain was in the boat. As the lascars were required to work at the other boats, this boat was manned by quartermasters and European stewards. A second batch of the ladies and children was put on board this boat at the ladder. While they were being handed down, some of the passengers impatiently rushed forward to secure their own seats in the boat. The captain checked as many of them as he could. The cock-boat was also by this time lowered with the help of firemen, European engineers, and some passengers. Two lascars went into the boat to prevent it from being dashed against the ship. It was manned by three officers of the ship, the butcher, a few European stewards, one quartermaster, and two lascars. All the rest of the ladies and children and some mail passengers were put into this boat. Other male passengers again tried to make a rush to the boat, but they were advised to wait and take their turn when the boats returned from shore. In spite of this remonstrance, some passengers succeeded in entering the boat. In the course of lowering this cock-boat the captain received a blow on one of his temples from a broken oar, which caused him to bleed. The only men now left on the steamer were the captain, the chief officer, four engineers, the chief steward, the joiner, two quartermasters, the storekeeper, two European stewards (out of about twenty-four), and some Goanese galley-men and waiters. Out of thirty-eight lascars only six were sent in two boats, and the remaining thirty-two were left on the ship. About two o'clock in the afternoon, seeing that the boats did not return, the captain and the chief officer ordered us to make a raft. We got together boat-spars, the wooden hatch frames, the booms which support the awning, heavy wooden railing, and many other things useful in making a raft. In this work we were assisted by the chief officer, the chief engineer, the ship's joiner, and two of the passengers. It was finished at about four o'clock, safely put into the sea, and secured at the ship's side. We then began to make a second raft in a similar manner. When it was half completed a sudden rush of the heavy sea carried it away into the sea with a European passenger (Earl of Buckinghamshire) and the ship's serang, who were upon it. Fortunately, the passenger who happened to be near at hand caught hold of the line which was thrown at him by the chief officer and the tindal, and secured himself on the first raft, which was fastened alongside the ship. But the old serang drifted with the half-finished raft, and the lines were thrown at him from the ship without any effect. The good-natured passenger, who had secured himself on the fastened raft, threw the line at the serang with all the force at his command. But owing to the great distance between them, this attempt also failed. The serang having, in the meantime, tumbled out of the raft, swam hard to secure it. Perceiving that he could yet swim to the ship even at such a distance, he pulled off his coat, but, as the raft had, in the meanwhile, drifted further away, he called out to the Lascars on board the steamer with a loud voice, and said, "If God wills it, and I am alive, you will find me on the shore. But if I die, take care of my son, who is on board, and protect all those whom I have left behind." The serang must have bound himself to the raft with a cord in order to cling to it, for some of us found his corpse when we went on shore. This serang was distinguished in the service of the P. and O. Company for his maritime experience, and had in the old times in the sailing ships even done the responsible work of the European boatswain or gunner. About fifteen minutes after this occurrence nine of the Seedees, firemen and coal-trimmers, seemed to have conspired, and, in spite of all remonstrances from the engineers and officers, cut the ropes which fastened the first raft to the side of the ship and took possession of it. We learnt afterwards that only one man succeeded in reaching the shore alive. Meanwhile tremendous waves, coming one after the other in rapid succession, swept along the ship's deck, and the captain, who stood near his cabin holding the cabin-door, was once or twice knocked down by their force. The chief officer, the lascar tindal and a lascar tried their best to persuade the captain to take up a more secure position ; but he declined to do so, and said, "I am all right here." A short time after this two or three formidable waves washed him off in the direction of the forecastle, and he was seen no more. At about five o'clock in the evening, as a quartermaster, the lascar-lampman, and a lascar were standing together, a heavy wave dashed against them and carried the quartermaster away, who was seen no more. The lascar-lampman escaped with a fracture of his ribs, and the other lascar with an injury to the back. The European passengers had taken refuge in the smoking-room, whilst we had to take shelter near the stern and in the rigging, where we were occasionally drenched by the passing waves. We stood the whole night in this position in our night-clothes, which we had not changed since the wreck of the steamer. Besides the European passengers, all the European staff of the ship had found their way into the smoking-room with the exception of one quartermaster and the chief steward, who sought shelter behind the wall of the smoking-room, warmly clad in blankets. Of the natives only the personal attendant of the chief officer and that of the chief engineer, together with two or three Goanese waiters, were allowed to remain in the room. Two of the lascars, who kept their watch and exposed themselves on the previous night, and who worked with us the whole of the day, expired, the one at about seven o'clock in the evening and the other at four o'clock in the morning of the second day. Two punkha boys died of the biting cold at midnight, in our midst after the exposure of twenty hours, with barely sufficient clothes on. About four o'clock in the morning, however, we were cheered up by the sight of a steamer steaming up to us. It sent out a boat to us, which carried away the passengers in small groups, and took us up last, the chief officer and the chief engineer following us. We could not praise our captain and the chief officer too highly for the calm and collected way in which they encouraged us to work. With such encouragement and guidance from officers, if we, who have eaten the salt of the Company for so many years, were called upon to risk our lives in perilous times to save our ships, we would work away cheerfully and manfully, not caring a jot for the consequences. We remained without food or water, unsheltered and unprotected, for nearly twenty-seven hours. Some of the men of the engine-room crew, the Seedee firemen and coal-trimmers, began to die in the evening. They were necessarily very scantily clothed, as they had to work near the hot furnaces, as were also those men who came to relieve them when their watch for the day was over. Of the lascars only two men died doing their duty, and yet we have heard that on the representation of one or two of our passengers the English Press raised a cry and denounced us as a class. Many of us have met with rougher weather than this. About six years ago, when the steamer Lombardy encountered a heavy storm in the Bay of Biscay, which blew up all her boats and caused much damage even to the extent of compelling the commander of the ship to turn the steamer back, some of us who were in that ship had manfully withstood the tempest, and, on its way to Southampton, we had worked in knee deep snow and climbed to the tops of the masts without any one of us yielding to the rigour of the elements. We have worked in the piercing cold of England, which is sometimes so severe that one could not clench his fist, and this fact is well known to our captains and officers who appreciate our services. And on this occasion, in spite of our faithful service, our strict obedience to orders and our unflinching endeavours to afford every convenience to the passengers in the face of the bitter cold and the buffeting of waves to which we were exposed, we have been mercilessly decried in certain quarters. Our captain was a thorough gentleman, and, if God had spared him, he would surely have appreciated our efforts and the hardships to which we were subjected.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect, to the Royal Academy :—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle on-Tyne,
May 25, 1887.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

(Signed) LAMB AND ARMSTRONG, Architects.

[Published at Observer Office, Colombo, Ceylon, on or about the 1st of each month. Commenced in June, 1881.]

"THE TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST" has now an assured position in its large circulation in Ceylon, Southern and even Central and Northern India, the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America, Natal, Mauritius, and the West Indies. From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had cordial approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. The English, Indian, and Colonial Press have spoken in commendatory terms of the T. A., as also Directors of Public Gardens, from Sir Joseph Hooker, F.R.S., downwards, and so have all planters.

 No planter should be without it

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies (Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repertory of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

 For the sale of plants, seeds, machinery, implements, &c., used in tropical (tea, sugar, fibres, &c.) agriculture, no better advertising medium exists.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

THE course of instruction is designed to PREPARE BOYS (Sons of Gentlemen, from 7 years of age) to occupy the positions of Land Owners and Occupiers, Land Agents, Surveyors, intending Colonists, &c. The education secured at this institution is of a very superior character, the whole object of the School being to impart a thoroughly practical and scientific knowledge of all agricultural subjects; a thorough moral, intellectual, and physical training, it pledges itself to send forth its pupils practically religious and sound scholars. The school is most pleasantly situated in a healthy locality. The greatest possible care is bestowed upon the health and domestic comfort of the pupils. The diet is excellent and unlimited. The school is very strongly recommended. References throughout Great Britain.—Address for prospectus the PRINCIPAL, Maypole Road, East Grinstead, Sussex.

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scenes from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, JULY 16, 1887.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 28th June; from Allahabad and Madras to the 26th June; and from Calcutta to the 25th June.

MATTERS still remain very disturbed in Afghanistan.

THE Ghazis of the Inder and Turki tribes, after a severe struggle, have been defeated by the Ameer's troops in the Suleiman Kheyls country, the inhabitants of which, it is reported, routed the Ameer's troops the following day.

A REPORT from Kandahar states that the Hotak Ghilzais are dispersing in consequence of being unable to obtain sufficient food supplies.

SEVERAL successful encounters between our troops and dacoit bands are reported from Burma. In one case a whole gang, numbering 224 men, surrendered without resistance.

THE French Consul-General is now in Simla in connection with the claims for compensation by Frenchmen in Upper Burma at the time of annexation.

THE 21st June, Her Majesty's Jubilee day, was observed throughout India as a holiday.

THE Bombay Artillery Volunteers has held its first drill.

A GOVERNMENT OF INDIA Resolution has been published, thanking General Brown and his staff for their services on the Sind-Peshin Railway.

THOMAS THOMAS, a clerk in the Bombay Currency Office, is being tried for criminal breach of trust in respect to large sums of money.

MR. LARPENT, the Registrar of the Punjab University, has been suspended, pending inquiry into the charges brought against him.

THE Indian railways report for the past year is a very satisfactory one.

THE mileage open for traffic was 13,390¼ miles, and 88,433,318 passengers were carried. The merchandise traffic amounted to 19,576,365 tons.

OF the gross receipts 599 lakhs was earned by the coaching traffic and 1,238 lakhs by the goods traffic.

THE court-martial at Poona has declared Lieutenant Way "not guilty" on the second charge brought against him of conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

THE VICEROY entered upon his sixty-second year on the 21st June—Jubilee day.

IT is settled that the Fine Arts Exhibition at Simla will be opened towards the end of September.

NARI MAGAZINE, belonging to the Bolan State Railway, was blown up on the 14th inst.

OBITUARY.—Major J. Gordon, Royal Irish Fusiliers, D.A.Q.M. General, Peshawur Division, at Cherat; Rev. J. B. Venton, at Rangoon.

MAJOR G. W. BERESFORD, Bengal Staff Corps, retired from the service on the 23rd June.

NOTES.

How many of us recollected, in sharing the joy of the nation last month, that it was exactly thirty years since the terrible outbreak of the Bengal Army? Apparently none of those concerned in the government of that Empire, which was then so near dismemberment and disgrace. Of all the surviving heroes of that time—and what time was ever more heroic?—there is not one whose name appears on the list of Jubilee honours.

SOME of the most deserving of those men are still living; and it would have been well had the fountain of honour scattered some drops upon their ancient heads. James Abbott, untitled, is living his simple life in a cottage in the Isle of Wight. Wallace Dunlop, one of the best soldiers that never wore a uniform, is growing old at Ealing. Robert Spankie, whose vigilant and resolute skill saved the women and children of Masuri from inconceivable horrors, has never had, beyond a letter from the India Office, the smallest acknowledgment; any more than the Marquis of Tweeddale, who saved the sister sanitarium of Simla; March-Phillipps, the gallant champion of Agra, is still undecorated. Sherer, Sapte, Thornhill, who fought and administered districts as large as English counties, are still alive, and still unrecognised for their great services.

SURELY, when an order of knighthood of "The Indian Empire" was being created, it would not have been unreasonable to confer the distinction upon those but for whom that Empire would not now exist! The deeds of these men will be found related in Mr. Keene's "Fifty-Seven."

THE doings of some of the men there mentioned are of almost incredible merit. Dunlop took out 139 men—of whom the most had never smelt powder—and cut between a Jat insurrection and a brigade of all arms sent out for its support from Delhi. He came upon the Jats before the regulars could join them, and killed over 400 of them, their leader included. The brigade on hearing the news retired to Delhi without attacking him. We doubt if this has ever been equalled, for happy audacity, in all the annals of warfare.

SPANKIE put down a civil rebellion and two military mutinies, thereby keeping the peace at Saharanpur, and helping Mr. H. G. Keene to keep the Dún, so that, of all the helpless people of our race seeking refuge at Masuri, not one lost a hair of the head or a stick of property.

MARCH-PHILLIPS, charged two regiments of cavalry at Agra with seventeen volunteer horsemen, and fought in a way that a soldier who was present (the late Hon. W. M. Fraser) declared to the writer of this he could not have believed.

BRAND-SAPTE rode with Tyrwhitt up to a gun vomiting grape down the street of Bulandshahr.

SHERER was in all Havelock's actions in the advance on Cawnpore, after having brought away all the Europeans in safety from Yatehpur, with the exception of one half-madman, who preferred to remain and be killed.

NOT one of these men failed to administer his district, or provide the military officers with all possible supplies. Not one stained his hand with innocent blood. Are such men not deserving of honours when the officials in high places are decorating one another?

A CONTEMPORARY to-day says: "The great Indian Prince Holkar has been grievously offended by some lack of courtesy on the part of those who had the duty of entertaining the Queen's Jubilee guests, and he has left England in high dudgeon. These Indians never forgive a slight, and England should look to it that she may not suffer hereafter for this. Holkar commands 60,000 of the finest troops in India, and it will be a bad thing if, when the hour of need comes, he should, like Achilles, sulk in his tent, and refuse his assistance. Whether Holkar was offended or not he certainly was offered no slight. He, like his predecessor, is not the most amiable of Orientals, but his power to do us harm is not so great as our contemporary imagines, and his army of 60,000 men are not of the description imagined by our contemporary."

IT is satisfactory to find that the vernacular Press of India can be loyal to English rule as well as hostile. The Victoria Paper, a daily journal published at Sialkote, makes the following remarks regarding an article which appeared in a Lucknow paper in support of Dulip Singh's claims:—"The article published in the Hindostanee on the Maharajah Dulip Singh did not, in our opinion, deserve a place in a respectable vernacular paper. It is quite wrong to suppose that the British Government has in any way ill-treated the Maharajah; but if the latter cannot remain loyal, or cannot remember the numerous favours conferred on him by the British Government, he must abide by the consequences of his folly. Those newspapers who profess to sympathise with him are greatly mistaken. Putting newspapers aide, let the Maharajah himself think for a moment, and he will find that he has himself to blame, and not the Government. It is nonsense to say that the appointment of Dulip Singh to a military command in Central Asia will have any great effect on the people of the frontier. In the first place, it does not seem probable that the Czar of Russia, who is in constant danger of his life at the hands of the Nihilists, will take any such step at so critical time. Even if he does so Dulip Singh will cease to have any weight in public estimation, because a man who does not prove faithful to his own benefactors cannot command the respect of the public."

A STATEMENT has been published "on the best authority" that the Viceroy during his stay last April at Dehra had an interview with, and made certain proposals to, Yakub Khan. The Pioneer, referring to this, says:—"We may state on the authority of hard facts that not a shadow of foundation exists for such a mischievous rumour being set afloat. Here, again, we must deprecate the invention and circulation of stories which are calculated to arouse the Amir's suspicions forthwith. Abdul Rahman has trouble enough in his own dominions without being worried by doubts as to the sincerity of the Government of India."

ALLEGED RUSSIAN SPY.—A correspondent of the Lahore paper at Peshawar states that a pretended Samarkandi pilgrim, accompanied by a man from Chitral, passed through Peshawar recently on his way to Bombay. This man is stated to be in reality a Russian spy; and, instead of going on to Mecca, he will remain at Bombay.

THE report of the sea-borne trade of the Bengal Presidency for the year 1886-87 contains an item which will be highly gratifying to temperance advocates. With the exception of beer and porter, every kind of liquor showed a decline in the year's imports; and even in the case of beer Messrs. Bass and Co. had twice to reduce the strength of their brew "in the hope of meeting the public taste." The decline of spirits of all kinds, brandy, whisky, gin, etc., was four-and-a-half per cent. on the previous year, and fourteen hundred cases of Exshaw were re-imported to the United Kingdom, as a suitable price could not be obtained for them here. Gin appears to have gone much out of favour, as there were only 13,458 gallons imported last year, whereas ten years ago the importations were 45,898 gallons. The decline in wines and liquors was greater still, last year's importations being ten per cent. less than those of 1885-86, and the lowest ever tabulated in a single year. Champagne declined eight per cent., claret five per cent., port 23½ per cent., sherry 13 per cent. The attempt to introduce Australian wines meets no encouragement. To quote the report:—"A steady decline is noticeable in the consumption of wines for many years past, and there can be no doubt that the number of people in this country who drink wine is diminishing, owing possibly to the necessity for stricter economy, or perhaps partly to the growth of temperate habits."

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

UPPER BURMA WATER SUPPLY.

(Rangoon Times.)

The acquisition of Upper Burma has not only intensified responsibilities which are common to both sections of the present province, but has extended these responsibilities in directions we may term new, as hitherto they have not been known to us. And one direction in which our responsibilities have been extended is that of famines. Famines are not only a present evil but a distinct menace for the future; nor can the dire results of a succession of famines be too much exaggerated. The people of this province, especially those of Upper Burmah, are poor and improvident; certainly those of the lower part of the country are. If, therefore, famines occur and the Government acknowledges the duty of feeding the famine stricken, the consequence must be serious. Our provincial allotment will never be sufficient; there will be a chronic and ever increasing excess of expenditure, and a chronic and ever increasing derangement as well as drain of provincial finances. It behoves then the local Administration always to keep in sight facts, especially that of the liability of the larger half of the country to recurring scarcity and famine. In Upper India provision was made against the distress of droughts by sinking wells, and such wells too! He who dug a well was not only highly honoured in his lifetime, but his name was handed down to posterity as a public benefactor; the well being usually named after its builder. In Southern India magnificent tanks, formed by bunding across valleys, provided ample storage space for the fluid so precious in the dark days of famine. In both parts we see the principle of storing water against future want modified by local circumstances. Tanks in Upper India, where the level surface and porus substratum of soil militate against such storage, would be as much out of place as wells would be in the south countries. On these storages then cheques, so to speak, were drawn in times of need for all the water required. Now we might do something of the kind in Upper Burmah. Wells, we fear, will not be of much use; but in the plain country we might form artificial lakes for the benefit of crops. We are doing rightly in sending experienced officers to see what can be done with the irrigation canals that in monarchical days supplied the cultivator of grain and pulse with the requisite water for his crops. We might with great benefit to the country give the people of other parts the same boon—irrigation canals. Certainly the rivers of the country, especially the Irrawaddy and the Chindwin, render it easy for us to effect such improvement on a large scale. The country lying between these two streams should be the granary of the upper province just as the plains of Pegu, Hanthawaddy, and Bassein are the granary of the lower province. We would commend the matter to the notice of the Chief Commissioner.

DACOITY IN BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

It is clear that the dacoits in Upper Burma are gradually becoming convinced that their little game is played out, and that further open resistance is useless. The weekly bulletins still mention dacoits here and there it is true; and dacoits are constantly being caught or shot; but a voluntary surrender on their part is now a more frequent occurrence than it was a few months ago. This, of course, may spring from various causes. It may be due in part to their being convinced now that the British Government does not punish any one after the brutal methods of King Theebaw; partly also to the conviction that they are likely to get off more easily if they do surrender, than if they wait until they are actually caught. The spirit of the thing too is gone. Whatever the causes may be, the fact is exceedingly satisfactory. The spirit of lawlessness is effectually curbed at last; and with a steady and judicious display of firmness, and of strict and impartial justice to all, we may expect soon to see the whole of Burma as safe, contented, and law-abiding as British Burma was some few years ago. With peace and security of person and property throughout the length and breadth of the land, is almost certain to come an era of prosperity such as the country has never known before. The land now lying waste will gradually be brought under cultivation, and trade will advance with rapid strides. We have seen in the past the very rapid progress which the sea-board provinces have made under British rule. Now the area of land available is greatly increased, and the population available for productive industry is practically doubled by the annexation, for under Thoebaw's rule, at least, the people of Upper Burma could scarcely be counted as among the productive classes. The incentives to industry, never very high under any Burmese monarch, were gradually being reduced to the vanishing point. Nor is it only the internal development in Burma itself that we have to look to. In the Shan States order and quiet is in a fair way to be established. With order and confidence established in the Shan States the trade with them should grow considerably. So little is known of these regions that it is difficult to form any estimate of what they may be capable of contributing to the general commercial wealth of Burma. But seeing that, in spite of constant inter-tribal feuds, of chronic extortions wherever the trade had to pass, and every reason for distrust on the part of the traders, the trade with the Shans has been an important factor in the trade of Burma during the past; it will probably become daily more important now that these barriers to its expansion have been broken down. For its full development railways are wanted in every direction, and probably also a better system of Government than any the Tsawbwas will be able to carry out, even under British supervision and direction. The full fruits of the work being begun now must be reaped by later generations; but we may expect to see a great advance even in the lifetime of the men who have begun the work.

MADRAS "AT HOME" FIFTY YEARS AGO.

(Madras Times.)

Rather startling words of promise, I am afraid, but interesting, it is to be hoped, as the results of personal observation during a very stirring period in the history of this Presidency. Leaving, then, its institutions and its public buildings—and there was not much to admire in the latter from an artistic point of view—and tearing myself away from the thousand and one spectacles which visitors to Madras fifty years ago rushed to see under whatever tutelage offered itself at the moment, let me act as cicerone to those who would study the pictures of men and things as they flitted before one in the domestic history of the good city, and read, so far as may be read, the inner life of Madrasses from their outward deportment and doings. Overpraised by some, and too severely criticised by others, according to their respective predilections, prejudices, and the circumstances under which people gained their experience of it, Madras in the oldentimes will always find interest. In spite, then of the likelihood of being identified with some of the incidents of my experience, I fall back upon precedent, and honi soit qui mal y voit. A writer of the last generation compared the whole city to one huge hotel; confining the comparison to those parts of it which alone it was then the fashion to visit it was neither inappropriate nor unjust. People used to take the hospitality of fifty to sixty years ago as their right; there were no hotels deserving of the name, and such as did affect that distinction were of the lowest or "Punch House" class, as such establishments were frequently called—low boozing-kens, where cadets and strangers without letters of introduction used sometimes to be hocussed and robbed. Many of the rich merchants, judges and other stars of first magnitude used to send their carriages to the beach when an "Indiaman" arrived, to bring up any of the first-class (male or female) passengers who chose to accept their hospitality, the old fashioned Madras houses having spare rooms especially devoted for this purpose. The cost of such open-handed hospitality would be enormous in the present days; but a sheep could then be bought for eight to ten annas, a fowl for an anna and a half, and other articles in proportion. The great point in those days, and even long after them, was to put as much as possible on the groaning board; so, we hear of a menu consisting of turkeys, roast, brazed or boiled, sirloins of beef, saddles of mutton and boiled legs of the same, served with caper sauce, all steaming under the noses of guests who were doubtless steaming themselves, in spite of the heavy punkahs overhead. Curries and pillaus—the latter, I must explain for the benefit of the uninitiated, consisting of whole fowls and large pieces of mutton smothered in rice, butter, raisins and onions—followed. There were Bengal curries, Madras curries, Ceylon and Bombay curries, each with its own appropriate chutney. Although the guests ate but little of this prodigious display, they were expected to look as if they thoroughly enjoyed the several courses, plats of each of which were set before them by troops of servants, each guest bringing his own. The solemn monotony was now and again broken by invitations from one person to another to take beer, the correct thing under such circumstances being for the inviter to send round for the invitee's tumbler, and, pouring out the liquid himself, to send it back to the lady or gentleman challenged. The quantity of India bottled pale ale drunk in those days would be incredible, if it were not confirmed by indisputable authorities. A dozen quarts a-day for a gentleman and two quarts at dinner alone for a lady used to be no unusual thing. One very curious feature in Madras hospitality was that of offering beer to every caller, even at eleven o'clock in the forenoon. This was done everywhere, even at Government House, and it used to be said that some regular topers—"festive cusses"—would actually go out calling all day—that is, between twelve and two, for the sole purpose of enjoying this peripatetic hospitality. Beer used to be taken everywhere, and whenever a decent excuse could be found, even at ball-suppers, instead of champagne, being preferred by many at a time when soda and ice were unknown quantities. The wines of those days were superb, East India Madeira, sherry, and claret being proverbially good. Very early in the century the captains of the East-Indiamen used to bring out consignments of the choicest crus of claret to friends whose sons or daughters had either sailed out or come in in their vessels, and were rewarded in turn by invitations when they came ashore to stay at their new friends' houses. If somewhat pawkily familiar in virtue of this condescension, their presence was either politely ignored or they were treated with an ultra-ceremonious respect, which succeeded in bringing them to their proper bearings. I do not know how far back I must go in fixing upon the best days of old Madras. It had its Sir Hildebrand Osbaldistones as well as its Squires Western with as few cares as one could conceive. Men appear to have been blessed with vigorous constitutions then, and, judging from the impunity with which they drenched their brains in heavy liquors, they practically refuted the teachings in later days of Mr. John B. Gough and the water-nourished eloquence of Sir Wilfrid Lawson. Taking time by the forelock, they went to dinner in the early afternoon, when I have already shown what they fared on, and continued to sit out the ladies. These, it may be well supposed, had a very dull time of it under such conditions, and had warnings to quit the table when the merriment was beginning to grow warm, and the "malt to git abune the meal." One can conceive the sparkle of the gentlemen's conversation when, "fresh" from a prolonged carouse, they came blundering into the drawing-room. In spite of these drawbacks, men lasted long, though they lived hard; and one may still read the years of not a few on the tombstones that record their manifold virtues. For all that, they must have lived under chronic dyspepsia, which would scarcely lighten the dulness of their intellectual powers; and when they were fairly given over to the gout their choleric tempers became dangerous. Reading had not yet become a necessity of the age, and it was only when life in Madras had grown more refined, and the number of ladies who came out to join their husbands had begun to surround themselves with the appliances of luxury, that book-clubs began to be known, which, in time, were succeeded by regular libraries, started by Messrs. Pharaoh and Hogg and Son. Government House hospitality at the beginning of the century was very exclusive, and people of merry mood found a substitute in the balls and theatricals at the Pantheon Hall, now converted into the Central Museum. Men did not dream of ornamental gardening—landscape or otherwise—till after some travelled grand seigneur had set the fashion; they took things as they found them with the fatalism of Turks, and troubled themselves little about sanitary arrangements, either in house or grounds. I am not able to state at what precise period Madras took to racing, or in what year the race-stand at Guindy was erected; but nearly the first house there was that built and subsequently owned by Mr. Chamier, a member of the Madras Council. When it was an established fact, it was only by those who were very rich or very enthusiastic, or both, that racing came to be patronised. Generals McDowel and Showers, from St. Thomas' Mount, and the Artillery Officers there helped towards extending the movement, and people went to the races, because it was the right thing to do so, and a distingué way of getting rid of one's money. Parties used to be made up from the officers in the Fort, most of whom, if they did not keep racers of their own, stood in with confederates, and got into the way of making books. The Madras Hunt was a poor affair at first, but subsequently rose into high favour; though much commended as a manly and invigorating sport, it had not many backers, having been found more conducive to make men healthy than wealthy.

The modern history of Madras commences with the first year of the reign of her present Imperial Majesty. In the year 1837, Lord John Elphinstone came out to be its Governor. Rumour said that he aspired too high in the matrimonial direction, and that he was expatriated to Madras to keep him out of harm's way. The staid old Civil Servants of the period complained bitterly of a Guardsman for a Governor, but everybody else felt delighted in the change. Government House became a scene of gay entertainments, flirtations and high jinks. By this time Madras had really become a city. A High School, under the rule of Mr. Powell—who afterwards became Director of Public Instruction—was opened with the firing of guns and a speech from the Governor. The Madras Club was established; a beautiful cathedral was reared, not an imitation Gothic, but a large stately erection of white chunam that was as polished as marble. Lord Elphinstone was much liked in spite of many weaknesses, of which little need be said, but which were duly ventilated in the notorious Evening Mail, which exercised an extraordinary fascination for certain classes of readers by its coarse and strongly-flavoured articles. Lord Elphinstone retired betimes, and a public dinner was given him by the Native community of Madras in the building on the Broadway once known as Waddell's Folly, but subsequently remodelled to the present emporium of Messrs. Oakes and Company. Nautch girls "assisted" on the occasion, and one of them belauded the departing chief in the following doggrel,—

"Oh! my honourable Elphinstone!
Thou art truly lord my own
Arrived you with rapidity,
For a protection of this country."

Madras has reigned without a rival in this Presidency for the last half century; nearly all the rank, wealth, and intelligence of Southern India centreing in it.

OLD MORTALITY.

100° FAHRENHEIT.

(Madras Mail.)

"Just a hundred," such the reading.
Now, unless old legends lie,
Crows of Salamander breeding
Solar apoplectic die.

Now the scorpion, nigh to fusion,
All his jointed armour warmed,
Victim of a wild delusion
Deems the lambent circle formed.

Parching, writhing, racked, tormented,
In the burning terrene gale,
Finds, as when flame-circumvented,
Lethal solace in his tail.

When the venom-charged mosquito
Pipes the onset on the wing,
Seeking where no gauzy veto
Bars the advent of his sting:

When the coolest room is Hades;
When, for ice-machines are dear,
Lukewarm lime-juice cheers the ladies,
Men grow sad on tepid beer.

When the good man loathes creation;
When the bad is heard to swear,
Though each laboured objurgation
Feeds upon exhausted air;

Does the question oft obtruding
Straight become the leading thought,—
"Are not Eastern joys deluding
Am I not too cheaply bought?

Fool was I for dross to barter
Pound of flesh and life-blood too,
Am I not a truer martyr
Than the victim of the Jew?"

. . . . . .

Then ignite the fragrant hunkah,
Place your legs upon a chair.
Bid the dog-boy pull the punkah,
Puff your sorrows to the air.

Fashion airy dreams of riches
Tread again the glory-land,
Known in boyhood when the witches
Youth and Hope held either hand.

Muse on pleasure still before you,
Honours that you yet may reap,
Or, if speculations bore you—
Take a peg and go to sleep.

BULBUL.

THE POSITION IN AFGHANISTAN.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Our Native correspondents across the frontier send us so-called information of intrigues and threatened disturbances from the Turkistan side of the Amir's dominions. A list of 40 men of note is supplied to us, who are said to have crossed the frontier as emissaries of Ayub Khan, and have taken up their quarters in different Afghan towns—Herat, Farah, Cabul, among others—or have settled among different tribes. Their presence, according to our informants, is expected to produce simultaneous and wide-spread trouble at no distant date; Sirdar Abdalla Jan Tokhi being specially mentioned as likely to make things uncomfortable for the Amir. In view of the condition of Badakshan and Turkistan, fears are expressed lest the cash and valuables which —in spite of contradiction elsewhere, our Native informants continue to insist—the Amir sent to these places for safe-keeping, will be lost to him. With regard to Turkistan especially, the Native merchants aver that no one of note, excepting Sultan Mairah Khan, Usbeg—the adopted son of the Amir and the Governor of the small province of Talikhan, under the Governor of Kunduz—is favourable to the policy of the British Government in supporting the Amir against Russia. In spite of the alleged condition of these regions, the travellers further state that the Amir, when he heard of the safe arrival of his cash and jewellery, sent off his wife, the daughter of Atikulla Khan, in charge of two faithful servants who accompanied him to the Pindi Darbar, to settle in Turkistan under the safe custody of Murad Khan. Before arriving, however, at their destination, the Amir's agents are said to have discovered that the feeling of the inhabitants was hostile, and therefore returned with their charge to Cabul. With regard to Badakhshan, these Native merchants further state that the Russian Governor of Kolab, on the north side of the Oxus, has frequent personal communications with Abdulla Jan, the Amir's Governor of Badakhshan at Faizabad; and this news reaching Murad Khan, who is mentioned above as being faithful to the Amir, he at once communicated it to Cabul. In reply, it is stated that the Amir informed Murad Khan that his attention was sufficiently occupied by troubles to Afghanistan. He has, however, according to the Native stories, sent presents to the Russian Governor, among them four Kaffir servants; and had instructed Abdulla Jan, the Governor of Badakhshan, to show hospitality and respect to the Russians. Intelligence of this reaching Sher Afzul Khan, the Commander-in-Chief of the Amir's troops in Badakshan—who, according to previous rumours, had repeatedly warned the Amir against the Russians in Badakhshan —he is reported to have been "enraged." If any reliance could be placed on all this so-called information, it would seem that the Amir, feeling himself in a very desperate position, was sending his valuables for safety towards the Russian frontier of his dominion, and preparing to submit to Russian predominance—or merely coquetting with Russia to save time—greatly to the indignation and disappointment of his military commanders on the frontier. Malik Aman, whom our informants have previously described as claiming to be the real heir to Upper Chitral, is now said to have sent a despatch to the Mujahadin, a tribe originally inhabitants of Hindoostan, and numbering some 1,500 fighting men—informing them of his claims, denouncing the present ruler of Chitral as an usurper, and promising that, if they assist him to expel Aman-ul-Mulk, they shall share the fruits of his success. The tribe has, however, the same informants state, sent no reply as yet; but a large sum of money has been sent to the nearest British territory in Hazara for the purchase of arms and ammunition.

SIND AND THE PUNJAB.

The Civil and Military Gazette, in an article on the necessity for the union of Sind with the Punjab, says:—

"We venture to think the time has come when longer delay (in the union) would be highly impolitic. Leaving out of the question for a moment the serious check that is being imposed on the development of the trade and the prosperity of the Punjab and Sind, the paramount importance of bringing under one Local Government, and through it of the immediate direction of the Government of India, the entire line of our North-West Frontier is a matter that just now admits of no delay. Owing to the troubled state of affairs in Afghanistan, and the aggressive attitude of Russia, Karachi may at any time become the basis of military operations to be carried out on or beyond that frontier. During the Afghan War the evils of divided Councils, and want of unity in administration were severely felt; and it is not going too far to attribute the disaster of Naiwand and the consequent blow to our prestige mainly to this cause. Should occasion again arise for the employment of our armies on or beyond the North-West Frontier, it is impossible to exaggerate the value of having the two provinces of Sind and the Punjab united under one administrative head. The Government must, indeed, be blind that does not recognise the possibility of such frontier operations in the not distant future."

The Bombay Gazette, however, takes quite another view of the matter:—

"It may be well to point out that no movement for the annexation of Sind to the Punjab which comes from the Punjab itself will carry much weight, and for that reason we must not take too seriously the pleadings of Lahore upon this subject. With due allowance for Imperial considerations, the determining voice must be that of Sind itself; and Sind, truth to say, does not seem so gravely discontented with the situation as to warrant a disturbance of arrangements which have, on the whole, worked well. It is of no small importance to a Province like Sind, which is perhaps too often spoken of as a backward Province, to be administratively associated with the most vigorous and progressive of all the Indian Governments. Incorporation with the Punjab would entail a distinct lowering of the status of the Province, and it might seriously weaken the guarantees for an adequate representation of local interests at the seat of Government. If the Sindhis set no great stress on being under a Government directly in communication with the Secretary of State, they will not undervalue the advantage of being represented as they now are on a Legislative Council whose functions are quite large enough to enable it to watch over the interests of the Province. The formation of a Harbour Trust at Karachi, the full discussion of the Bill in Committee and in Council, and the careful attention that was paid to local opinion as expressed by the Sindhi Member of Council, illustrate one of the advantages which Sind derives from its connection with Bombay—advantages which it would lose on the day that it passed under a Government tempered with no provision for the representation of local and non-official interests, and wanting in the authority and initiating power which belong to the more fully constituted Governments of the Presidencies."

DULEEP SINGH.

(Times of India.)

Duleep Singh has a grievance against the British Government, and we will not say that his grievance is wholly unfounded. He himself told the story at full length in our columns in March last year. Duleep Singh points out that, when he came to the throne of his father, the famous Sikh Prince Runjeet Singh, he was five years of age. This was in 1843, and soon after came the first struggle between the Sikhs and the British, with the result that the whole Punjab was laid at the feet of the latter. The province was placed under the dictatorship of a British Resident, and the British Government was constituted the guardian of the youthful Maharajah until he should come of age, which would happen, according to Native custom, at sixteen years of age — that is, in 1854. Long before that year, however, the relations between Duleep Singh and the English underwent an entire change. An émeute at Mooltan in 1848 preceded a declared rebellion against the Maharajah's ministers and the British authority, and the sequel was the struggle known as the second Sikh War. Duleep Singh points out, however, that this was not a war levied by the British against his Government or people. It was purely a rebellious movement on the part of some of his subjects, and the British operations were undertaken in his own name and with the assistance of those of his troops (no inconsiderable number) who remained faithful to him. Duleep Singh further points out with considerable force that the trouble arose from no fault of his, he being yet a boy, and that the responsibility therefore rested with his guardians and advisers, the British themselves, who showed culpable remissness and lack of promptitude in dealing with the insurrection. The result, however, was that the Punjab was annexed by the English, and Duleep Singh deposed. The treaty of annexation confiscated all the "property of the State"—Duleep Singh, as will be shown, lays great stress on these last words—to the East Indian Company, by way of indemnity for the expenses of the war. Provision was made for the young Prince, it being expressly stated in the treaty that he was to receive a pension of not less than four and not more than five lakhs of rupees a year—in other words, from £40,000 to £50,000 per annum. The condition was specified that he should remain obedient to the British Government, and should fix his residence where the Governor-General of India should select. Now, Duleep Singh contends that this document makes no mention of a confiscation of any other property save that of the State, and that it did not contemplate excluding him from his private manors or estates, or jewels and personal property. He surrendered the Koh-i-Noor to the Queen of England, an explicit provision being made with reference to the destination of this peerless diamond. He argues that, from the very fact of this special provision being made, his other private possessions were not intended to be confiscated, else they would have been surely mentioned by name. However, the whole, with the exception of some of the jewels of lesser value, were swept away. The ex-Maharajah's allowance was fixed at £12,000 a year, which was increased to £15,000 on his attaining the age of nineteen. Two years later the sum was raised to £25,000, but this was lessened by £7,000 for the payment of interest on sums advanced by the Government for the purchase of the estate of Elveden Hall, in Suffolk, and for premiums on the policies of insurance which the Government required him to effect on his life. Duleep Singh thus contends that his allowance has been far below that stipulated for in the treaty of 1848; that he was wrongfully deprived of the private estates inherited from his father, not as a Maharajah, but as a Sirdar or private landowner; and that the proceeds of the sale of his personal property five-and-twenty years ago have never been accounted for, this property, including valuable moveable property, goods, furniture shawls, plate, arms, and ornaments of the chase and war being estimated by him as worth, at a moderate computation, a million pounds sterling. Such is the recital of Duleep Singh's grievances. In asking for redress he explicitly stated that he did not aspire to be re-instated on the throne of the Punjab, that he did not expect the realisation of the whole of what he considered his just claims, but that he simply wanted the payment of the residue of the pension fixed to him by the 1848 treaty. Well, Duleep Singh's representations to Government met with no success. Hence his throwing off the allegiance, and his declared hostility to England. As we have said, this hostility counts for little or nothing. Still, there is something sad in the whole story, and perhaps, after all, the disputed two lakhs and a half per annum might well have been paid to the Maharajah, even though he can find no Court of Law competent to test his claims or enforce his rights.

SOLDIERS v. VILLAGERS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

A horrible murder of a Pathan is alleged to have been recently committed by three British soldiers near Quetta. Of such crimes as this we do not now speak; but there are minor and more frequent cases of violence on one side or the other which create bad blood, that may at any time culminate in crime. Is it not time that some attempt were made to deal with the question of offence, real or fancied, given by British soldiers to villagers in the vicinity of cantonments, and of assaults committed by the latter in reprisal? The only conceivable ground on which this matter can be neglected is that it is not susceptible of remedy; or else that it is not of such importance as to need remedy. We demur to both propositions. These lamentable collisions are of frequent occurrence. Within the last few months there have been two bad cases of assaults upon British soldiers, and it must be remembered that each such case leaves lasting ill-effects on the minds of both parties. The villagers who have committed such assaults with impunity, or comparative impunity, are emboldened to repeat them; for instance, the people of Palam, near Delhi, who have of recent years committed three such assaults, of which two were upon officers mistaken for private soldiers. On the other hand, the soldiers and their comrades are intensely embittered by being subject to unpunished outrage, and such bitterness is likely to bear fruit in ill-treatment of Natives upon opportunity. As to absence of remedy, the idea is absurd. Can it be seriously argued that there is no method of redress to be obtained by villagers for the misbehaviour of soldiers except to take the law into their own hands, to set upon Her Majesty's servants, mob them, and pound them to a jelly? Or that there is no means of restraining soldiers from giving offence to the villagers? Or no method of deciding whether the offence is real or imaginary, by whom it is committed, and the redress that should be made for it? The most common cause of quarrel of any is the shooting of peafowl. The next most common cause is shooting anything at all in the vicinity of a village. Surely it would be possible to render it generally understood by the people that the British Government will not admit that the shooting of peafowl, as such, can be regarded as an offence—any more than the shooting of deer, which to certain classes of Hindus is equally repugnant. But that, for the shooting of peafowl, or deer, or ducks, or any other half-tame creatures in or about villages, full redress will be given. It would, we imagine, be further possible to make this understood by the British soldiers, and to give passes for shooting parties, only on the distinct understanding that villages shall be avoided in the pursuit of sport.

A STANDARD MEASURE FOR INDIA.

(Englishman.)

The difficulty of inducing the Government to do a simple thing or to take an obvious course has seldom been better illustrated than in the matter of the stamping of piece goods, about which so much has been said at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. It may not be generally known outside of mercantile circles that there is not a standard measure of the yard for all British India. While the yard or guz in Calcutta is understood to be 36 inches, in Cawnpore it is only 34 inches. A piece intended to be sold at Cawnpore as 37½ yards does not need to be imported into Calcutta as more than 35½ yards. The various Indian Chambers of Commerce have been clamouring for a fixed standard of yard measure for years past, and in 1870 the Government of India appeared to give way to their request, and fixed a standard by law. But the measure of 36 inches, which was understood by more than half the Native dealers, and would soon have been learned by the rest, was too natural and plain for circuitous official method. So the Government fetched a compass by France, and made the legal standard of length the metre, both sound and size of which were strange to everybody outside of Pondicherry; and three years later it found light occupation in repealing the measure. During the fourteen years that have passed since then the Government has been wondering what to do, and there will be general cause for congratulation if the vigorous arguments of the Chamber lead now to the very simple enactment that a yard is of measure 36 inches all over British India. The Chambers of Bombay, Madras, Karachi, and Rangoon have promptly concurred in the request for this legislation, and all Natives who wish to trade honestly will feel the advantage of it. The Manchester Chamber has recently taken up the matter as energetically as the Chamber here, but it looks at the difficulty from the English standpoint, and asks for a new penal Act in India against fraudulent marking. An Act has been tried in England, but not found altogether workable. In India there would be the additional difficulty that there was no standard of length, and therefore practically no basis for legal proceedings against the dishonest practices. Mr. Parsons proposed, at the meeting, a certain concession to the Manchester Chamber when he advised that, after the standard of 36 inches to the yard had been fixed by law, there should be a further enactment to compel the stamping of all piece-goods in yards. The Government of India has referred the Chamber's memorial to the local Governments for report, so considerable delay in passing the measure is already assured. But the unsatisfactory condition of things in relation to this matter, as one of the speakers put it, "is eating into the vitals of our trade," and it is of great importance that the measure be not pigeon-holed or shelved for an indefinite time. Having noticed the most prominent features of the report of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, we ought not to relegate the portly and well-printed volume to our bookshelves without remarking on some features which distinguish the present report and enhance its usefulness. The grouping of the subjects, the arrangement of the table of contents, and especially the useful series of appendices, are admirable.

BENGAL.

It is officially announced that the Eastern Bengal State Railway, which already works the Dacca, Bengal, Central and the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railways, will, from the 1st July, take over charge of the Northern Bengal State Railway, thus placing the principal railways east of the Ganges under one administration. Madras time will be adopted on these lines from the 1st proximo, instead of Calcutta time, which had previously been in force.

THE members of the Bengal Board of Revenue have sent in their decision in the Burdwan adoption case. They have decided that the Burdwan family is governed by the Punjab law of adoption, which allows the adoption of a sister's son, a decision which sanctions the adoption by the young Maharani of her son, Lall Behari Kapoor. The Board strongly recommend the Lieutenant-Governor to accord his sanction to the adoption under the provisions of the Court of Wards Act.

MADRAS.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has confirmed the proposal made by the Madras Government to appoint the Collector of Customs at Madras to the office of Chairman of the Harbour Trust Board on an additional allowance of Rs. 400 a month, to be paid out of Harbour trust funds, with the proviso, however, that, considering the present position of affairs in connection with the Madras Harbour Trust, the arrangement must be understood to be subject to revision.

THE following is a summary of the Madras Municipal Budget for the year 1887-88, as passed by Government:—The year is expected to open with a balance of Rs. 1,99,910, and the receipts will amount to Rs. 10,89,070, against Rs. 12,07,650 in 1886-87 (revised estimate), and Rs. 12,50,031, the average of the three years ending 1885 86. The total charges will amount to Rs. 12,75,160, against Rs. 11,43,970 in 1886-87 (revised estimate), and Rs. 12,65,419, the average of the three years ending 1885-86. There will thus be a closing balance of Rs. 13,820, or 1·3 per cent. of the total estimated receipts. This amount is utterly inadequate, Government observe, for the purposes of a working balance, and recommend that it should be supplemented by savings in the course of the year.

THE President of the Madras Municipal Commission, in accordance with a resolution passed at a special meeting of the Commissioners, recently addressed Government, requesting them to reconsider their offer of November last, which imposed on the Municipal finances, in accordance with a recommendation of the Finance Committee, a further burden of Rs. 50,000 annually as a contribution to Provincial funds. The application to Government was made on the ground of the "disastrous effect which the payment of such an additional sum from Municipal revenues would have upon works of sanitation and improvement, almost effectually paralysing the extension of water-supply and drainage works, and leaving no hope of carrying out that most necessary of all works—the new scheme of water-supply." The Government have, however, refused to be moved in the matter; and, whilst admitting that the result described by the Commissioners is possible, hold that the small extent to which the Municipality has hitherto contributed for objects which are legitimate charges on Municipal funds and entirely provided from such funds elsewhere, justify the orders which have been issued. On these grounds they hold out no hope of the orders already issued being reconsidered; but, as they believe that considerable economies in Municipal expenditure are possible, they recommend the Commissioners to set themselves seriously to work to effect them.

BOMBAY.

AN Imperial salute fired early on Tuesday morning, June 21, proclaimed the Jubilee of the Queen. The day was observed as a general holiday, all public offices, banks, and business premises being closed. The vessels in Bombay harbour were dressed in honour of the occasion.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL HEATHCOTE, C.B., has, at the suggestion of H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief, been appointed a member of the Committee on the future extension of the City of Bombay.

A FAIR amount of rain has fallen throughout the Bombay Presidency during the past week, except Sind, which is afflicted with a chronic thirst. More rain, however, is wanted for kharif sowing in parts of the Deccan. Sowing operations are in progress in fifteen districts, and have been completed in the Thana and Colaba districts.

OWING to the heavy rains that have fallen on the Ghats, the road between Collem and Douli has been rendered impassable, and the traffic by carts between the West of India Portuguese Railway and the Southern Mahratta Railway has been suspended. Fears are also entertained for the safety of other portions of the Portuguese line, as the landslip at Kol last year has proved that the work has not been made strong enough to withstand a heavy monsoon.

THE following telegram has been despatched to the Secretary of State for India by Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Kt., on behalf of the Bombay Presidency Association:—"The Association request your Lordship to convey to our Gracious Queen-Empress our respectful congratulations on the occasion of her auspicious Jubilee on Wednesday, and express our dutiful and loyal sentiments to her throne and person. We sincerely pray that her already beneficent reign may be still more beneficent, and bring increasing glory and happiness to India and Britain."

BY a new fiscal policy the Goa Government recently abolished the tax on tobacco, and substituted for it a tax of five per cent. on industry, agriculture, and house-rent. The impost on tobacco was to remain in force until arrangements had been made for the proper recovery of the latter. The collectors, however, wishing to replenish their empty treasuries, commenced levying both the taxes, notwithstanding the repeated protests of the people, and all the while the Government looked on complacently. At last the Government have opened their eyes to the injustice of the double impost, and have finally abolished the tax on tobacco.

THE absence on leave of Brigadier-General A. G. F. Hogg, Resident, Aden, has produced numerous political changes at Aden and on the Somali Coast. Major F. M. Hunter, C.B., C.S.I., acts as Political Resident; Major C. W. H. Sealy, as First Political Resident Agent for the Somali Coast; Mr. Prendergast Walsh, as Second Assistant; and Captain W. T. Lyde, as Third Assistant; Lieut. C. Pritchard, 9th Bombay Infantry, has charge of the office of Fourth Assistant; Mr. D. Morrison, of the office of Fifth Assistant; and Mr. R. H. Townson, of the office of Deputy Assistant Political Agent, Berbera and Bulhar.

THE shoe question has recently occupied the attention of the Judges of the High Court, and revised rules on the subject are published in the Government Gazette, after receiving the sanction of the Governor in Council. All Native gentlemen attending Courts of Justice are at liberty to conform at their option either to the Native or the European custom; but if they prefer to follow the Native custom and wear native shoes, they must leave their shoes before stepping on to the carpet or before being sworn. Parsees are always allowed to retain their shoes when they are in the act of taking an oath.

CIRCULAR orders have been issued by the Bombay High Court regarding the marks of courtesy which should be paid to Native gentlemen of rank and position when giving evidence. Gentlemen ranking as first class Sirdars should be provided with a chair on the raised platform on which the presiding officer of the Court sits, and should be permitted to give his evidence standing. Sirdars of the second or third class should be provided with chairs in a convenient place in the Court, below the raised platform on which the presiding officer of the Court sits, and should give his evidence sitting. All Sirdars or Native gentlemen of similar rank, however, should stand while the affirmation or oath is being administered to them.

AN old circular relating to the admission of low caste persons to Courts of Justice is republished in the Government Gazette for the benefit of whom it may concern. The Judges disapprove of the exclusion from the court-room of those classes of the community who come under the denomination of out-castes, and declare that the practice is at variance with every principle of justice, and in no way necessary to preserve the Brahmins and other high-caste men from defilement. But while giving low-castes opportunities of access to the interior of the Courts, careful arrangements must be made to avoid the possibility of their being brought into any sort of contact with the rest of the community.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, AND PUNJAB.

IN introducing the Allahabad University Bill, Mr. Quinton, advocating the necessity of the new departure, instanced the fact that upwards of 200 candidates from the N.W. Provinces passed the Calcutta Entrance Examination of 1885. The argument might be made stronger by taking the more recent fact that the corresponding figure for 1887 approximates 500—a sufficient nucleus for a young university.

AN important ruling has been made by the Punjab Government with reference to the meaning of the term "European," so far at least as applied to candidates for the Pashtu and Biluchi examination. Objections had been raised to an officer getting either the monthly allowance of Rs. 100, or a reward for passing the Pashtu examination, because he is not a European, but the Government has ruled that, for the purpose of the Pashtu and Beluchi examination, a European is to be understood as a person whose vernacular is English.

NATIVE PRESS.

THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE.

The English will not be able to get rid of their Russophobia, even if a partition of Afghanistan is made. The nearer the Russians approach the more the fear of the English will increase What then, is to be done? The only means is to please the Natives of India. No one will be able to harm the English if India is satisfied. This is an axiomatic truth, and the English ought to accept it.—The Dainik.

Whatever Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Robert Knight may say, a war between the English and the Russians is a matter of certainty. The English will have to keep themselves ready for this struggle.

Digitized by Google

There are two ways of being prepared for it:—" (1) By contenting India. (2) By strengthening the frontiers. Reuter has telegraphed this week that English engineers are repairing the fort at Herat. This is well and good. If, along with it, we got the information that the Government of India proposes to restore the Berars to the Nizam, that would be still better. By restoring Gwalior, Lord Dufferin has given rise to hopes in the minds of the Native princes. Let his lordship encourage these hopes by restoring the Berars, let the people of India be relieved of the burden of taxation to a certain extent, let Herat be strengthened, and let troops be kept ready at Quetta. Then the English will be able to despise Russian intrigues. Otherwise, if the taxes are raised on the account of the increase of the army, the result will be contrary.—The Nababilhakar and Sadharani.

There is no means of ascertaining the real situation in Afghanistan. The Government is not willing to let the public know what the Boundary Commission has settled, how far the Russians have advanced, or what defensive measures the Amir has adopted. But it is not unknown to any one that the Amir's subjects have rebelled, and that he is incapable of defending himself. Many imagine that the Russians will aid the rebels, and that a dispute will soon arise between England and Russia. The Russians have played a similar trick in taking possession of Karki as they did in occupying Penjdeh. It is needless to say that they have approached nearer to Kabul by taking possession of Karki, and it is said that they have constructed a railway in order to come to Herat. Dhulip Sing is now trying his utmost to excite the Russians against the English. For the purpose of self-defence the English are now doing what they ought to do. But one thing is certain. If the dispute with Russia is not settled, the poor people of India, who are overburdened with taxes, will greatly suffer.—The Pratikar.

Russia's object is to conquer India. So she is advancing towards India. The Russians have not forgotten the will of Peter the Great. They are always thinking of the fabulous wealth of India. They have seen that the possession of India has made the English rich and powerful. Dhulip Singh's visit to Russia and the rebellion in Afghanistan have helped them a great deal. The Kabul question is bound up with the fate of India. The English imagine that their prestige depends upon the strength of Kabul, otherwise they would not have assisted Kabul with troops and money. The English Government is generally bewildered. If the Russians advance the English will have to do two things—to satisfy the people of this country and to check the enemy. If the Government had tried to please the Natives of this country it would not have been in any difficulty. Were the Natives barbarous the English might govern them with brute force. But they have given them education and created high desires in their minds. If those desires are not satisfied discontent is inevitable. We now want the introduction of the elective system in the Legislative Council, and the repeal of the Arms Act. We also want better administration, and equal rights and privileges with Englishmen. The English will not be discharging their duties if they don't satisfy the desires created by English education.—The Charuvarta.

The Russians are gradually advancing in Central Asia. The Amir is now involved with a rebellion, and the Russians have taken advantage of this opportunity to occupy Karki. They have constructed railways and telegraphs and posted troops in several places. If they wish they can bring troops into the Amir's dominions in a short time. They are secretly collecting troops in Central Asia, and making encroachments upon the Afghan Boundaries. The people of Badakshan and Turkestan are not favourably inclined to the Amir. The Russians will easily be able to bring them to their side.—The Bardwan Sanjibani.

FEMALE DOCTORS.—In countries where the zenana system prevails, there are few facilities for women to acquire medical science. Even in countries where women mix with men in eating, walking, and sitting, they have not been able to learn medical science well. How many female doctors are there in England? While female doctors are not of any importance in countries where the emancipation of females prevails, it cannot be said how far the plan of training doctors will be successful where the zenana system exists. When there were no female doctors in this country did any female die for want of proper medical treatment? There need be no harm done if there are one or two female doctors. But harm may be done to society if classes are formed for the training of female doctors.—The Nababibhakar and Sadharani.

LOYAL SENTIMENTS.—The Hindu Patriot noticing the 20th June as Jubilee day, says:—" India is said to be the brightest gem in Her Majesty's diadem. It is the earnest wish of all her devoted subjects that the resplendent lustre of this gem may increase day by day, and that it may, with manifold brightness, shine for many, many years to come. This is a day of universal rejoicing, and we join with all our countrymen in invoking divine blessing upon our august Empress. The Kaisarina-i-Hind.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONEL P. HARRIS is confirmed in the appointment of Deputy Adjutant-General.

COLONEL M. CLEMENTI, Judge Advocate-General, has been granted ninety days' privilege leave to England.

MAJOR A. BRETT, Staff Paymaster, recently promoted, and who was detained in India owing to the 1st Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers being in Burma, has now been ordered home.

MAJOR R. R. PULFORD, R.E., Personal Assistant to the Chief Engineer in the North-West Provinces, is gazetted Assistant Secretary to the Local Government, Railway Branch, in the place of Major T. Gracey.

ON the recommendation of a Medical Board, Colonel J. MacDougall, Commandant 17th Madras Infantry, has been permitted to proceed to England on furlough, in anticipation of its grant by Government.

COLONEL R. W. M. WETHERALL, 2nd Battalion Bedford Regiment, will be placed on half-pay on completion of six years' service as a regimental Lieutenant-Colonel, and will proceed to England.

SUBADAR MAHOMED USMAN, 17th Madras Infantry, has been awarded the 3rd Class Order of Merit, for conspicuous gallantry at Mailong, in personally leading a charge against greatly superior numbers of the enemy.

IN accordance with telegraphic instructions from the Adjutant-General in India, Lieutenant-Colonel A. Landon, 12th the Khelat-i-Ghilzai Regiment, has been ordered to India to join the 7th Bengal Infantry as second in command.

THE Government of India has granted a gratuity of three months' British pay of rank to Lieutenant E. Poole, of the 2nd Battalion Liverpool Regiment, as compensation for the wound he received on the 4th January last, in an encounter with dacoits in Upper Burma.

TROOPER BAZEED KHAN, of the 3rd Cavalry, Hyderabad Contingent, has been admitted to the 3rd Class Order of Merit, for conspicuous gallantry, when on sentry duty at Noungoo, Upper Burma, in maintaining his post until reinforced, although severely wounded.

CAPTAIN E. E. MONEY, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, has been appointed Assistant Quartermaster-General, vice Major G. F. Young, vacated; and Captain R. F. Gartside-Tipping, 1st Bengal Cavalry, has been confirmed in the Quartermaster-General's Department, vice Captain Money.

CAPTAIN CHARLES BURN, Royal Dragoons, returns to the Staff of the Viceroy. It will be remembered that Captain Burn had to give up the appointment two years ago, when he exchanged from the 8th Hussars into his present regiment. It is not unlikely that Captain E. Roderic Owen, Lancashire Fusiliers, may also return shortly to India. He relinquished his appointment on the Viceroy's Staff three years ago on promotion to his company.

A SHORT time ago a serious fraud was brought to light in Bangalore in connection with military scoring at a musketry competition. Details are now given of a case, in Punjab, in which the Border Regiment—or at least a sergeant thereof—lies under very grave suspicion of similar disgraceful proceedings. The Lahore paper remarks:—" If culpability in such cases could be measured, we should say that the fraud now laid to the charge of the Border Regiment, if it should be proved, is of a darker shade than that brought home to the offenders in Southern India; because it is alleged to have occurred, not in a mere official competition, but in a 'friendly' rifle match with another regiment, when, if ever, men ought to be on their honour."

THE following appointments of Medical Officers have been made:—1st Bengal Cavalry—Surgeon E. H. Brown, to the officiating medical charge of the regiment, vice Surgeon J. H. T. Walsh, appointed to the 35th Sikhs. 10th Bengal Infantry—Surgeon H. E. Banatvala to the officiating medical charge of the regiment, vice Surgeon J. Shearer, appointed to the 27th Punjab Infantry. 13th Bengal Infantry—Surgeon H. W. Pilgrim, to the officiating medical charge of the regiment, vice Surgeon H. R. Woolbert, appointed to the Native General Hospital, Rangoon. 27th Punjab Infantry—Surgeon J. Shearer to the medical charge of the regiment, vice Surgeon-Major F. A. Smyth, appointed to the 2nd Battalion 3rd Goorkhas. 1st Punjab Cavalry—Surgeon Hare to the officiating medical charge of the regiment, vice Surgeon A. T. Brown, appointed to the 37th Dogras. 4th Sikhs—Surgeon Clarkson to the officiating medical charge of the regiment, vice Surgeon-Major G. McD. Davis, on furlough. 5th Punjab Infantry—Surgeon Green to the officiating medical charge of the regiment, vice Surgeon-Major C. W. S. Deakin, appointed to the 34th Pioneers.

A SOLDIER of the Connaught Rangers shot himself at Dharmsala on the evening of the 13th ult. He had been fined ten shillings the day before for misconduct of some sort.

SOK-NAG, THE GOND SNAKE GOD.

Mr. J. F. Hewett, in an able paper read before a recent meeting of the Society of Arts on the origin of village communities in Northern and Central India, gives the following account of the Gonds: —

As for the identity of the Nagas, or Snake race, celebrated in poetry and legend as the great opponents of the Aryans and the Dravidians, I may here notice a fact which is, I believe, not generally known, and which goes far to prove them to be one and the same people. The Gonds of Central India, who once ruled the whole of that part of the country, are admitted by every one to be Dravidians, but I have not been able to find any mention of their worshipping snakes. They do, however, worship the snake periodically as the most sacred symbol of the earth, as the great productive power, but the worship is kept strictly secret. In the year 1867, when I was surveying and settling rents in the Gond country of Chuttisghur, in the Central Provinces the head Poojari or priest of the royal Gond spent a long time in my camp, and used to come and sit in my tent almost every day. Our most frequent subjects of conversation were Gond manners and customs, including their religious ceremonies. The information he gave me on these subjects was very much the same as that recorded by other inquirers; but one day, when he was sitting in my tent while I was writing, he suddenly after a long silence said, "Sahib, I have told you a great deal about our ways, but there is one thing I want very much to tell you, only I ought not to do so, as I am bound to secresy." After a little hesitation of this sort, he told me all the details of the Gond sacrifice to Soknag, the great snake god. This, which is the most sacred rite known to them, takes place only every seventh year, and only married and initiated Gonds take part in it. The wooden image of the god is put up under the sacred tree, and seven cocoanuts, seven pieces of betel-nut, and milk and flowers are offered to it, but no animals are slain. At the same time, for the uninitiated, a goat is offered to Rajaro, one of the ordinary gods.

The solemn and secret worship strongly corroborates the evidence given by the recognition of the snake as the chief god of the race, in the name Nagpore, or "city of the snake," and other local names and in that of Nagbunsi, or "sons of the snake," the family of the Rajahs of Chutra Nagpore, chiefs of the Ooraon tribe, who have for many generations past married into the best Rajpoot families.

THE P. AND O. MAIL CONTRACT.

The question of the renewal of the P. and O. contract for carrying the India and China mails had had the attention of the Dundee Chamber of Commerce, and while acknowledging the good service this line had given in the past, it was considered, in view of the likelihood of increased railway communication and of improvements in steamers, that the subsidy was too high, and the terms proposed—ten years—too long. The directors would be prepared to make the agreement binding for five years only, and they suggested that the secretary be authorised to write Mr. Robertson and Mr. Lacaita, putting them in possession of the views of the Chamber, and asking them to support Mr. Provand's amendment. At a meeting of the Aberdeen Chamber of Commerce Mr. Lyall Grant proposed the following resolutions, which were adopted:—"1. That the P. and O. Company's contract for mails be limited to five years, and the speed to India and China be not less than thirteen knots. 2. That in the opinion of this Chamber it is highly desirable that Her Majesty's Government should, in connection with the Government of Canada, endeavour to enter into contracts for establishing a line of British steamers between Vancouver, Yokohama, Shanghai, and Hong Kong, in order that a British service might be established, via Canada, to alternate with the service, via Suez."

At a special meeting of the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce Mr. William M'Ewan, who presided, stated that the business before the meeting was the Government contract with the P. and O. Company for the carrying of the mails betwixt this country and India and China. Upon the mere money question, he did not think that they as a Chamber were properly entitled to deal. The general objection was the fixing of the contract for ten years, seeing that the time taken by the P. and O. Company was much in excess of the other companies. He proposed a resolution to the effect that the Government be memorialised with the view of getting the contract period reduced to five years and the speed of the mails increased.

A special meeting of the Council of the Hull Chamber of Commerce and Shipping was held on the 30th ult., to consider the proposed East India and China mail contract. The Chairman, Captain Hill, moved, and Mr. Dixon seconded, that a memorial be sent to Mr. H. S. King, M.P., asking him to present it to the Chancellor of the Exchequer as early as possible, urging that the matter should be referred to a Select Committee before the confirmation of the contract.

HINDU WIDOW REMARRIAGE.—The following advertisement appears in a Madras paper:—"A Smartha Brahman, of Brahacharanam caste, of Shutamurshana Gothra, is willing to give in marriage his sister—a virgin widow—to an educated Brahman of the same or Valama caste, having sufficient means to maintain himself and his wife decently. The intended bride is nineteen years old, and is fair, handsome, and intelligent, and of good character. Those that are willing to marry her are requested to place themselves in communication with the editor of the Hindu."

Miscellaneous.

THE condition of things in Cashmere, seem says the Statesman, to be well-nigh hopeless. Our correspondent at Srinuggur, who who is an old English resident at the place, in his letter published by us, declares unhesitatingly that things were never so bad in the State as they now are, and he hardly conceals his belief that the Resident (Mr. Plowden) is largely answerable for this decline. The new Minister is said to be wholly unfit for his position, while the Maharaja has been forced into complete seclusion, all power having been taken out of his hands, and he himself treated almost as a State prisoner. "Extravagance and useless expenditure, mismanagement and entire disregard of the welfare of the people" are conspcuous in every department. The staple food of the country is a monopoly in the hands of the State, and the people are starving while European employés of all kinds are being brought into its service. The people who have to pay additional taxes to maintain these costly European establishments have, many of them, very often no food to eat. Around and in Srinuggur, but particularly in the villages, the people go to the city almost daily to try to buy shali—uncleaned rice—for their families. After spending half the day there, they return without being able to obtain a single grain of food. All they can get is an anna or two of vegetables; and the children and themselves go without food. The cause of all this is simple mismanagement; the supplies that might have been brought in at the end of last year were not brought, and the officials seem to be quite incapable of getting supplies now. The quantity of shali in the country is very large, but though the poor will be made to pay extra taxes, they will not be able to get the food they want. For months they have been made to suffer in this way, and for some months to come they will be compelled similarly to suffer. The correspondent who thus addresses us has ever been distinguished for the moderation of his writings. He has never shown the slightest wish to discredit either the Cashmere authorities or the Resident; but we have seen for some months past, a noticeable change in his letters. He has ceased to speak apologetically, and has become himself an accuser of the Government. The truth is that matters have been going from bad to worse since the retirement of the late finance minister (Mr. Nilumber) and the advent of Mr. Plowden. The Government sees everything we suppose through the Resident's spectacles, but we think it right to call attention to the complaints that are reaching us from no disaffected quarter, but from one who has shown for years a strong desire to speak as favourably as he could of the state of matters.

The net profits of the Oriental Bank Estates Company up to March 31 last show a net profit of £17,398, out of which it is proposed to pay dividends at the rate of 7 and 5 per cent. per annum respectively on the Preferred and Ordinary Shares, from due dates of instalments. The Board think that the properties acquired were secured at an "exceedingly moderate price."

During the past few days a large number of the shares of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank have been changing hands at between £50 and £51. We believe we are correct in stating that the result of the past half-year is likely to be exceptionally good showing that the money-earning power of the bank has in no way diminished, but is probably greater than ever, owing to its increased resources and augmented business. It seems to us that this bank has merely to "sit still" and quietly haul in its profits from half-year to half-year, and only requires ordinary prudence so as to avoid losses such as have recently occurred in Manila, and which is expected will be entirely provided for by June 30, so that we shall without doubt hear the last of this disastrous business. After the losses referred to have been eliminated, and judging from past experience of its earning power, there exists every reasonable expectation that the bank will resume paying its former dividend of £2, and will shortly build up the equalisation fund to its former figure of $500,000 Mr. Thomas Jackson is, we believe, making a tour of inspection of all the branches in the East, and everything so far has been found highly satisfactory, the one black spot being Manila. Our own large London banks have had their troubles; the Union Bank received a heavy blow from the "Pullinger" frauds, and the Westminster Bank lost enormously from the "Collie" frauds, but in a year or two, gigantic as these losses were, these banks soon retrieved their position, and became more prosperous than ever. We believe a great future remains in store for the Hong Kong Bank if only managed with care and prudence, like its London contemporaries.

DEATH OF MAJOR GORDON.—The death is reported at Cherat of malarious fever and congestion of the lungs, of Major John Gordon, deputy assistant quartermaster-general, Peshawar. He was staying with Lieut.-Colonel C. L. Harvey, Yorkshire Regiment, to recover his health, which had given way at Peshawar. Major Gordon served with the 2nd Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers in the Soudan expedition of 1884, and commanded it, it is said, as a captain his regiment at the battle of El Teb, for which service he received a brevet majority, medal with clasp and Khedive's star.

BOYS AND MASTERS.*

This simple, artless, unsophisticated tale of school-life will serve largely to place Mr. Gilkes amidst the ranks of the comparatively few who study the philosophy of the profession of teaching. He stands forth, not so much as a scholar—his position at Dulwich College is sufficient sponsor for his attainments—but as a reflective guide and teacher of youth, who regards boys not merely as animated masses of humanity, but as real live beings, with virtues to be cultivated, with vices to be eradicated—as intellectual creatures not utterly dead, as is sometimes thought, to the higher and nobler instincts of mankind. He dwells with emphasis, and with truth, upon the circumstances that "men's characters are largely the result of the training they received as boys—training at home and at school—so largely that a schoolmaster's position is actually terrible." He records with surprise "the indifference many parents show with regard to the formation of their children's character, and the unfortunate lessons which many parents permit their children to learn at home."

True—alas! too true—children are "dragged up." They pass from the nursery to the school uncorrected, and eventually uncorrectable. Home has an enormous, a magic influence, if the latter be rightly used and thoughtfully exercised; but wasted opportunities can seldom be recalled. Parents who sow the wind should be prepared to reap the whirlwind. Would, then, that Mr. Gilkes's most charming novelette, plain as it is—without pretence to plot or intrigue, or passion—might be found in every household; parents would then, perhaps, awaken themselves to the responsibilities of their position; children would learn lessons of life which in the future must stand them in good stead, and teachers of youth might cull many a hint to aid them in their most arduous occupation of correcting, guiding, and influencing the minds of those who are destined to become either honoured and honourable members of the human family, or wrecks on the ocean of life, waifs and strays on the highway of human existence.

LIFE OF ROBERT BICKERSTETH, D.D.†

In many respects Dr. Bickersteth, Bishop of Ripon, was one of the most remarkable prelates which ever adorned the Episcopal bench. His scholarship, though sound, was not brilliant to a degree which merits special attention; but as a preacher he has rarely been excelled—it was his "fate." Even to this day the memory of him in the pulpit lingers in the breasts of many a person wont to listen, Sunday after Sunday, to the stirring words which fell from the lips of the Vicar of St. John's, Clapham-rise. And when, later in life, he was settled in Yorkshire, so popular was he as an orator that on one occasion a massive gold chain was put into the offertory, and it must not be overlooked that at the time when Dr. Bickersteth flourished it was not then the custom for clergymen to do much more than a sermon or two of a Sunday: indeed, the Bishop himself tells a good story of a thoughtful and kind member of his diocese who, hearing that he intended to preach three sermons on a Sunday, thought that the Rev. Father in God had taken leave of his senses, and urged strongly that he should go to bed between each sermon!

In another respect, too, the Bishop of Ripon was a remarkable man. Though strongly leaning to the Evangelical school of thought, he was on the best of terms with the High Church clergy committed to his charge, and in one instance appointed to an archdeaconry a representative from amongst that section, conceiving him to have been the victim of narrow sectarian views in in the matter of Convocation. And it is also worthy of record that no single prosecution on account of ritual ever took place during his episcopate. Not only so, but when the celebrated Purchas judgment seemed to emphasise the use of a cope during the celebration of the Communion, he duly appeared—much as he objected to the objectionable vestment—clad in purple and fine linen—on the ground that "he wished to set an example of obedience to the law." It were devoutly to be wished some misguided enthusiasts, who prefer the martyrdom of jail, would realise the fact that before a clergyman preaches to others obedience it befitteth him to practice that homely virtue himself.

Such, in the briefest outline, is the prelate whose inner life has been given to the world by his son. A delicate and difficult duty it is to write a biography, but in this instance the modesty which seems inherent in the Bickersteth family shines forth conspicuous, and the public stand possessed of a very calm, unimpassioned, and, withal, eminently readable account of a prelate who, in his day, exercised a more powerful sway than fell to the lot of most of his brethren on the Episcopal Bench, a man whom to know was to love, and whom to hear was to admire—the "Good Bishop" of Ripon.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.*

Allan Quatermain is in many respects a vastly superior work to "Sne." True the "situations" are not so "powerful" as in the earlier volume. There are not by a long degree so many scenes to curdle the blood and quicken the pulse, but there is, on the other hand, a much more healthy tone throughout the entire story; of course Mr. Haggard would scarcely be himself were he to omit altogether some hideous adventure, such as would occur to no other living writer; but in the present instance they are few and far between, merely thrown in just to keep up the knack of penning such strange and weird unrealities.

The chief interest in the tale which Allan Quatermain has to tell centres upon scenes of battle, wherein the scene being laid in the centre of Africa, firearms, powder, and the munition of war do not play a part; hence the opportunity of personal display is great and unrivalled. Of this circumstance the novelist makes the most, when he portrays the almost unearthly prowess of the Zulu chieftain, who rejoices in the somewhat unpronounceable name of Umslopogaas, as he deals death and destruction to all who come within reach of his "woodpecker"—an axe which he always carried with him, alike in times of peace as in alarms of war. This warrior's defence, too, or the slain, where, single-handed, he hurled to their doom the would-be murderers of the matron he was defending, is brilliant and soul-stirring to the highest degree.

That the tale is graphic, exciting, and picturesque, "goes without for to say;" but we question whether its talented author is not somewhat inclined to pander to the craving of the time for undue excitement and unnatural demand upon the imagination. He can and does paint lovely women, but even then there is a tinge of the tigress. His characters are never the soft lovable beauties of home life, but great resplendent heroines, ready one moment to fall at a man's feet in admiration, the next instant prepared to cast him alive into the burning fiery furnace; hence there is a sense of relief, while the reader realises the safety and comfort of home in this our own land, amidst those who love and are loved. But "Allan Quatermain" is powerfully written, and is sure to find many admirers.

* "Allan Quatermain," by H. Rider Haggard. (Longmans, Green, and Co.)

The Journal of Indian Art for July is a splendid specimen of the photo-lithographic art, of which the publisher, Mr. W. Griggs, is such a master. Nothing could be finer than his exquisite reproduction, from a drawing by Amir Baksh, of the Mayo School of Art, Lahore, of the gateway of Wazir Khan's Mosque in that city, of the Pavilion in the Mosque, and of the Fresco decoration of the Interior. The tone and colouring are perfect. And not less praise must be awarded to the beautiful plate showing the elevation of the Cheutghar near the Shalimar, gardens of Lahore. Mr. Griggs supports his well-won reputation of a careful, conscientious and most able artist in a department of art in which he has hardly a rival here. The letter-press which accompanies the plates is good and interesting. Altogether, a most excellent number.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Martha Spreull (David Bryce and Son); "Marrying and Giving in Marriage," by Mrs. Molesworth (Longmans, Green and Co.).

THE area under indigo in the Madras Presidency at the end of March last was about 20,000 acres, of which only 300 acres were expected to produce a bumper crop; 5,200 acres a sixteen-anna crop; 5,500 acres a middling crop, estimated at eight annas; and 9,000 acres a bad crop, estimated at only four annas. This latter is chiefly in the Vizagapatam district, where the crops suffered from want of rain. The probable outturn estimated at 25 lbs. of manufactured indigo per acre is 3,214 maunds.

A RECENT number of the Pekin Gazette gives some interesting information regarding Chinese Turkestan. Under certain rules drawn up by the Imperial Financial Commissioner, great efforts have been made within the last year or two to colonise the waste lands of the country. As a result, the Governor of the New Dominion reports that 1,090 families have been settled on the land. Each household on its establishment received a grant of 60 mow of land, some cattle and seed-grains, and some money to purchase implements. Half of the money thus expended was to be refunded at the end of the first year, and half at the end of the second; while taxation was to begin at the end of the third. As to the prosperity of the colonists thus far, all we are told is that all of the landholders whose time had come to pay taxes had not done so, and that more expenditure will have to be incurred in cutting and repairing irrigation canals. The convict settlers also are said to be a source of expense, and to meet the cost of establishing them on the land, it is proposed to reserve the refunds of the loans granted to regular colonists. The Chinese troops in Eastern Turkistan at the end of the first half of last year comprised 64 battalions, with three companies of mortars and five companies of cavalry, making a total of 21,148 officers and men, besides 114 "supernumerary" officers, and 9,075 camp followers.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, JULY 16, 1887.

THE HON. SIR ASHLEY EDEN—A RETROSPECT.

DEATH has been busy amongst the ranks of the Anglo-Indian community. Scarce a week of late but the melancholy duty has devolved upon this journal of chronicling the decease of a distinguished member of the Eastern Services, and now once again the same charge is imposed upon us. A few days ago the decree went forth from the portals of Fate, and Sir Ashley Eden passed from the scene of his earthly labours and triumphs. In many ways a remarkable man, perhaps not the least remarkable circumstance which demands notice is that his career at Haileybury was not of a nature to indicate that in the race of life he was destined to do great things, and to achieve a high and honoured reputation in the annals of the Service to which he belonged. A somewhat careless and indifferent sort of lad, he was always regarded at the time as one who would slide through life during the allotted quarter of a century which entitles a civilian in the East to the maximum retiring allowance claimable under the rules. So falsified were these expectations in the future that a reflection irresistibly rises in the mind as to the worthlessness of the present competitive system, which would have excluded men of the stamp of Sir Ashley Eden from the public service. And why? Not because they are lacking in intellect and sense—no one ever imputed want of talent to one of the most talented men in the Bengal Civil Service—but because they are not of a temperament to wear comfortably the shackles and restraints necessary for all who would distance their competitors in the race of "cramming." It is not the time or the place to discuss the merits of the system which "my people love to have," but it is surely pardonable to record a protest against a plan of selection which, whatever may be its merits, does exclude some of England's best brains and keenest intellects.

To follow Sir Ashley's career in the East is not within the scope of this article, which is concerned rather with the lessons of life which Sir Ashley's career should teach the rising generation. What was the secret of his success? It is simple and easily told. He knew what he wanted, and he never allowed himself to deviate a hair's breadth from what he deemed desirable in the interests of the State. He may have been right, he may have been wrong; and truth compels an avowal that of him, as of others, it may be said errare est humanum. But he never deserted his guns; he fought desperately, and, for the most part, successfully.

Nor should this be matter of surprise, characterised as is the present age for its flabbiness and flaccidity of principle. A man of firm and determined judgment could not do otherwise than assume a prominent lead amidst a seething mass of humanity only too ready to yield to compromise—in short, to do anything rather than resist. There are "items" in the world of toil as well as in the arena of politics. A commanding mind is sure to command, and Sir Ashley Eden's career points to the moral and adorns this tale.

It has been said that he was a "good hater." Doubtless this may have been true; it was, indeed, inevitable that such should be the case. A high-minded man, of strong and determined intellect, and clear and distinct aims, cannot do otherwise than scorn, despise, and in the end hate, the miserable, weak-kneed heaps of morality who, thrown by destiny into high places in life, are an object of unutterable contempt for those of sterner mould and more unresisting determination. He hated cant, he hated hypocrisy, he hated the fashion of calling little things by big names, he hated jobs under the guise of public advantage, he hated meanness wherever and whenever it lurked albeit in the garb of fashion and custom. Yes, he was a good hater.

Digitized by Google

Such, in brief, were the lessons of Sir Ashley's life. They were instructive, they were worthy of imitation—teaching that to be great one must be determined, that to accept a policy of compromise is to sell the chickens of future greatness for the eggs of immediate advantage; that to be firm may and must lead to error, but in the end it conducts to the goal of success. To differ from Sir Ashley was easy, to silence him difficult; and, though dead in the flesh, his memory will long linger in the minds of those who respect fearlessness and admire courage, who hate timidity and despise lightness of purpose. Requiescat in pace.

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE NORTHBROOK INDIAN CLUB TO MR. F. D. PETIT.

A luncheon was given on Tuesday, the 12th inst., by the members of the Northbrook Indian Club to Mr. F. D. Petit, in recognition of the munificent present of £1,000 to the club by his father, Sir Dinshaw Petit. The Earl of Northbrook, G.C.S.I., presided, having Mr. Petit on his right. Some seventy members of the Club were present, including the three Kattyiwar Princes of Morvi, Gondal, and Limri, and the Kumar Harnam Singh, Sir M. E. Grant Duff, Sir H. Davies, Sir Owen Burne, members of the Council of India; Sir Charles Elliot, Chief Commissioner of Assam; Sir Lepel Griffin, the Governor-General's Agent for Central India. Besides the above we noticed Mr. Ashburner, the Hon. Dadabhai Nauroji, General Sir A. Clarke, General Abbott, Mr. D. P. Cama, Mr. Carmichael, Mr. P. Jejeebhoy, &c.

Lord NORTHBROOK, after reading a letter from Mr. S. H. Thornton, expressing his regret at being prevented from attending, said:—The object of meeting to-day is to entertain their friend, Mr. Petit, and to announce the very munificent donation which his father, Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, High Sheriff of Bombay, has made to the club members. He has been kind enough to present to the Club £1,000 sterling, for the purpose of forming a library for the Club—(hear, hear). His wishes are contained in a letter which I received from Mr. Petit. He wishes the amount to be invested in the names of trustees, to purchase books, and that, in the event of the dissolution of the Club, the amount should be spent at the discretion of the trustees, upon such similar objects as they may deem proper. He desired the donation to be called by his name, so that it may be commemorated in connection with the endowment. These are the terms of the gift. We all know how distinguished our Parsee fellow-subjects have been for their liberality in all matters of public interest. We recollect the munificence of Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, of Framjee Cowasjee, and of the Camas. Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit has earned a name equal to theirs. He has given donations to the amount of something like £100,000 to different institutions of public utility in the Bombay Presidency. Quite recently he has offered £1,000 for the establishment of a Female College in Bombay. I would just mention, in connection with Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, that he is one of the men most identified with the extension of the cotton manufacture in Bombay, an extension which has been of great advantage to the city of Bombay, and to India generally, because I think no country can be complete in itself that does not possess some great manufacturing industry. It is now more than ten years ago since I left India, and I have been much interested in some figures showing the increase of the cotton manufacture since that time. Between 1876 and 1886 the number of spindles has increased from one million to two and a quarter millions; the quantity of yarn exported has increased tenfold, from 20,000 bales of 400 lbs. each to 220,000 bales. At the same time, there has been no sensible diminution in the imports of cotton manufactures from England to India, so that the increase of the Bombay manufactures has not been detrimental to our manufacturing interest at home. We have great pleasure to-day in entertaining Mr. Petit as the most worthy representative of his father at this Club. Hardly any of us to-day can forget that the Club and the Society to which we belong have suffered two very severe recent losses by the deaths of Sir Barrow Ellis and Sir Ashley Eden, and I should not feel that I had done my duty rightly as representing you at this meeting if I did not say a few words respecting them. I have been officially associated with many Indian statesmen, but there are few for whom I have a higher regard, and to whom I feel greater gratitude, than to these two distinguished men. Sir Barrow Ellis was for many years the highest authority upon Bombay questions, and especially upon all matters relative to the Revenue. He was for five years a member of the Council of the Governor-General when I was in India, where he showed high administrative capacity, and his advice was of great value to his colleagues. He was remarkable for his strong common-sense, and his lovable and sympathetic disposition, which endeared him to his own countrymen and to the Natives of India of all classes. His cordial appreciation of their high qualities, and his constant desire to advance their best interests, led him, amongst other things, to take an active part in our Club, and his loss will be felt as a personal grief by all of us. Mr. Barrow, his executor, has informed me that Sir Barrow Ellis has left by his will £500 to the Northbrook Indian Association, and a present of books to be added to the Club library. Gentlemen, the Indian Civil Service has been rich in able administrators, but I do not think that any Indian gentleman will hesitate to agree with me that we have seen of late years no abler administrator than Sir Ashley Eden. He was a member of the Council of the Viceroy, and Chief Commissioner of British Burma when I was in India. While filling the latter office he showed great financial ability. During the Bengal Famine it was necessary to buy enormous quantities of rice in Burma, and dispatch it to Bengal. The business was entrusted to Sir Ashley Eden, who transacted it admirably, and thereby contributed most materially to the success of the relief operations; but it was afterwards, as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, that he most particularly made his mark in India. When he left Calcutta five years ago a great meeting was held in his honour, and it was determined to erect a statue to his memory, and last April the statue was uncovered by Sir Stewart Bailey, the present Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. On both these occasions the expressions of gratitude to Sir Ashley Eden, and appreciation of his high qualities from all classes in Calcutta, was very remarkable. Sir Ashley Eden was distinguished for quickness of perception, for sound judgment, for firmness in carrying out his orders, and for his power of securing the confidence of those who served under him. It was said—and very rightly said—at the great meeting at Calcutta that these qualities were rendered still more valuable by "a generous and enlightened sympathy with all classes of the people." Some of us recollect the great troubles in Bengal many years ago, connected with the cultivation of indigo. The man who initiated the reform of the abuses of the old indigo system was Sir Ashley Eden. As Mr. Prinsep said, "he courageously stood forth as the redresser of wrongs at some risk to his own career, and was the means of securing liberty and freedom of action to the poorest classes." Sir Stewart Bayley made a remark in his speech which is so true, and at the same time so much in accordance with the objects of the Club, that I will venture to quote it. He said that nothing served Sir A. Eden better throughout his successful administration of Bengal "than the genuine and sympathetic friendship of his Native friends who had gathered round him in the early part of his career, and clung to him to its close, and in this respect he offered an example by which I hope the younger members of the Service anxious to walk in his footsteps will not fail to profit." These two distinguished statesmen were also members of the Council of the Secretary of State for India for many years, and I am sure that you will agree with me that we not only regret their loss upon personal grounds, but because the country has lost the services of two men whose opinions on all Indian questions was entitled to great weight. Returning from this painful but necessary digression to the real object of our meeting, I propose to you to drink the health of our friend, Mr. Petit, and to express to his distinguished father our most sincere thanks for his munificent donation. This Club has depended for its initiation, and it now depends for its support, upon the Indian Princes and Indian gentlemen. We should not have been able to meet here now if it had not been for the liberality of several of the Indian Princes, and especially of his Highness the Thakore of Bhownuggur, who gave us a lakh of rupees, without which we could not have taken this house or established the Club. You well know that the object of this Club is to bring Indian and English gentlemen together in every way in which we can reasonably, pleasantly, and profitably do so. In carrying out this object there has been one principle from which we have never swerved, and that is, that we should allow no Indian or English politics to be mixed up with the Club; and I may say that, although from time to time since we started there have been some questions which excited a keen interest, and upon which many of us differ, both upon Indian politics and English, the harmony of the Club has not been disturbed. We have from time to time entertained distinguished men connected with India, both English and Indian. We have heard what they had to say, and expressed to them our sympathy for their work, and our gratitude for their services. We hope this Club has been of service to our younger friends who are studying in England, and that they find here men with whom they can associate with advantage. I think the club is of use, particularly to our Indian friends who are studying at the two Universities, and who, when they come to London, find themselves quite at home here. These may appear very small things, but I think it is a great advantage both to England and to India that there should be some place where those who really take an interest in Indian affairs can meet Indian gentlemen, who are either residing in London, or, as is the case with many of those present to-day, come from India to visit us for a short time. Believing, therefore, that we are working in the right direction, we all feel deeply grateful to Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, who has come forward to assist us in providing a better library for our Club; we will take care to use his liberal donation to the best advantage of the Club, and to associate his name permanently with the gift. I now beg to propose to you "The health of Mr. Petit," and to express, on behalf of the Club, our grateful sense of the munificence of his father, and of the way in which he has shown his appreciation of our efforts.

The toast was drank with great enthusiasm.

Mr. PETIT, in returning thanks, said :—Lord Northbrook and Gentlemen : I cannot sufficiently express my thanks for the great kindness and honour you have done to my father, Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, by entertaining me to lunch at the Club to-day. I have been trained to be a merchant, and don't presume to be either a good scholar or speaker of English; but I assure you that lack of words in me is no lack of grateful sentiments on my part. When I write to my father about this honour that you, Lord Northbrook, and the members of the Club have done him, he will feel much pleased to know that what little he has been able to do in a public way has been appreciated by such a distinguished institution as the Northbrook Club, where one can meet all the worthy men who have acquired a name and fame in Indian affairs. My father has always taken a great deal of interest in all questions of education, and he has in his own humble way done his best to promote it as much as possible. He, as also a number of intelligent Indian gentlemen, look upon this Club as a most useful institution, which is almost a boon to men coming over from India. I know from my own experience, and that of some of my friends, how useful they have found the Club when they arrived first in England, and when their hearts were cheered by meeting at the Club their English and Indian friends, whom they would never have met perhaps. We Indians are extremely thankful and indebted to you, Lord Northbrook, for establishing this beneficent institution, as also to Sir George Birdwood, Mr. Fitzgerald, and the other members of the Committee, in promoting it. The Club is now all that could be desired, but I hope at no distant date it may be in a position to have a separate house for itself, where accommodation for lodging could be found for temporary visitors to this country. By the facility of intercourse between Englishmen and Indians which this Club affords, as also by the great help to the education of Indian young men which the Northbrook Society gives, India as a whole is indebted to this Institution, and I trust we shall have some of our distinguished Indian Princes also giving us their support in this matter, as his Highness the Thakore Sahib of Bhownuggur has munificently done. I should like to say one word about a great friend the Club and a number of Indians and Englishmen have lost in the late Sir Barrow Ellis, whose unexpected death has made us all sad. He was known to us all from Bombay, and his cheerful and genial nature made him a friend of all those who came into contact with him. He was a great friend of ours, and we deplore much his untimely loss. I thank you again, my Lord Northbrook, and my English and Indian friends, for the kind hospitality and reception you have given me to-day.

INDIAN MARITIME DEFENCE.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—The Times weekly telegram of 10th July informs us that there are signs of greatly increased activity about Indian coast defences. This is comforting news to those whose pensions are derived from the revenues of India; for the unexpected so often happens, and startling events frequently follow each other very rapidly in time of war; therefore it becomes a patriot's duty to point out weak points in the system of Indian maritime defence, and to urge that they be considered in good time. Some years hence we may be involved in war with France, or Russia, or both combined. I have not much apprehension of the latter power invading India by land, through snow or heat, over mountains and deserts, so long as our frontier is well guarded. But, as the naval strength of Russia is fast increasing in Asiatic waters, there is nothing to hinder the forces of her possible ally and herself from making a dash, and occupying our most valuable central Indian Ocean arsenal and coaling depôt in Ceylon. I am speaking of Trincomalie, and not Colombo, which is now the commercial capital, the present great coaling station and most valuable (yet easily vulnerable) harbour. The island is so little developed commercially, and its revenues are so small, we cannot afford to keep a British military force in Ceylon to await the contingency of a Russian or French attack. Therefore it behoves us to consider the quarter from which suddenly to draw our military reserves when the island is threatened with attack from without.

As history often repeats itself, let us read about Trincomalie from Sir James E. Tennent's "Ceylon." "Shortly after the rupture between Louis XIV. and the United Provinces in 1672, the French Admiral De la Haye took possession of Trincomalie. The Dutch in their panic abandoned the fort, as well as those of Cottiar and Batticaloa; but the French, having laid waste the surrounding country, were unable to provision their fleet, and were forced to retire from their conquest. They renewed the attempt in 1782, when Admiral the Bailli de Suffrein, in the absence of the British commander, compelled the English garrison to withdraw to Madras, and took possession of the fort; but in the following year it was restored to the Dutch, by whom it was held till the capture of Ceylon by Great Britain in 1795."

What is the lesson we might learn from this piece of history? It seems to be this, that we should take ample precautions against the contingency of Ceylon being captured or crippled. If our Eastern ocean highway were, even temporarily, deprived of a half-way house for coaling and victualling, what would our commercial navy do? I know not whether the recent Conference upon our Colonial defences has considered the question of defending Perim Island (the southern key of the Red Sea) as well as Trincomalie, the possible grand naval emporium, coaling depôt and arsenal, the southern key of India. Beyond the fact that Trincomalie is one of the finest harbours in the world, certainly the finest near India, the public know very little about the place. Sir Emerson Tennent told us much about it thirty years ago, when he wrote:—"Even now, and notwithstanding their extent, the military works are utterly incommensurate with the importance of the position, and would be found ineffectual for its protection in the event of attack." But at that period the torpedo was not invented, which now is employed for the protection of the entrance into this splendid harbour.

For the effectual defence of British India, Ceylon is as important an auxiliary as Ireland is to Great Britain, and commercially she is dependent upon India for her very existence, her food supply, and her labouring population. Severed from India, and without any arrangements for their mutual protection in time of war, Ceylon would prove such a trouble to us as disunited Ireland would be to Great Britain. The combined naval forces of France and Russia in the East Indies could easily pounce upon Trincomalie, and also destroy by fire all peaceful vessels in the crowded harbour of Colombo. Therefore reciprocal arrangements for defence against foreign foes should exist between India and Ceylon, and these arrangements might include undertakings which should be materially conducive to the commercial prosperity of the island as well as of Southern India. Colombo harbour has been finished in time to meet the requirements of the converging steam traffic of the East Indies by replenishing British and foreign vessels with coal, water and provisions, without which no steamer could reach its desired haven.

But Colombo is not invulnerable, might be burned in a single day, and thus crippled for a long season. Trincomalie must be the Malta of the East, and should be prepared to receive a large fleet in time of war. I have stated that we know little about the defences of Trincomalie; that may be merely personal ignorance on my part; others may know more, and perhaps will now tell us. But here is Tennent's account of the place in 1859:—

"The condition of neglect and insecurity which Trincomalie exhibits at the present day (1859), is painfully irreconcilable with the terms of exultation with which its capture was originally announced to the nation. Then it was extolled, as the sole harbour of refuge to the east of Cape Comorin, Bombay being the only capacious port on the West Coast of Hindostan; and projects were in contemplation to render it the grand emporium of Oriental commerce, the Gibraltar of India, and the arsenal of the East. Remembering these existing assurances, and contemplating the capabilities presented by the locality for their utmost realisation, an extreme feeling of disappointment is excited now by looking upon its incomplete fortifications, its neglected works, and its reduced military establishments, utterly unequal to any emergency. These render Trincomalie as insecure at the present day, as it was unprepared in the last century, for the assaults of Suffrein and De la Haye."

"As a harbour Trincomalie is renowned for its extent and security; but its peculiar superiority over every other in the Indian seas consists in its perfect accessibility to every description of craft in every variation of weather. It can be entered with equal facility and safety in the North-east as in the South-west monsoon, and the the water within is so deep that vessels can lie close to the beach, and discharge or receive cargo without the intervention of boats. Its geographical position has already caused its adoption as the most favourable point for a naval rendezvous and dockyard; whence instructions and intelligence can be most rapidly communicated to the various forces in the Eastern Seas."

Then follows a comparison of this place with Point de Galle; but, as that little port has now been superseded by Colombo, these remarks may be omitted. Sir Emerson then warmly advocates the adoption of Trincomalie as the commercial capital of Ceylon, which would confer great and lasting benefits upon the natives.

"The measure for transferring the seat of Government and trade from Colombo to Trincomalie will encounter opposition from those already in possession of commercial establishments on the western coast, who may naturally hesitate to exchange ascertained facilities for contingent advantages in another locality." . . . .

"The project may at present be premature, and its realisation remote; but it is one which the changing circumstances of the colony is rendering year by year more obvious and imminent; and the growing conviction of its utility in the minds of the planting and agricultural community, by far the most influential in Ceylon, will eventually overcome the scruples and hesitation of the mercantile body."

These remarks are thirty years old; Colombo, with its railway to Kandy and its artificial harbour, has too good a start to be ever beaten; although, in the remote future, the Eastern half of Ceylon may be populated and developed, so as to require more than one large harbour. But, whether anything has been done for the defence of Trincomalie, beyond a few torpedo arrangements, is not known. I hear that "in 1885 it was contemplated to excavate a dry dock, capable of accommodating the largest sized ships." But the "Navy List" for 1887 shows that the protection of that fine harbour is normally ensured by the presence of "one man and a boy." Under the Civil Department of the Navy, the dockyard entertains a Fleet Paymaster, who is Naval and Victualling Storekeeper and Accountant, besides conducting the duties of the Medical Establishment; he appears to have a clerk, and with the assistance of a carpenter the Dockyard Establishment is complete. The fact of India and Ceylon being under totally diverse administrations is a source of great weakness to both. There is a deplorable break in the continuity of our Indian Sea defences which constitutes a very weak point in our armour. The question of strengthening it at that point, and the important question of the commercial development of the north and east parts of Ceylon, as well as the southern portion of India, seem one and indivisible, and worth much consideration in these times of peace.

At this crisis I heartily rejoice to see the Paumben Canal project being advanced; its completion will bring Trincomalie two days nearer Bombay at certain seasons, when strong winds and currents are prevalent upon the south and east coasts of Ceylon. The project includes railway connection between the north bank of the canal (through Rameswaram Island) and Madura, and thereby with the whole continent of India; thus constituting Paumben a first-class port, where the largest vessels will be able to lie under cranes alongside the shore. Thence military reserves may be rapidly despatched for the protection of Ceylon. The Pulney hills, only forty miles from Madura, could be utilised as a military sanatorium and depôt. We might xpect a simultaneous execution of the long-talked-about Peri-aur project, which consists in diverting the upper waters of the Peri-aur river (whose outlet is at Cochin on the Malabar coast) into the Vygah, the principal river of Madura; thereby furnishing that thirsty province with a supply of fresh water for irrigation purposes at a period of the year when the land is parched with drought.

Besides considering the defences of the Indian Coast, we should recognise the fact that crippled men-of-war and the largest merchant ships have no port of refuge between Bombay and Calcutta, where they can be docked. It is obviously important that no time be lost in constructing docks at Trincomalie, and making that harbour a real naval rendezvous, where all wants may be supplied. Fancy a crippled man-of-war struggling up to Bombay during the south-west monsoon, on a N.W. course, with the prevalent heavy swell on her beam, and rolling nearly gunwale under! If she cannot reach Bombay to be docked, she must remain an idle, useless hulk for perhaps half a year. An enemy's cruisers are not likely to go to Calcutta, or to Bombay, whilst they find a happy hunting-ground near Ceylon, where the steamer traffic of all nations converges, and the defenceless condition of the island invites them. It seems to me that many of the men discharged from our home dockyards might be advantageously deported to Trincomalie with their families, whilst other like measures are taken for the commercial development of that portion of Ceylon, by encouraging some of our surplus population to settle there.

Brighton, 14th July, 1887. X. I. N.

The following letter has been sent to the Directors of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company:—

The undersigned passengers on the s.s. Nizam desire to place on record their appreciation of the efforts made by Captain Haselwood to alleviate the inevitable discomforts during the three days, viz., 10th, 11th, and 12th of June, when a very severe gale was blowing in the Arabian Sea.

The undersigned cannot but feel that any expression of their opinion as to the working of the ship would be out of place, but they would point out that, even at a time when the navigation evidently required the most anxious attention, no trouble was spared by both officers and men to ensure the safety and welfare of the passengers; and that, in their opinion, an unusually dangerous passage has been safely accomplished by the skill and courage of Captain Haselwood.

(Signed)—Grace Pleydell-Bouverie, John Pleydell-Bouverie, Major 17th Lancers; J. Stokes, M.C.S., D. Antonio, Lord Bishop of Damao, Lewis Moor, Madras Civil Service; Rev. Dr. Ignatius Salvatori, Secretary of the Approaching Delegation for British India; And. Forrest, banker; P. Antonio Dias de Saisa, missionary; Antonio Fernando Pocas, missionary; Lieutenant Walter H. Simpson, B.S.C.; R. L. Shubrick, Ootacamund; Antonio Maria Callejo, Portuguese Missionary; Arthur W. Neufville Taylor, Lieut. Royal Scots; D. S. White, Madras.

Bombay, June 16, 1887.

It is with very great regret that we have to announce the sudden death from accident of Mr. HENRY BAYLEY, whose name for so many years has been associated with the P. and O. Company. Mr. Bayley was driving with a friend in the neighbourhood of Sidcup when his horse bolted, and the carriage was wrecked. Mr. Bayley was killed and his friend, Mr. Goodhart, was seriously injured, as was also the coachman, who was driving. Mr. Bayley had been connected with the Peninsular and Oriental Company almost from its inception, and was highly esteemed by all in the company, from the commanders of whose vessels he was recently the recipient of a handsome testimonial. His sudden death will cause widespread sorrow among a large circle of friends. The coroner for West Kent, Mr. Carter, opened an inquest on the 9th inst., when it was stated that death occurred from hæmorrhage, caused by fracture of the base of the skull. The inquiry was adjourned for a month, to enable Mr. Goodhart to give evidence.

SOLDIER-MURDERERS.—The sowar of the 16th Bengal Cavalry who shot his superior officer the other day at Jullundur and wounded another man besides, the latter accidentally, will be tried by Court-Martial. The private of the Connaught Rangers, who committed a somewhat similar offence, has been committed by the Jullundur Cantonment Magistrate to the Punjab Chief Court on a charge of murder. The rifle with which the murder was committed, and the bullet which had passed through the body of the murdered men and lodged in a wall, have both been sent up to Lahore.

LAHORE SCHOOL OF ART.—It is under consideration by Government whether the Lahore School of Art cannot be placed financially upon a simpler footing than at present. As the transactions are not of the nature of an Educational Trust or Endowment Fund, the Accountant-General has proposed that an incorporated and not an excluded Local Fund should be created. As, however, the whole matter is under settlement, the excluded Local Fund has for the present been abandoned.

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE O

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons desirous of purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholerale Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

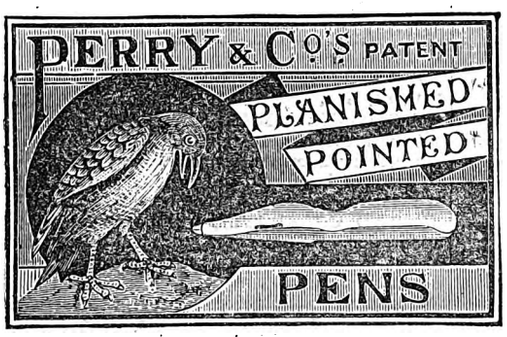
DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS.

The reputation of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS, originally introduced into England by the SOLE AGENTS, Messrs. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established, and the success of their enterprise has surpassed their expectations. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS afford the only instance hitherto attained of the perfect representation of real Diamonds by artificial means. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real Diamonds of great value at the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense to imitations. They attracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grand monde and élite of society, and are now worn at the Court Balls and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for intermixing with and replacing parures and other costly Diamond Ornaments, and can be worn at all times with confidence and security.



Every article is Mounted in 18-Carat Gold by the best Diamond Setters, exactly in the manner of the finest Brazilian Diamonds.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 25, 1887.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 5th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 3rd July; and from Calcutta to the 2nd July.

A Gazette of India Extraordinary announces a new four per cent. Loan of 200 lakhs. Promissory notes will be issued in the form of notes of the Loan of 1865, which this Loan will form part of, the conditions being similar. Tenders will be received up to noon of August 2nd.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the Imperial Institute are coming in apace in India, and the total is expected to amount to as much as five lakhs. Rangoon and Lahore have promised 10 per cent. of their Jubilee collections towards the Institute. The Government of India is now engaged on forming a Central Committee, while the local Governments undertake to constitute provincial branches. A certain number of gentlemen who subscribed, and have shown a special interest in the scheme, are being invited to serve on the Central Committee, which will probably consist of 100 members, with the Viceroy as President.

A SURVEY has been ordered for a railway from Peshawar to Jamrud. The order has been given merely that full information may be available should it become necessary to construct a line. Government has no immediate intention of undertaking the work. The railway, when required, could be made in a short time, as the distance is only some dozen miles.

A FUTILE attempt has been made to poison the Manchester Regiment, stationed at Agra, by placing arsenic in their beer. The matter is under investigation.

THE Government of India have communicated with General White regarding the possibility of further withdrawals of Native troops from Upper Burma. Three or four regiments will probably return shortly in addition to the 18th Bengal Infantry.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL LOCKHART, whose health has suffered somewhat from hard campaigning in Burma, proceeds shortly on six months' leave.

THE news from Afghanistan is again of a contradictory character, the reports being largely coloured by tribal prejudices. It is certain, however, that there has been serious fighting, in which the Amir's troops and the rebels have lost heavily.

THE latest news states that Gholam Hyder has had a skirmish with the insurgents in the neighbourhood of the Ab-i-Istadah Lake, which lies east of the Cabul-Kandahar road, about half-way between Khelat-Ghilzai and Ghazni. A considerable number of Ghilzais are said to have fallen.

CONFIRMATION of the Ghilzai defeat by General Gholam Hyder has been received, and it is stated that the loss of the tribesmen is heavy.

THE Mahsud Waziris have made no sign since their raid a few weeks ago, which would seem to show that they were really bent on gratifying a personal revenge merely against certain Batthani tribesmen.

IN connection with the civil medical administration in Upper Burma it was announced a short while ago that an allowance of Rs. 100 was to be given to medical officers acting as Civil Surgeons, for their civil duties only, there being no extra remuneration for police charges. The Government of India have now sanctioned the increase of the allowance to Rs. 150, in consideration of the increased amount of work that police charges will entail on Civil Surgeons.

SIR MAXWELL MELVILL of the Bombay Council is about to take sick leave. It is believed in Bombay that Mr. Naylor will act for him, and Mr. Lee-Warner for Mr. Naylor as Chief Secretary to Government.

MR. WESTLAND, officiating Secretary in the Finance Department, goes on furlough towards the end of the year.

MR. G. W. RIVAZ becomes Secretary to the Punjab Government upon Mr. Mackworth Young taking up his new post of Commissioner at Lahore.

THE B. B. and C. I. Company are it is understood, quite willing to begin the construction of the Simla-Kalka Railway at once. The matter, therefore, now only awaits the initiative of the hon. Member for Public Works.

THE Nizam's Government has deputed one of its educational officers to prepare a monograph on the art products of the dominions in compliance with a request from the Government of India.

THE Rukhmabai Defence Committee has advised that lady to appeal to the Privy Council in case the decision on her appeal to the High Court should go against her.

IT is said to have been almost decided to hold another Railway Conference at Simla next year, at such time as may be most convenient to the various railway administrations.

ON the arrival of the three additional garrison batteries from England next relief they will be stationed at Rurki, though they may hereafter be allotted to Aden, Quetta, and Rangoon respectively for heavy gun work. On the arrival of the batteries at Rurki the wing of the Lincolnshire Regiment now stationed there will probably be moved to Cawnpore, after taking part en route in the usual divisional concentration of troops at Meerut.

THE 18th Bengal Infantry, on return from Burma, will probably go to Jubbulpore in relief of the 2nd Madras Infantry, which moves to Secunderabad. If this be carried out Bengal will probably provide the Native Infantry regiment for Jubbulpore permanently.

ON the 25th ult., at Lahore, the charges brought against the Registrar of the Punjab University, in connection with the recent Law Examinations, were considered at a meeting of the Senate, but it is not yet given to the public to know what the charges are.

MAJOR E. M. ALEXANDER, Seaforth Highlanders, has been appointed Inspector-General of Gymnasia, vice Major S. W. Tyndall, of the 68th Durham Light Infantry. The office will, in future, be located at Lucknow instead of at Umballa.

THE directors of the Bank of Madras recommend a dividend at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, placing Rs. 1,25,000 to the Reserve Fund, and carrying forward Rs. 78,950.

THE Commercial Loan Mortgage Bank pays eight per cent. per annum, with a considerable addition to the Reserve Fund.

THE total area of India has been determined as 1,382,624 square miles, and the population as 253,891,821. Although immense tracts of country are annually cultivated, according to the most recent survey 10,000,000 acres of land suitable for cultivation have not as yet been ploughed. At the same 120,000,000 acres are returned as waste lands.

THE net Indian Sea and Land Customs Revenue, exclusive of the Salt Revenue, for the first two months of the current year amounted to Rs. 24,58,000, as compared with Rs. 22,12,000 during the corresponding period of the last financial year.

MR. WESTLAND, Officiating Secretary in the Finance Department, goes on furlough towards the end of the year.

Nerbudda Valley. Among the victims are Dr. Thompson, Civil Surgeon at Nursingpore.

THERE were four deaths from cholera in Bombay during the week ending 28th June. The monthly death-rate was 19·91, against 24·61 in the corresponding period of last year.

OBITUARY.—Captain J. C. Addison, R.E., Executive Engineer at Hoshungabad, C.P., on June 22nd; Lieut. H. J. Crofton, R.E., at Bangalore.

NOTES.

BOMBAY has at last been recognised, Mr. Peile, of the Bombay Civil Service, having been appointed by Her Majesty to the vacant seat in the Secretary of State's Council. Mr. Peile is a man of culture and of wide and varied Indian experience, and a better appointment could not have been made. Bombay has reason to rejoice.

THERE is hardly any news from India to-day, either by telegram or mail letters, calling for special notice. We give the Times' telegram, such as it is, as a sample of how bricks can be manufactured without straw. An entertainment to Colonel Marshall at Hyderabad by the Nizam's officials has been magnified by the Calcutta correspondent into a matter of grave political significance, why or wherefore it is difficult to understand. Colonel Marshall is, no doubt, doing well in the pleasant and handsomely-paid position which he occupies; but his friends, who continually insist upon advertising him as a marvellous "Indian political," are a little injudicious. He is a very good fellow—a pleasant host or guest "across the walnuts and the wine," but he has still to develop into a political genius.

IF the Indian Press be really sincere in its desire to do away with the official migrations to Simla and the other hill stations of India, it cannot do better than continue to publish the letters of "special correspondents" from those favoured summer retreats. In all these letters there is no subject touched upon except it deals with amusement, frivolity, and fashion. A fancy dress ball at Simla is recorded in detail in several columns, but nothing is said of any work being done in official circles, although at the present moment the chief civil and military authorities are dwellers upon the "delectable mountain." Is it all "beer and skittles," or, rather, champagne and lawn-tennis there?

IF the picture given of the place be as the "special" correspondents paint it, it rather resembles the description given by Mephistopheles to Faust when the former took the latter to a place where the cloven foot is honourable:—

> "I see young witches naked there and old ones
> Hardly attired with greater decency.
> I hear them tune their instruments,—one must > Get used to this damned scraping. . . . .
> Dancing and drinking, jabbering, making love,
> And cooking, are at work."

And this seems to be all the work done if the "specials" are to be believed.

OFFICIAL contradiction has been given to the report that Sir J. Gorst contemplates resigning the Indian Under Secretaryship for a Colonial appointment.

THERE has been a slight boon granted to officers of the Indian services on duty in India who may be entitled to pensions for good services or wounds. In future they can draw their pensions through their agents at home free of English income-tax. But there is this rider attached to the concession, viz., that if they come to this country on leave for a longer period than six months they will render themselves liable to the duty.

ALLUDING to the death of Sir Barrow Ellis the Englishman says he was at one time a well-known figure in Calcutta society, where he was for four years the Bombay representative in the Viceregal Council. There were few more popular men in Calcutta, and this was testified by the fact that on the eve of his departure from Calcutta on the 10th of March, 1875, upwards of 200 of his personal friends and acquaintances entertained him at a farewell dinner at the Town Hall, among the guests being the Viceroy, Lord Northbrook, the Commander-in-Chief, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and all the members of the Viceregal Council. The Hon. Mr. Macpherson, who was then officiating as Chief Justice of the High Court, proposed the health of the guest, which was, it was scarcely necessary to say, received with much enthusiasm and feelingly responded to. Sir Barrow Ellis is, however, better known on the Bombay side of India than in Bengal, as he spent the greater part of his service in that Presidency, where he arrived in 1843, and filled nearly all the chief offices under the Bombay Government, until he was chosen as a member of the Viceregal Council.

A QUESTION was recently raised in the Madras Presidency as to whether an officer of the Indian Medical Service in receipt of a good service pension should be required to forfeit this if he accepts the "special pension" created last year as a compensation for the withdrawal of the rank and privileges of a Deputy Surgeon-General, hitherto conferred on officers of the Indian Medical Service holding the appointment of Sanitary Commissioner. The question was raised in reference to a Brigade-Surgeon; but it might conceivably affect also officers of the rank of Surgeon-Major or Deputy Surgeon-General, and, as retired officers are not altogether ineligible for the good service pension, it might also be asked whether an officer of the Indian Medical Service, who has already obtained the "special pension" on retirement, must be considered eligible or otherwise for the good service pension. The Secretary of State has now decided that there is nothing in the letter or spirit of the rules affecting the grant of good service pension, nor in the conditions under which the "special pension" of £100 a-year was created, which should prevent a medical officer holding both pensions simultaneously.

THERE is an arrangement about to be carried out under very distinguished patronage to provide lady nurses for the military hospitals in India. Lady Roberts, the wife of the popular Commander-in-Chief, has, it is said, entered warmly into the scheme, and is doing all in her power to enlist support for it in India and at home. In the appeal which has been made public it is stated that there is in India a great necessity for such nurses, owing to the heavy mortality which prevails among young officers and soldiers from typhoid fever and other diseases where nursing is better than medicine, and is indeed more than half the battle for life. It is proposed that the experiment should first be tried at Rawul Pindi and Umballa, and that the nurses should have relief to the adjacent hill stations. Rawul Pindi and Umballa are, however, two of the most healthy stations in India. The typhoid fever which requires nursing is the product of the lower regions of India near the Bengal Presidency. Lady nurses might, and indeed would, be a boon and a blessing to sick soldiers and officers there, but quis custodiet ipsos custodes, from the pestilence which in those latitudes lays so many low and helps to fill the graveyards of Bengal. The Bengali servants are not bad nurses; they are watchful, attentive, and kind to their sick masters, and it is more than doubtful whether the proposal to supersede them by lady nurses from England would have the expected effect. The dire diseases so dreaded would attack the unclimatised nurses from England, and the result would be only failure and much sorrow in English homes.

THE Maharajah Dhuleep Singh has (says a military contemporary) gained little sympathy amongst the Natives of the Punjab, to whom he appealed regarding the way in which he declared the British Government had treated him. He used to be prayed for daily by the priests of the Golden Temple at Amritsar, but since the news of his disloyalty to England reached India these prayers have been discontinued. The Sikhs will not unfurl the Khalsa banner in his favour notwithstanding the inducement which he has offered to them of placing himself at their head in case of a Russian invasion of India. A paper printed at Lahore in the Sikh vernacular says:—"What is Dhuleep Sing to the Sikhs or the Sikhs to Dhuleep Sing? He has, no doubt, Sikh blood in his veins, but for all that the Sikhs know that the strange and sudden revival of Sikhism in him is not born of love for them, but has been put on as a disguise when he found that the British Government would not tax the people of India to help him in an enlarged career of pleasure and extravagance. Whether the British rightly took the Punjab is no question now. They took Dhuleep Singh." Herein is the gist of the matter, and it is satisfactory to find a Native journalist of the Punjab, where Dhuleep Singh hoped to stir up strife, taking this sensible view of the matter.

THE method of Despatch writing has considerably altered since the time when Cæsar informed the Roman Senate of his victory in three brief words. Coming to later times Commanders have been a little more prolix, but even the Waterloo Despatch, and that telling of the victory of the Alma, are not exhaustively long. But what is to be said of the Burma despatches which occupy column upon column of close type in the Indian newspapers? Such a comprehensive record of services rendered has seldom been given to the world; to republish it in its entirety would be more than we dare attempt in this paper, and to summarise it might be to daub the lily and adulterate refined gold. Everybody is praised in the Burma despatches, and everybody ought to be satisfied. Everybody but the police, who are not mentioned; but a separate Despatch may be forthcoming on their behalf.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JULY 24.

Colonel Marshal, the officer lately sent to act as private secretary and confidential adviser to the Nizam, has been entertained at a great banquet by all the principal nobles and officials of the Hyderabad State. The event is one of considerable importance, and it is meant not merely as a private compliment, but also as a demonstration to show the Government and the public that the people of Hyderabad unanimously approve the appointment of an Englishman to advise the Nizam, and desire publicly to thank the Viceroy. Colonel Marshall, replying to the toast of his health, said that he found Hyderabad to be different from what he had expected. There was really very little intriguing. The Nizam, he said, having once given him his confidence, had implicitly trusted him, and everyone, from the Ameeri Kabeer and Salar Jung downwards, had extended the right hand of fellowship. He added that the new Minister would commence work under favourable auspices. The treasury was full, many important reforms were in hand, and there were no arrears. On the other hand, he considered the machinery at head-quarters too costly and complicated.

The Nizam's eldest son, aged three years, died yesterday after a short illness. One Prince still survives.

Last April the Bombay Presidency Association presented a memorial to the Supreme Government stating that it had heard with deep concern that owing to financial exigencies the Government contemplated a reduction of the educational expenditure. The association added that this inspired alarm for the future of higher education, and prayed that the grant for education should not be curtailed. The Government in answering the memorial says:—

"The fears expressed appear to be founded upon a misunderstanding. The grant for education to Bombay is 43 per cent. higher under the new provincial contract than it was under the old contract. Such retrenchments as have been made affect not the colleges or the schools, but only grants in aid of school buildings. No transfers of Government colleges or schools to private agencies have been enforced by the withdrawal of Imperial grants, but, on the contrary, the previous assignments of such grants have been substantially increased."

The answer concludes by advising the memorialists to discuss the policy of the transfer of educational institutions to local agencies with the Bombay Government.

Rukhmabai's case has assumed a new phrase. Her husband, Dadajee, has instituted proceedings against Rukhmabai, her uncle, and the Bombay Gazette for libel contained in a letter written by Rukhmabai, and published in the Gazette, in reply to a pamphlet issued by Dadajee.

The loss of the Sir John Lawrence, which occurred in the cyclone on May 25, has been speedily followed by another sad accident to one of the Orissa passenger steamers. The vessel in question, named the Mahratta, belonged to the British India Steam Navigation Company, but had been chartered by Messrs. MacNeill and Co. to take the place of the Sir John Lawrence. Yesterday, while returning from Chandbally to Calcutta, and coming up the river with the flood tide, she appears to have struck a sandbank near Hooghly Point, about twenty-six miles below Calcutta, and to have turned over almost immediately. Assistance was at once rendered by the boats of the Hooghly Point signal-station and by an incoming Burmah mail steamer, which was close behind, and a number of the passengers and crew were rescued and landed. It is believed, however, that there has been considerable loss of life, though the exact number is not known, as it is uncertain how many passengers were on board.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal left Calcutta on Wednesday for a tour through a portion of the province. The first halt was made at Burdwan, where, after interviews with the Dowager Maharanee and the Minor Maharanee, he announced and sanctioned the adoption by the latter of the son of Lala Bun Behari Kapur, as recommended by the Board of Revenue. The adoption ceremony was immediately performed, and the boy was greeted as Maharajah of Burdwan. The selection of this boy has been strongly opposed by the Dowager Maharanee, and it seems likely that she will question its validity in the Law Courts.

It is stated that next year's budget will contain a special provision for the projected defence works, both at the seaports and in the interior.

The Madras Government, on the recommendation of its Surgeon-General and of the Government botanist, has determined to commence the cultivation of ipecacuanha on a small scale in the Nilgiris. The experiments at Ootacamund have shown that the plant, although not difficult to propagate, can only be successfully grown in a limited area possessing suitable climatic conditions, and it was considered unlikely that the cultivation would be taken up to any extent by private individuals. But before undertaking the cultivation on a larger scale the Government hopes that private enterprise may be induced to come forward.

The authorities of the East Indian Railway have contradicted the report that the eastern caisson of the Jubilee Bridge at Hooghly shows signs of subsiding.

The Indian subscriptions to the Imperial Institute now amount to over six lakhs of rupees.

CALCUTTA, JULY 24.

About the middle of last week a Bombay newspaper published a report that the Andarri mutineers from Herat, while making their way homewards, had been completely destroyed by the Ameer's troops. The rumour was held doubtful from the first, and news received from Quetta now shows it to be quite unfounded. The mutineers have reached Mizan, a small district twenty miles to the west of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, inhabited partly by Ghilzais, partly by Duranis. They number about 450, and are well armed, having carried off their Sniders and a quantity of ammunition from Herat Arsenal. They were joined in Mizan by Mahomed Wali Khan, a powerful Tokhi chief with a considerable following, and other Ghilzais are gathering round them. They have driven out the Duranis, and have seized or destroyed their grain. This new centre of rebellion seemed so formidable to Gholam Hyder that he abandoned his position in the Tarakhi country, and marched to Kelat, where two regiments from Candahar joined him. He has now six battalions, of which four are Cabuli. It is considered doubtful whether these last will fire a shot against their Andari comrades. It is known that some days ago they forcibly prevented the execution of certain Ghilzai captives. From Herat we hear that the Cabuli troops there have refused to permit the sentence of death passed by the Ameer on the mutineers of the Hazara regiment taken prisoners to be carried into effect. It seems that there is a strong feeling of solidarity among the Cabuli troops, whether Ghilzais or not, and that their loyalty has been severely shaken by the harsh measures adopted against the rebel tribes.

A fresh gathering of Hotakis is reported from Ataghur, and they have extended their depredations into the Arghesan district. A rumour from Ghazni is published in a Lahore newspaper to the effect that the different tribes of Hazaristan between Ghazni and Cabul have patched up their feuds and bound themselves by a mutual oath not to submit to the Ameer. Whether this rumour be true or not it is clear that last week's news is distinctly unfavourable to the Ameer, who, however, is said to be still expressing the utmost confidence in his ability to crush the rebellion. It is stated that four regiments from Badakshan are expected to arrive in Cabul shortly, and as they contain a large number of Uzbegs it is believed that their loyalty is beyond question. The Ameer's health continues good. It is expected that the ringleaders of the Herat mutiny now in prison at Cabul will be put to death.

Rumours reach Lahore from Chitral that the Russians are preparing to push forward towards Tashkurgan or Khulm, with a view of obtaining ready means of communication with Gilgit and Cashmere. No details have yet reached India regarding the agreement said to have been come to between the British and Russian Governments on the frontier question, and the public is therefore hardly in a position to form an opinion on the subject. It seems, however, to be generally expected that Russia will be found to have obtained some important concessions. It is reported that a small Boundary Commission will be sent to trace the new frontier.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE ON AFGHANISTAN.

(Statesman.)

Many of our readers will remember how persistently we have pointed out from the first that the frontier line drawn by the Boundary Commission from Sarakhs to the Oxus could never be more than a provisional arrangement. The natural limits of Afghanistan are the mountains of the Hindoo Khoosh. The territory beyond, which we call Afghan-Turkestan, belongs neither geographically, ethnologically, nor morally, to the Afghan dominions. It is only within the last forty years that Afghan sovereignty has been fitfully established over the Usbeg Khanates and Turkoman tribes beyond the great mountain range that has long been recognised as the natural frontier of the Russian dominions in Central Asia, and nothing that we can do will prevent the extension of Russian rule thereto. There it stops. Russian writers themselves tell us that with that frontier reached every step beyond it will be regarded by Russia herself as an aggression. She cannot stop short of that frontier, as no other line can be drawn that is not artificial, arbitrary, and impossible. And instead of recognising this as the very truth of things—which it is—all our efforts have been directed since she advanced to Merv to arrest her march somewhere midway between that oasis and the mountains. And so we have drawn an artificial and impossible frontier, that gives the Afghan Amir a sovereignty over the uncivilised Usbeg Khanates and Turkoman tribes that has only been claimed by the ruler at Cabul of very late years. The territory was first overrun by the miscreant Yakoob Khan of Herat some forty-five years ago, while a semblance of real dominion over it was established, many years later, by old Dost Mahomed Khan. Instead of recognising the legitimacy of Afhgan rule, all these tribes and Khanates are but waiting to throw in their lot with Russia, and to drive their Afghan rulers out. And we still insanely attempt to roll back the tide, refusing to see that our arranagments are written in water, and cannot in the nature of things endure. The Amir has but to fall back upon the natural limits of the Afghan kingdom, and to rule his subjects decently, to be perfectly safe from Russian aggression on the one side, and our own interference on the other. We insisted some fifteen years ago, upon Badakshan and Wakan being declared Afghan territory, but it is doubtful in the extreme, whether they will ever remain so, since they are not Afghan but Usbeg countries.

The Pioneer is beginning at last to discern all this, and so we read in one of its late issues:—"It must at the outset be admitted that Russia is now in a position to occupy all the country north of the Hindoo Khoosh without any great effort on her part." Is not this what we have pointed out all along? Not only is she in a position to do so, but she will be obliged to do so, in the same way that we have been obliged to make successive advances on our own frontier. We impose arbitrary and impossible conditions upon the Russian advance, and then complain that the logic of events proves the folly of such arrangements. Our contemporary proceeds:—"It would thus seem that the next move in Central Asia will be absorption of the Afghan Turkistan and Badakshan by the Russians, and the establishment of their outposts on the northern slopes of the Hindoo Khoosh from Maimana eastwards to the Pamir. But will this process of absorption be begun at once? Here the European factor in the question has to be considered. Russia has to calculate how far she can go without arousing in England a feeling similar to that which was displayed after the Panjdeh incident."

We shall no more succeed in preventing this advance than we did the advance to Merv. What is more, we ought not to attempt to prevent it. And here we are glad to see that our contemporary is beginning to discern this also, for he positively warns us "how dangerous it would be to commit India to a policy of adventure, in response to Russian aggression on the north." We are unfeignedly glad to see these indications of a return to more sober counsels than have prevailed for the last 12 or 13 years. The sooner the Russian frontier reaches its natural limit the better. It is not very far from it now, and its acquisition will be the first step towards rational and friendly relations between the two Powers. The civilisation of Asia depends upon the establishment of those relations, for until we have arrived at some modus vivendi with Russia, of a peaceful and honourable order, not a mile of railway communication can be made in any part of Asia west of the Indus. It is a reproach to modern civilisation, that to this hour not a mile of railway can be laid from the Mediterranean or the Euxine to India, because of the insensate jealousies that subsist between the two Powers. It would be as untrue as ridiculous to lay the blame upon Russia. No doubt she must share it, but it is to ourselves that by far the larger part of it belongs.

UNIVERSITY VICE-CHANCELLORS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Allahabad paper is of opinion that Mr. Justice Tyrrell, of the North-West Provinces High Court, possesses, for the post of Vice-Chancellor of the new Allahabad University, "a union of qualifications that the most fastidious could not dispute, and that no one else in the province, that we know of, can claim to rival." Of Sir Comer Petheram, as Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University, although he was recently Chief Justice of the North-West Provinces High Court, the Pioneer thinks less highly, because he is "almost aggressively a pure lawyer." We prefer, however, our own estimate of Sir Comer Petheram's qualifications. What an Indian university requires is control and guidance. Higher education in India may be promising; but it is decidedly young, and inclined to be erratic. The great question in Calcutta may be to establish a connection between the Bengal University and the English universities; but no comparison is possible between the two, for dangers that beset an Indian university never even threatened either Oxford or Cambridge. Here we have an infant institution transplanted from an old to a brand-new stage of civilisation; and too enthusiastic nurses are apt to imagine that the youngster can run before he can really walk; to dress him in clothes befitting more advanced years; and to feed him on strong meats before his time. The natural exuberance of youth, thus treated, leads to accidents as ludicrous as painful; and we hold that the best guide for an Indian university will for many years to come be a man who, whether "almost aggressively a pure lawyer" like Sir Comer Petheram, or at once a "scholar, speaker, writer, and judge" like Mr. Tyrrell, regards facts with the dry light of a trained judicial mind. Scholarship is good, and eloquence valuable; but enthusiasm is more likely to be dangerous than useful. What is wanted in educational matters in India, at Calcutta, as well as Allahabad or Lahore, is a man who will apply the brake judiciously and fearlessly whenever it is required—which is almost every day.

JAIL ADMINISTRATION IN BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.

The Government has published a long Resolution on the administration of Jails in the Bombay Presidency last year. The following paragraphs give the substance of it:—

The Jail population is again very low, and at the close of the year was lower than it has been for many years past. The conduct of the prisoners has been good. The escape from the Ahmedabad Jail is much to be regretted. The health returns are on the whole good. Financially, the administration has been successful. Average cost of maintenance and guards, and average net cost have fallen, while the earnings of the jails show a large increase. This is an indication of recovery from the temporary depression due to the operation of the Government of India's order. The Governor in Council trusts that it will be complete. During the year the finances of the Department have been subjected to the Security of the Finance Committee, and the revision of the Provincial Contract based on their recommendations has left but little margin from which to provide for the contingencies of increase in expenditure or falling off in receipts. The amalgamation of the head office of the Jail Department with that of the Registration Department took place during the year in compliance with the suggestion of the Committee. There is some danger under this new arrangement that the financial administration of the Department may suffer owing to the increased work thrown on its chief controlling officer, and the diminished time at his disposal. The Governor in Council is confident that no relaxation of the strict control which has hitherto been exercised will be permitted, and that the altered condition of Provincial finance generally will be borne in mind as an incentive to continued watchfulness in the management of the Department.

The report is submitted by Mr. Filgate, who received it from Dr. Cruickshank on 3rd December, 1886. Dr. Cruickshank's connection with the Department dates from 1869, when he was appointed to act as Inspector-General. He was confirmed in the appointment in 1871, and held it till he retired a short time ago from Her Majesty's service. The Governor in Council desires to place on record his warm appreciation of the good service performed by Dr. Cruickshank during this long period. His thorough knowledge of all details of jail administration, and unflagging interest in its efficient and economical working, have always been highly valued by Government. The Governor in Council would at the same time acknowledge the praiseworthy spirit in which Mr. Filgate entered on his new and onerous charge, and the energy which has characterised his administration during the half-year that has elapsed since the office was entrusted to his care. Mr. Filgate notices with hearty appreciation the valuable assistance rendered to him at this juncture by his Personal Assistant, Mr. Fraser. He also records the loss the Department has sustained by the retirement of Mr. S. S. Smith, who for nearly thirteen years held the post of Superintendent of the Thana Jail. The Governor in Council observes that under recent orders the report should have reached Government by 15th April, and hopes that Mr. Filgate will arrange to submit it punctually by that date in future.

THE KALKA-SIMLA RAILWAY.

(Pioneer.)

The Kalka-Simla Railway project, the preparation of which was authorised in the Gazette of India as long ago as June, 1884, and on which Mr. Morris and a survey party have been engaged for upwards of two and a half years, has been at last completed, and is understood to be now under review in the Public Works Secretariat. It may be hoped so much labour is not doomed to be pigeon-holed there, along with what, by this time, must form a fairly large library of railway projects in connection with Simla, Kalka, and the plains; but that after it has undergone the usual process of noting and minuting we may be permitted at least to hear more about it. Meanwhile some general particulars regarding Mr. Morris's proposals may be of interest.

Roughly speaking, we understand, Mr. Morris estimates that a two-feet gauge mountain railway from Kalka to Simla, some 68 miles in length, and that shall also serve the military depots of Kasauli, Subathu, Dugshai, Solon and Jutogh, can be constructed and equipped with the necessary rolling stock for some 62 lakhs of rupees—or not far short of a lakh per mile of length. For a good part of its length the railway would follow the alignment of the existing cart road, though not, as in the case of the Darjeeling line, taking up any part of it, ample allowance being made for keeping the cart road intact to its full width; a condition that in places involves considerable outlay. Necessary deviations to avoid excessive gradients, however, make the railway some ten miles longer. The steepest portions of the line would be the first sections from Kasauli to Dharmpur, and the last bit from Badhi Ghat into Simla, for parts of which the ruling gradient would be 1 in 33, necessitating extra engine power. But even this is not so steep as parts of the Darjeeling line which originally opened with gradients as steep as 1 in 19, and still has many miles of 1 in 28. As anyone who has made the journey by tonga will readily realise, about half the line must be on curves more or less sharp, though the sharpest has been limited to a 70 feet radius. Over these gradients and round these curves high speeds would equally obviously not be feasible, and between Kalka and Dharmpur and on the last bit into Simla, a limit of 7 miles an hour only is proposed, and of 10 miles an hour over the remaining lengths, so that, as regards speed, it would seem an express tonga might even still afford to give points. The principal stations after leaving Kalka would be at Dharmpur, to serve Kasauli, Sunawar, and Dugshai; at Muthan, 5 miles from Sabathu; and at Solon. The terminal station at Simla is proposed to be located in the compound known as "Innes own" immediately below the Chaura Maidan.

An outlay of somewhere about one lakh per mile—and, as we know, these railway estimates are apt to grow—for a toy line of so absurdly narrow a gauge as 2 feet may at first sight seem startling, but any line of the kind having to deal almost the whole way with treacherous rock-cutting, or costly retaining walls cannot fail to be costly, even though, as we believe is the case with the present project, there are hardly any large works of importance throughout the whole length. There will be some insignificant lengths of tunnelling, and not more than one or two bridges of any size, but naturally a large number of small ones will be necessary, as also provision for passing the drainage met with down every hill side.

In spite of this undoubtedly heavy outlay Mr. Morris is understood to take a very hopeful view of the probable financial return, which he anticipates would exceed 4 per cent. These calculations he bases upon the returns of goods and passengers at present passing over the road as prepared by the district officers, and on those of the existing tonga and bullock train services. But Mr. Morris is inclined to rely very much on comparison in this respect with the financial results of the Darjeeling railway, and it is quite true that the last-named line declared a dividend last year of 8½ per cent., and has paid this year an ad interim dividend of 6 per cent., and it might not seem by any means unreasonable to expect a similar line made to Simla to pay 4 per cent.

But without wishing to prejudice the question, or, in the absence of mere detailed information, to suppose this conclusion is not a perfectly reasonable one, it must not be forgotten that the Darjeeling line has enjoyed several exceptional advantages. It was laid on an excellent road already made, and with the exception of some minor modification of certain curves and gradients had to incur comparatively small expenditure under this most important head. The effect of this was to reduce the cost per mile to little, if anything, over half a lakh. Its total length, moreover, is only some 50 as against 68 miles. It has also enjoyed certain special advantages in regard to the maintenance of a good part of this road, which must all tell materially in favour of its shareholders. Both are probably pretty much alike as regards goods traffic, but the passenger traffic to Simla might presumably be much the greater of the two. And we venture to think a reasonable prospect of something even less than 4 per cent. ought to ensure the construction of a line to Simla.

We shall hope to deal more fully with the question when the details of the project are made public.

THE JUBILEE ODE.

"Balbus," in the Pioneer, is responsible for this irreverent parody of Tennyson's Jubilee Ode:—

Fifty times the punkah's moan has sounded,
Fifty times the summer heat has shimmered,
Since our Queen assumed her distant sceptre.
She, scarce known to the populace
Save in Fable or History,
Queen and Empress of India,
Loved and crowned, but a mystery,
Known, if known,—by a lithograph,
What this ultimate mystery,
This new terror of Jubilee?
Nothing of the gossip at the ghaut steps
Nothing of the daily, the familiar,
Soon, if seen, as in a mirror darkly.
Yet we loyally, all of us,
Buy chirags and illuminate
All our towns with cheap mustard oil.
In each shop let the bania,
Puzzled each to the heart of him,
Ask his brother the sense of it,
Ask what this ceremonial,
What the cause of the Jubilee?
Queen, how distant in your very Queenhood,
How unknown to us who are your people,
Distant from the highest as the lowest!
You that wanton in affluence,
Now's the time to be bountiful,
Bid your rulers regale with you,
Raise new taxes municipal,
Give twice-told to the hospital,
Let your rulers be comforted,
Be the Magistrate banqueted,
C. I. E. be your recompense,
In this year of the Jubilee!
What though fifty years are gone in shadow,
Now has come the year of honour's summer,
All the wasted years before forgotten!
Let the Public Works Architect
Shape an ugly memorial,
Daubed with hideous architrave,
Some impossible Institute,
Rich in whitewash, a parody
Of Parochial workhouses,
Branded centuries after us
With the name of the Jubilee.
Fifty years of ever broadening borders,
Fifty years of ever cheaper silver,
Fifty years of ever rising prices.
You, the Mighty, the Fortunate,
You, the Lord midst the mountaintops,
You, the Law manufacturer,
You, in Council laborious,
Patient ruler of India,
Could you give what we ask of you,
Give exchange but stability,
Give rupees an equality
With two shillings? Oh, happiness;
Then our hearts were in harmony,
All our voices in unison,
Singing hail to the glorious
Silver year of the Jubilee.
Vague the thunders moaning on our border,
Vague the spectre of the coming Russian;
But not vague the falling of exchanges,
All to clear the cheapness of our silver.
So let Rajas shine as Maharajas

DEATH OF SISTER TERESA.

The Mandalay Herald very much regrets to record, as the general public of Upper and Lower Burma will also greatly regret to learn, the death of Sister Teresa, who was the well-known and most highly-respected Superioress of the Convent of Saint Joseph de L'Apparition, the headquarters of which house is at Marseilles. The beloved sister was in her fifty-sixth year, and died after an illness which extended over eight months, borne with the most Christian and exemplary patience. She was assiduously attended by Dr. C. Pedley and the seven nuns who form the Society at the Convent. Sister Teresa was an old resident of Mandalay, having become so during the days of the old king of Upper Burma. She was one of the few European ladies who were admitted into the presence of King Mindoon Min's wife, at which time the ex-queen Soopia Lat was but a girl, quite neglected and discarded by the members of the reigning family; so much so, that even the very courtiers ignored her presence, little thinking that she would one day be queen. It was at this time of Soopia Lat's life that Sister Teresa had often occasion to notice the neglected young lady, who was one amongst the many children in the palace, who were totally uncared. This was the reason that, after Soopia Lat became queen, she took into her favour the deceased Sister, while at the same time all the courtiers who had despised her got their deserts. The ex-queen was fond of reminding Sister Teresa of her hard days when a girl, and this she used to do in the presence of all her courtiers. The queen used to say—"And you, Cea ghee (Lady Superior), you alone had then pity upon the poor abandoned girl, and often fed me when I had no rice." This fact is but too true, and scarcely anybody would credit it but those who know what life in Mandalay then was. The deceased Sister's influence with the ex-queen was always exercised in behalf of many a member of the European and Eurasian colony, which was then a small one. As is usual in such cases she was the object of much jealousy, and, strange to say, amongst those whom she had most befriended.

The intelligence of Sister Teresa's death, though not notified, was widely known throughout the Christian community almost the moment it happened, so that a very large crowd of people, of the various classes of the community, attended the funeral, which took place amidst much unfeigned regret. Peace be to Sister Teresa's ashes. She will be long remembered in Mandalay.

HORSE ARTILLERY IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The reduction of Horse Artillery batteries in England has special interest for India where there are eleven such batteries at the present time. The Home authorities undertook some time ago to maintain in England what was really a reserve of all arms for the British garrison in India, though, of course, it does not figure under that head. The arrangement is on the basis that in case of war in this part of the world, the regiments and batteries engaged shall be maintained at full strength by drafts from home as vacancies occur in the field. It is absolutely necessary to have an understanding of this kind, as we have no British reserves in India, and we should have to look to England for a constant supply of men if our troops were engaged in Afghanistan, Persia, or elsewhere. Now it is obvious that if the Horse Artillery at home are reduced to such weak proportions as Lord Wolseley in his superior wisdom insists upon, not a battery will be available for India in case of need. But India is of no importance in the eyes of the man who looks to Europe as the arena in which the British Army is to figure, and so the Horse Artillery are summarily reduced. The India Office should surely have had something to say in a matter of this kind; but, as a matter of fact, we believe they were never consulted at all. Our late Commander-in-Chief would certainly have induced the Secretary of State and his colleagues to protest in the strongest terms against the proposed reduction. Now, it is to be feared, the time has passed; for Mr. Stanhope's answer to the petition of the 117 members of Parliament shows only too clearly that the prejudices of Lord Wolseley against the Artillery are to over-ride all other considerations.

THE Echo de Pondichéry—a journal which has become the leading newspaper of French India—gives publicity to the following petition, which, it would appear, was actually addressed and sent to the Queen-Empress by a Native of Pondicherry, who happens to be a Tamil teacher, ou peu s'en faut, in a primary school, though it will be observed that he describes himself, with Oriental largeness, as "an English Professor":—

"Pondichéry, India.—19th March, 1887.

"To Her Imperial Majesty, Queen of Great Britain and Empress of India:—

"GRACIOUS, SWEET, TENDER MOTHER.

"A Child has no refuge but the mother. Therefore, O! Gracious Queen Mother! Her Imperial Majesty knows full well that India is a heathen Country FILLED with Brahmins and Heathens, the bitter enemies of Christianism. The Christians in general are very miserable. So great is their poverty they are unable to give even the HIGHER education to their Children. With such difficulties, though a few christians gain some knowledge of English, it is very difficult for them to get a post. Because recommendation is wanted! For example myself tried my best to get a footing in the English territory. It was impossible; Wherever I went the Brahmins asked me a sum of money for their recommending. Pressed by the burden of the large family, I applied to the French Government at Pondicherry, where I was taken as an English Professor. . . O! Bountiful Mother! Except Her Imperial Majesty, as I have no other recommendation, I beg that Imperial Majesty alone to have the favor on me and appoint me somewhere in the English territory.

"Do I wish the nomination of a Collector or Judge? No! The place of a thasildar in some one Taluq. For example Virdachalam of the Taluqs in the Cuddalore district will be quiet enough for me. For this act of favour I will pray God Almighty to bless thee my Queen Mother ever and ever. O! Merciful Mother, Have mercy on me! O! Bountiful Mother; have favour on me. Hail gracious Queen of Great Britain. Long live Empress of India."

BENGAL.

A REMARKABLE case of opium smuggling has been detected It appears that 76 bags of seed arrived by goods train at Howrah from Patna, and were taken by the consignee, who was a Native, to a godown in Jora Bagan, Calcutta. Here the police were informed that there was a considerable quantity of opium smuggled among the bags, and when the bags were cut open no less than thirty maunds and fourteen seers of opium were discovered. The matter is still under police inquiry.

THE latest report from the indigo districts in Bengal show that heavy rain has fallen generally, but no serious damage is said to have been done to the plant. Manufacture has not as yet commenced to any great extent, and the produce is said to be but middling. In Bihar rain has fallen over nearly the whole of the district, being very heavy in North Tirhut and Champaran, but up to the present no damage has been reported. Mahai has now become general, and from the few returns received the produce is said to be fair. Slight rain has fallen in some districts in the North-West Provinces, but more is still much wanted, and prospects continue rather uncertain.

THE recent amalgamation of the several State Railways with the Eastern Bengal State Railway having greatly simplified the compilation or preparation of accounts of the several lines, considerable deductions are said to have been made in the office of the Examiner of Railway Accounts. The services of about seventy assistants or clerks have been dispensed with. Those who entered the Service before the year 1881, and were in pensionable grades, were allowed a gratuity of three months' pay, and those who entered it subsequently when the "Provident Fund" was established, were permitted to draw the whole amount of the subscriptions, together with that of the interest accrued thereon.

MADRAS

THE Madras Municipal Budget has, says Government in its order thereon, been submitted three weeks after the latest date fixed by the Act, and "the President's explanation for the delay cannot be accepted as satisfactory. It should in future be placed before the Standing Committee and the Commissioners in time to allow of its being fully criticised, and yet submitted to Government punctually within the third week in March." Several other Municipalities come in for a similar rebuke.

THE traffic department of the Madras Railway is to have the shears applied to it at once. The pay of the higher-salaried station-masters is to be reduced to Rs. 120 a month, which figure is in future to be the maximum salary of a station-master, except in the case of the station-master of the Central Station, whose salary has been fixed at Rs. 150 per mensem. The reductions, it is said, will effect a saving annually of about Rs. 6,000; and the measure, having been approved of both by the Consulting Engineer for Railways and the Agent and Manager, has been given effect to in the establishment rolls for the coming half-year to be submitted to the sanction of Government.

DURING the quarter ending 31st March last, the destruction of domestic animals by tigers and cheetahs in the Madras Presidency has been very great. The following is a list of the various animals killed, viz.:—Bullocks, 524; cows, 630; calves, 170; buffaloes, 94; sheep, 233; goats, 210; horses, or ponies, 10; asses, 4; dogs 32; and pigs, 12. Of these the greatest number of casualties is reported in Malabar and South Canara, of which the former is responsible for 154 bullocks, 187 cows, 31 calves, and 48 bullocks; and South Canara for 253 bullocks, 311 cows, 62 calves, 21 buffaloes, and 20 dogs. The other districts are comparatively free from the ravages of wild beasts.

BOMBAY.

THE Times of India has opened it columns to a correspondence on the defenceless state of Bombay, and the last contribution to the subject is a letter from a "Captain R.N.," who urges that, before extending the present fortifications, measures, or in other words, money must be found to procure men to work the existing defences "Captain" strikes the key-note of an article we (Indian Daily News) wrote on this very subject a few weeks since, in pointing out that, in the event of a war, the Navy will have its work cut out in meeting the combination of at least two Great Powers; that there will be no detaching ships to defend large ports or coaling stations; the fleets, squadrons, and ships of the enemy will have to be met, fought, and beaten, or woe betide us. Our great lines of merchant steamers and ships afford no prospect of furnishing a reserve, either for the navy, or to man harbour defence vessels, manned as they are by Lascars or foreigners of every nation, creed, and colour; the few English seamen they possess are utterly untrained, and, we might add, as regards a large number of them untrainable. Beyond saying that men are wanted, "Captain" makes no suggestion as to how they are to be provided or trained. We suggested a Marine Brigade or Battalion under terms of service similar to the old East Indian English regiments, officered from the Royal Navy, the officers only to serve with the battalion for the term of a ship's commission, say three years. The navy, though they could spare no men, would readily lend officers on these terms, and the battalion would thus be kept in the highest state of efficiency by a three-yearly change of officers, who would come out posted in the latest technical knowledge.

FROM the date of the retirement of Mr. K. T. Best, Mr. J. Oliver is to be Head Master of the Ahmedabad High School, but he will continue to act as Professor of English Literature, Elphinstone College, till further orders. Mr. Uttamram Narbheran Mehta will act as the Head Master for the present. In consequence of Mr. Oliver's transference the following changes will take place:—Mr. E. D. Talati, M.A., will become Vice-Principal of the Elphinstone High School; Mr. P. A. Mistri will succeed Mr. Talati as Head Master, Narayen Jagannath High School, Kurrachee; Mr. K. N. Contractor, B.A., will take the Head Mastership of the Hyderabad High School; and Mr. Valli Mahomed Hussan Ali Akhund, B.A., will follow Mr. Contractor as Head Master of the Shikarpore High School.

DURING the absence of Mr. C. G. W. Macpherson, C.I.E., Mr. A. H. Unwin, C.S., will act as Judge and Sessions Judge of Satara. Mr. Shripad Babaji Thakur, C.S., will, on return from leave, act in a similar capacity at Rutnagherry.

MR. R. W. S. PINHEY, barrister-at-law, has been appointed Judge of the Small Causes Court at Kurrachee.

MR. P. S. V. FITZGERALD, acting third Assistant to the Political Agent, Kattywar, has been granted six months' furlough.

MR. J. H. C. DUNSTERVILLE, of the Rutnagherry Revenue Survey, has been promoted from a second to a first grade Assistant Superintendent.

SURGEON-MAJOR G. W. R. HAY is to act as Port Officer and Shipping Master, Aden, during the absence, on privilege leave, of Captain W. K. Thyne.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season report for the past week:—Rain throughout the presidency, except the Upper Sind Districts; more still wanted in parts of the Deccan, Bijapore, and Panch Mahals. Sowing operations progressing in parts of several districts. In Sind great anxiety felt for kharif cultivation owing to the inundation of the Indus being much below average. Fever in parts of six, small-pox in parts of four, and cholera and cattle disease in parts of ten districts.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, AND PUNJAB.

IN Umritsur a very brisk business in oil seeds is being carried on with Kurrachee by two European and several native firms.

THE following have been elected to the Simla Municipal Committee:—Colonel Sanderson, Colonel Mackenzie, Dr. Browne, and Messrs. T. Bliss and J. Weston. The votes have yet to be scrutinised before the elections are confirmed. The following were the unsuccessful candidates:—Mr. R. Goodall, Dr. R. Lyons, and the Rev. T. Edwards.

NOT the least foundation exists, according to the Pioneer, for the statement that the Punjab Land Bills are likely to be shelved. The Select Committee continues working steadily, and their report will be ready by the 15th July, by which time Mr. Quinton, who is one of the Committee, has to start for Bombay with the Public Service Sub-Committee.

MR. W. DALY, late Inspector-General of Police, Upper Burma, reverts to his previous appointment of Commandant Frontier Police, Cachar and Sylhet. The present incumbent of that apppointment, Mr. Savi, will be required to vacate.

THE Allahabad paper notices a novel and interesting suggestion regarding tea, which is contained in the Excise Report for the North-West Provinces. The Government explains that in an humble way, and with the good help of various wealthy municipalities, it has for some time past been endeavouring to increase the sale of tea, both in the dry and in the prepared state, among the Native population, and that it regards the spread of a taste for tea-drinking as the most effectual way of counteracting the craving for alcohol which the excise laws seem in vain to strive against. This position is a novel one to persons who, when they have nothing better to do, are ready to run a tilt against Government for encouraging dram-drinking among the population by means of its distilleries and excise shops. The Local Government's contention is that it does all it can by its excise laws to make drinking difficult and costly, and yet the people will drink and will add to the revenue.

BURMA.

AN INCOME-TAX QUESTION.—The question of how far the income-tax is applicable to Burma is just now exciting some attention in Rangoon. The other day a Mr. Moylan applied on behalf of Mr. A. C. Rudra, Barrister-at-Law, to stay execution of warrant issued by the Deputy Commissioner of Rangoon for non-payment of income-tax. Mr. Moylan said the provisions of the Income Tax Act happily did not apply to Burma, but the Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow had passed a decree against Mr. Rudra for Rs. 320. This decree has been sent with a certificate of non-satisfaction, and the Recorder has been asked to execute it. Under Section 622, C.P.C., Mr. Moylan asked the Recorder to revise the Deputy Commissioner's orders, and prayed that pending hearing of the application, execution might be stayed. His Honour granted the prayer, and directed the hearing to be fixed for Tuesday, the 28th instant.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

ROORKEE is to be the Chatham of India for scientific instruction. It is intended to carry out siege operations there on a grand scale, for which purpose it will be occupied by three garrison batteries of artillery and no infantry.

COLONEL BLOOD, R.E., who has done so much of late for the improvement of the Sappers and Miners, is to sit as President of a Board at Roorkee to arrange for the working of the telegraph in the field in connection with the Civil Telegraph Department.

CAPTAIN H. C. CHOLMONDELEY, 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade, will be attached to the 3rd Battalion until next trooping season.

LIEUTENANT A. LEGRAND JACOB, 1st North Lancashire Regiment; Lieutenant H. N. Roome, 2nd South Yorks Regiment; and Lieutenant F. W. Wodehouse, 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers, have been appointed probationers for the Bombay Staff Corps.

A REVISION of the northern boundary line of the Madras Command has been sanctioned by the Government of India. At present Madras troops are located in some of the stations of the Bengal Presidency which, so far as military command is concerned, are under this Presidency. In future, the whole of the Mundla and Narsingpore districts and that part of the Hoshungabad district lying to the east of the Taiva river, as well as the sanitarium of Pachmari and the rest camp at Sohagpore, will be included in the Saugor District Command of the Bengal Presidency.

THE following appointments have been made:—10th Bengal Infantry: Lieutenant E. C. Wright, from the 43rd Goorkha Light Infantry, to be permanent Wing Officer. 30th Punjab Infantry: Lieutenant Morton, attached to the 25th Punjab Infantry, to be Wing Officer. 2nd Punjab Infantry: Lieutenant C. Davidson to be Quartermaster. 3rd Punjab Cavalry: Lieutenant G. Murray, from the 1st Punjab Cavalry, to be permanent Squadron Officer. Guides Corps: Lieutenant H. S. Fox-Strangways, East Lancashire Regiment, to be Officiating Wing Officer on probation.

SOME doubts having arisen as to whether the appointment of Principal Medical Storekeeper in Madras is to be regarded as a military or civil one with reference to furlough and leave, the matter was referred to the Government of India for an authoritative ruling. It will be observed that the question is somewhat complicated by the fact that the Principal Medical Storekeeper has hitherto been taking privilege leave under military rules; but in a recent ruling of Government the appointment is regarded as one that is not military, and does not therefore qualify for promotion to the administrative grade. Such being the case, it is urged that it would be anomalous to regard it as military in the matter of furlough and leave. Originally the appointment was a military one, and it so continues in respect of pay, which is budgetted for and paid in the Military Department. The Government of India, we learn, have decided that the appointment must be viewed as quasi civil, and consider it necessary that, if a Brigade-Surgeon, he should be required to fulfil the condition requisite for promotion to administrative grade, namely, to resort to military duty prior to promotion. It is also decided that he rightly draws pay from the Military Department, and obtains leave and furlough under military rules, and should continue to do so.

JAVA INDIGO.—Much attention is given in Java to the preparation of indigo, which in quality is said to be equal to the best produce of Tirhoot. The competition seriously affects the Indian industry, except for the American markets, where certain descriptions of the dye are in demand, which India can supply better than Java. The prices in India last year were very low, notwithstanding that the crop was not excessive, while the production in Java was twice the average outturn, and found a ready market. The Behar Indigo Planters' Association have deputed one of their members, Mr. Collingridge, to Java, to make inquiries about indigo cultivation in that country. The Bengal Government are said to be defraying a portion of Mr. Collingridge's expenses, and it is reported that he also carries letters of recommendation from the Government of India. The object of the visit will be to try to discover how it is that the Dutch planters turn out indigo superior to that manufactured by their brethren of Behar.

THE COALFIELDS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIA ARCHIPELAGO.

The production of coal in the Dutch East Indies, both in Sumatra and Borneo, is at present a subject of much consideration. It forecasts a new state of affairs, competing with the trade as it is at present established. It is consequently important to inquire into particulars regarding market value, prospects of consumption, and transport. The importance of this new production is all the more deserving of consideration, as England is indebted for the prosperity of her industry and her riches to the abundance of her coalfields, whilst the industry of Belgium, Germany, and France has largely increased since the opening up of coal mines there. In fact, industries are stimulated and manufactories are started wherever coal can be obtained at a low price. The geographical position of Sumatra and Borneo offers great advantages to the extensive steam navigation between the Cape of Good Hope and Japan, including the Dutch Indian Archipelago, because of the cheap transport of the coal from these mines; an advantage which is unobtainable for the export from England and Australia. The export of coal from England, as per Board of Trade returns, to the above named ports during 1885 amounted to about 2,000,000 tons, whilst during 1886 about 230,000 tons were exported from Newcastle, N.S.W., and Sydney. The coal, therefore, from the Dutch East Indies will find markets requiring about 2¼ million tons, the importance of which prospect is enhanced by the fact that the working of mines on a large scale is comparatively cheaper than on a smaller one. The mining projects in the Dutch East Indies are as yet in their infancy; the necessary capital has still to be found, but the existence of coal of superior quality being proved beyond doubt, these projects will be executed with confidence in the face of the important markets which the coal will find. The value which the Dutch East Indian coal is likely to realise in the various markets of India, China, &c., may or may not be an item for useful discussion here, but attention is invited to the fact that the price of coal at the mine or port of export, wherever that may be, does not differ much. A first quality Cardiff steam coal can be had at 8s. 6d. to 9s. per ton f.o.b., and Australian coal at 11s. to 11s. 6d. per ton f.o.b. all the year round. The chief question to be considered is not coal, but freight, and for this reason the geographical position of Sumatra and Borneo is a matter of the greatest importance. The freight from England to the above-named ports often fluctuates considerably, and according to circumstances, which observation is also applicable to the freight from Australia, whilst the freights from Sumatra and Borneo are likely always to remain the same, and, moreover, will be very low. Shipowners who accept a cargo of coal for their vessels from England weigh well in what season the ship will arrive at the port of discharge, and whether home freight is likely to be obtainable there, or in the neighbourhood, and at what probable figure. In fact, out and home freights are often simultaneously contracted for in such cases, in order to prevent disappointment, and as home freights are subject to many fluctuations through the price of and the demand for goods, and also the scarcity or abundance of tonnage, the freights for coal, for voyages of three or four months' duration, vary constantly, and rise and fall accordingly.

The production of coal in Australia has not yet reached a very important figure considering the number of ports amongst which the export of a quarter of a million tons has to be divided, but it takes a voyage of three months before vessels with cargoes of coal from there arrive at their ports of discharge in India. With regard to Sumatra and Borneo the circumstances are entirely different. The number of sailing vessels arriving there is not worth mentioning, as there is not sufficient important trade, and the coal export from there will consequently not take place in sailing vessels to advantage. Tonnage for coal export will have to be provided by steam colliers of smaller or larger dimensions, such as those trading between the Tyne and London, Cardiff, and the North of France, which return to the loading port without delay in water ballast. The freight from the Tyne to London, a distance of about 200 English miles, occupying a time of thirty hours, amounts to 4s. 6d., consequently the freight from Borneo and Sumatra, to the various ports—distance from 500 to 700 English miles—will not exceed 6s. to 7s. per ton, the expenses of loading and discharging remaining the same whether the distance be a long or a short one.

The coal has been compared by a special committee in England with the coal sent from Newcastle-on-Tyne for use in Dutch India by the Royal Dutch Navy, and has been tested by various committees appointed by the Dutch Indian Government, which consisted of naval officers, a Government engineer, and a mining engineer on board of two Government steamers—the Zwaluw and the Ternate—when it was found that the Koetei coal contains 6 per cent. more heating power than the coal from Newcastle-on-Tyne (which place should not be confounded with Newcastle, N.S.W.). The Koetei coal allows the fires to be kept up much easier than English coal does, gives very little smoke, and almost no dust in loading. Moreover, private steamship companies have acknowledged for four years that the Koetei coal may be considered a first-class quality of steam coal. The above shows that the Koetei coals are of superior quality, that they are plentiful, that the mines can be worked easily, and offer great and exceptional advantages for transport. The coal can be supplied at Singapore, Saigon, Bangkok, China, Japan, and Philippine Islands at about f.12, equal to 20s. per ton c.i.f., and in the Dutch Indian Archipelago at f.10, equal to 18s. 4d., which prices would leave a large margin of profit.

DIRECT TEA IMPORTS TO GLASGOW.

The Scotsman writes:—In the past almost the entire quantity of tea consumed in Great Britain has been imported into London, which has enjoyed a complete monopoly of the trade. Some little time since Mr. A. Erskine Muirhead, Glasgow, turned his attention to the matter, and after a recent visit to India, organised a scheme which promises to bring a proportion at any rate of the Indian and Ceylon teas direct to the Clyde. Seeing that Glasgow has cheap and regular communication with the North of England and Ireland, it may be confidently assumed that there are openings in those quarters for considerable further developments of the trade. For 20 lb. to 40 lb. boxes, direct from the gardens, it seems certain that there will be a large and regular demand. Through bills of lading from Calcutta and Colombo to Glasgow can now be obtained at about the same freights as to London by steamers of the highest class. Constant supplies have been promised from some of the best gardens in India and Ceylon, and up to the present time the undertaking seems to have been attended with a large measure of success. If a recent advice to the effect that "the crop both of Hankow and Kiukiang teas is the worst ever known" should prove to be well-founded, the proportion of the newer kinds used throughout the country may be expected to show a marked increase. Messrs. Henderson Brothers, of the Anchor Line, have displayed every desire to co-operate in the efforts towards the encouragement of direct importation from India and Ceylon to Glasgow. It is their desire that the teas should be conveyed in their vessels, but there are certain drawbacks with which they, in common with other shipowners, have to contend. It is well known that the regular liners engaged in the Calcutta trade load back, as a rule, to London, and that the Clyde steamers come round to Glasgow to prepare for the outward run. When a vessel steams round to Glasgow in ballast, as is usually done, she has no "light dues" to pay, but if she carries any cargo from abroad, say 100 chests of tea, she is charged as on a foreign voyage. Clearly, however, this is a difficulty which, should the trade assume the dimensions which its promoters anticipate, will be easily overcome. For then vessels will load from the Indian and Ceylon ports to Glasgow direct.

A RAID ON DACOITS.

A Lieutenant in Burma writes the following to a friend in Madras:—

"I had a rather successful raid after dacoits the other week. The man who is in command of the station had gone to another place for a few days, and I was in temporary command. I got news of a band of nineteen men being at a village eighteen miles off. I thought that perhaps if I went at night they might be out pursuing their trade, and so determined to arrive there soon after midday, when they would be likely to be having a siesta. We started before dawn and marched pretty consecutively, except for a halt for breakfast. It was fairly warm at 11 A.M., still we got along well. I was afraid that some Burman might be before us and give the men notice; we got within about three miles from them. I left the Infantry to come on as fast as they could, and trotted on with twenty Mounted Infantry—a Burman guide riding in front. We went jogging along steadily till the guide suddenly pointed to a village in front as the one we wanted. From this point we had great fun. We were on high ground and could be seen from the village, which was rather more than a quarter of a mile off—so it was a case of getting there before we were discovered. Such a spanking gallop we had across some ploughed fields, as hard as the ponies could lay legs to the ground. The Burman guide led all the way along like a buck, and I could not catch him. I thought at the time how picturesque he looked with his little graceful body (they are a beautifully built set of men these Burmans), long black hair streaming behind him, and his gay pink scarf fluttering over his shoulder. I had made an arrangement that as we were galloping round the village I was to shout 'one,' 'two,' &c., whenever I saw a place of exit that I wanted stopped up, and the men who were 'one,' 'two,' &c., were to halt, the rest coming on. Well! round we went like winky (it was lovely!), and in a few seconds we had got all the way round, and not a dog could get out without our seeing him.. We just collared one chap, more wide awake than the rest, who was making off. It was a complete surprise—before they realised our arrival we had stopped all their bolting holes and were in the midst of them making prisoners. We caught sixteen dacoits in all. We unfortunately failed to bag the leader of the gang—the villagers said that he had that morning gone out to another village to breakfast. Lucky chap! his star must have been in the ascendent that morning. I think it must have been a true story—he may have got away on seeing us coming, but in that case I think we should probably have seen him. We put up in the village that night and marched back the next morning."

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JOHN FRANCIS STEPHENS, late of the 39th (Dorsetshire) Regiment, died, after a long illness, at Rathmines, Dublin, on the 6th inst. The deceased officer, who had seen a good deal of service in India and China, served with the 86th Regiment during the Indian Mutiny of 1857, and was present at the disarming of four companies of the 27th Bombay Native Infantry at Ratnagherry in August, 1857. He served in the Central India Field Force under Sir Hugh Rose. During the Taeping rebellion in 1863 he served as Adjutant-General to the Anglo-Chinese force under Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon, was present at the attack and capture by storm of the walled city of Taipan on May 1, also at the attack and capture of the walled city of Quinsan, including the taking of the rebel positions at the east and west gates of the city and repulse of the sortie of the garrison which ended in the surrender of 2,000 rebels, together with the capture of numerous stockades and minor fortifications. For these services he received the Chinese Imperial decoration of the Red Button.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE AGRICULTURAL LABOURER.*

The agricultural labourer is in our midst. We see him day by day; we talk glibly about his ways, his doings, his faults, his aspirations; but how many of us understand him? Who amongst us could speak with accuracy in regard to but one of the various problems of social life which are linked with the welfare and prosperity of the toilers on the land? Mr. Kebbel's work is therefore most welcome. It comprises within a small compass all that has appeared in the Reports of various Commissions as to the numerous vexed questions which have perplexed and harassed the thinking world. The work, in its original shape, has been many years before the public, but the present edition is not only corrected up to date, but in part is entirely rewritten to suit the more modern phase of the agricultural question.

It will occasion, perchance, no small surprise that Mr. Kebbel should hold to the opinion that "the condition of the agricultural labourer is slowly but surely on the rise." Amidst many distressful incidents connected with the cultivation of land it is at least refreshing to find an able and reflective expert proclaim that the tiller of the soil has not as yet suffered from depression.

Upon the vexed question as to the advantages or otherwise of small as compared with large farms, our author speaks with a less certain sound; but, on the whole, he inclines to the view that "petite culture" is not suited to England, and that "a general exchange of large farms for small would not, in the long run, either improve the condition of the peasantry or increase the produce of our agriculture."

Another burning question of the day is with regard to Allotments. Here, again, Mr. Kebbel has much to tell us. Space precludes more than a passing reference to this very difficult subject; but, in brief, it may be said that he is opposed to the idea that the letting of allotments should be entrusted by statute to parish authorities. Still less would he empower the latter to seize land for the purpose when the owners are not willing to let it.

These and many other matters of like interest and equal importance teem in the pages of Mr. Kebbel's most attractive volume, which merits the support of all who wish to understand one of the most embarrassing problems of the day, a problem which is in our midst, and from the responsibility of which the nation cannot by any means divest itself.

MY HUNDRED SWISS FLOWERS.†

It is one of the attractions of the science of botany that it imparts a charm to the everyday rambles of everyday life. Not a lane, not a nook, not a cranny, but what can and does afford some hidden and unexpected pleasure unknown to and unrecognised by the ordinary wayfarer, who passes along heedless of the beauties which are around the path of every one who has eyes to see and tact to observe. If this be so in the general quietude of home-life, what must be the pleasure derived from a botanical knowledge of plants and flowers when rambling amidst scenes where nature is at her grandest; when, in a word, wandering over the lovely Alps and revelling in the beauties of the unrivalled glories of the unmatchable Swiss Mountains!

Such being the case, Miss Pratten's concise and carefully-prepared compendium, giving the leading characteristic of a hundred of the more prominent flowers of those heights, should be welcome to every tourist about to seek health and recreation in Helvetia's bracing clime. The danger of a work of this nature is that the author writes rather for the learned than the ignorant, for the cultivated mind rather than the humble student of Nature. This mistake has not in this instance been committed. Miss Pratten combines fulness, or at any rate sufficiency of information, with simplicity of diction. All may read, all may learn, and all may thank the talented authoress for her kindness in producing just such a book as the ordinary public require; on the one hand not too erudite, while on the other the treatment is not childishly plain, or needlessly unlearned.

BIRDS OF THE BIBLE, DOMESTIC ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE, AND WILD ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE.‡

The animals of the Bible—the birds of the Bible. Again and again we read about them, but how many of us form even the barest idea as to who and what they are? The Behemoth! what is it? Who can describe the sparrow that "sitteth alone on the house-top?"—a habit at utter variance with the instincts of its English companion in name, which is the only bird that is to be found in cities. The conies, which are a "feeble folk, yet make their homes in the rocks." Doubtless, but who could give a sketch of one of these peculiar creatures?

In these circumstances the well-known naturalist, the Rev. J. G. Wood, has conceived the happy notion of presenting to the public an account of the various creatures mentioned in the sacred text. The result is a series of volumes most attractive in appearance, most interesting in substance, and most instructive in matter. Hitherto they have all been merged in one large and expensive volume, but now they are published separately, at a price which brings them within the reach of all who can appreciate sound, wholesome literature.

The animal world is in itself so interesting that it needs, perhaps, no adventitious aids in treating on topics which are so popular and fascinating; but Mr. Wood has lent to his volumes the further attractiveness attaching to legends, thus imparting the fullest charm to what was already charming. As gift-books for young people home for the holidays it would not be easy to surpass these very excellent volumes, and those who get them will, we are persuaded, not find fault with what they receive.

Messrs. Longmans cheap reprint of "Marrying and Giving in Marriage," by Mrs. Molesworth, and of "Hester's Venture," by the author of "Mdlle. Mori," will give everyone an opportunity of reading those excellent novels. The print is clear, large and distinct, the paper good, and the binding neat. What more could the most fastidious expect?

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"In his Grasp," by Esme Stuart (W. H. Allen and Co.); "Letters from Ireland" (W. H. Allen and Co.); "A Venetian Lover," by Edward King (Kegan Paul, Trench and Co.).

THE Jumna, troopship, Captain A. D. Fanshawe, will proceed to the yard of Messrs. Earle and Co., on the Humber, where she will receive new engines and boilers at a cost of £50,000.

THE military baloon department of the German army is said to be making experiments with a view of trying the effect of hurling down masses of dynamite on fortifications.

THE death, in Madras, on the 13th ult., of Mr. G. H. Bayly, B.A., C.E., the executive engineer of Mysore, is reported.

IT appears there is danger of the Khonds in Ganjam bartering away their lands for liquor, and it is suggested that it may be avoided by enforcing the conditions, forbidding licensees from obtaining directly or indirectly any interest whatever in land. It is thought the rules could be easily enforced by the Agency Courts being authorised to refuse to recognise any sale or mortgage deeds of land which are not registered in the Deputy Tahsildars' office. From another point of view the provision would also be useful in itself, as it would tend to put an end to the constant disputes about land which now occupy the District Munsifs' Courts.

THE annual dinner of the printers of the firm of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. was held at the Railway Hotel, Boxmoor, Hemel Hempstead, on Saturday, the 16th inst. After a pleasant day spent in the quiet but picturesque neighbourhood, the company sat down to an excellent and well-served repast, Mr. C. E. Johnston, the senior partner of Messrs W. H. Allen and Co., taking the chair, supported by his fellow-partners, Messrs. Heathcote, Randall, and Danby, Mr. Frederick Pincott acting as Vice-Chairman. After the good things on the table were done substantial justice to, and the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been given from the chair and heartily responded to, Mr. Bloomfield proposed the health of the firm, Mr. Johnston replying. It was pleasant to note from both speeches that employers and employed were on the best possible terms, the result of kindly appreciative understanding between masters and men. Mr. Frederick Pincott, in his usual felicitous way, gave the toast of "The Press," coupling it with the names of Mr. Heathcote, Mr. Simpson Jones, and Major Fenwick, who answered for the honour done to them in their several departments. The health of the Chairman, proposed by Mr. H. Brooks, was enthusiastically received and drank with "all the honours." Mr. Randall gave that of the Vice-chairman in a very complimentary little speech, in which he touched upon Mr. Pincott's great and varied linguistic attainments. Mr. Hogg spoke amusingly and well in giving the health of the visitors, and a bumper to "Sweethearts and Wives," asked for in happy words by Mr. Baker, brought the toasts of the evening to a fitting conclusion. Between the toasts there was some excellent singing by Messrs. Geary, Walsha, Brooks, Baker, Perry, Hogg (both encored), Scott, Forbes, Flynn and Stirling, Mr. Redfearn doing pianist. Mr. Johnston's hen-pecked husband and Mr. Pincott's gay little blackbird, who ought to have gone home to tea, were pleasant additions to the vocal harmony. Some clever imitations were given by Mr. Hogg, and a scene from The Two Roses was excellently rendered by Mr. Heathcote. A very enjoyable entertainment came to a close with the singing of "Auld lang Syne" as shades of evening fell, and all returned to town, holding strongly to the opinion that hosts, stewards (Messrs. Bloomfield and Brooks), and caterers had admirably combined to make the occasion a success.

THE AFGHAN BOUNDARY QUESTION.

THE news which was telegraphed from St. Petersburg on Wednesday last, to the effect that the Afghan Boundary Question had been satisfactorily settled, was pleasant reading if one could have made certain that it was absolutely true. Not that the settlement agreed upon need be doubted, but the satisfaction concerning it. If it were possible to believe in boundary pillars then the satisfaction which the Standard gave vent to is comprehensible. "All that will now be necessary," says that journal, "is to erect a few boundary pillars upon the spots agreed upon between Sir West Ridgeway and M. Zinorieff, and it is to be hoped that we have now heard the last for some time to come of Anglo-Indian Russian differences in Central Asia."

This is excellent fooling! We are not Russophobists; we are not alarmed about the safety of our Indian Empire, nor do we desire to discount British prestige there, but we do not believe that the erection of a few boundary pillars is the final settlement of the differences between Russia and England in Central Asia. We wish that we could believe in such a happy consummation. Could Russia and England come to some honourable understanding in the matter it would be the dawn of a bright day for England and for India. It would usher in a change which would bring the victory of peace home with its blessings to both countries. Reduction in enormous military expenditure, increase of trade, wealth, and commerce, and a soothing sense of security would be the result. But this is still, unfortunately, an Utopian dream. Russia may agree to accept this or that frontier line, to renounce one claim or another, but the question between the two Powers is not settled then. Russia simply bides her time, and until some definite understanding is come to regarding her advance in Central Asia England must, we fear, continue to be in the position of the strong man who arms in order to keep his property in peace. On the very day when the pleasant news of the Frontier arrangement was published here a telegram came from Bombay stating that according to intelligence from a Native source the Russians are secretly negotiating with the Governor of Yarkand, requesting permission for Russian troops to pass through his territory. Commenting upon this a military contemporary says :—"This may or may not be true, for all information regarding events beyond the British frontier coming through Native sources must be taken with many grains of salt. But one thing is very certain, and that is that when it suits Russia to pick a quarrel with Afghanistan "a few boundary pillars" are not likely to stand much in her way. A judiciously administered bribe may at any moment induce the Afghan commander on the frontier to open fire upon the Russian outposts there, and then the matter of a further Russian advance will be a very simple matter indeed."

This is the opinion of many who have a right to be heard, owing to the experience they have gained as to the true state of affairs. That for the present Russia may be satisfied with an arrangement of "give and take" concession between England and herself is likely enough. She knows how to wait on opportunity. But so far as England is concerned she can accept the situation only as being able to make no better of it. She must also wait and must also watch—keeping, of course, her faith in Providence, and perhaps also in Russian assurances, but keeping also, it is to be hoped, her powder dry.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—An engine-driver named Buckley, in the employ of the Government Railway Department, went for a drive in Kandy, a few days ago, with his wife and family, when the horse bolted and plunged into the lake. The horsekeeper with great presence of mind saved the baby; Mr and Mrs. Buckley were also saved, but their five children and an ayah were drowned.

SMOKERS who love a cool and comfortable pipe should invest in one of Leslie Evelyn Liardet's new patent ones, which possess the several advantages of cleaning themselves automatically, can be smoked out perfectly dry, wasting no tobacco and preventing nicotine from entering the mouth, telescoping into small space, and requiring no case. All pipes are of London manufacture, and of first quality only. The sole licensees are Adolphe Posener and Co., 61 and 61½, Mansell-street, Minories.

THE BROAD ARROW AND NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle-on-Tyne

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

(Signed) LAMB AND ARMSTRONG, Architects.

EXTRACTS.

THE COMPANY'S EXTRACTS are manufactured on a new principle, which yields products of the very best quality.

"Normal" Food Extract is superior to most, if not all, other Meat Extracts, owing to its richness in stimulating and restorative properties. It contains, as shown by analysis, less ash and water, and more substances soluble in alcohol, and more nitrogenous compounds than the best known Extracts.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

THE course of instruction is designed to PREPARE BOYS (Sons of Gentlemen, from 7 years of age) to occupy the positions of Land Owners and Occupiers, Land Agents, Surveyors, intending Colonists, &c. The education secured at this institution is of a very superior character, the whole object of the School being to impart a thoroughly practical and scientific knowledge of all agricultural subjects; a thorough moral, intellectual, and physical training, it pledges itself to send forth its pupils practically religious and sound scholars. The school is most pleasantly situated in a healthy locality. The greatest possible care is bestowed upon the health and domestic comfort of the pupils. The diet is excellent and unlimited. The school is very strongly recommended. References throughout Great Britain.—Address for prospectus the PRINCIPAL, Maypole Road, East Grinstead, Sussex.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scenes from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1887.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 12th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 10th July; and from Calcutta to the 9th July.

THERE is very little news to report from the seat of the Supreme Government, as, owing to heavy rains during the week, railway communication at several places have been stopped. The Calcutta Press complains that Simla is once more cut off from communication with the plains except by telegraph.

FLOODS in the Bolan on the night of the 6th July washed away the railway line in several places between Mach and Bibinani.

So great is the number of Jubilee addresses that are destined for the Queen from her loyal subjects in India that their arrangement at Simla in due form for transmission to England is even yet not complete.

IT is understood that the whole of the defence works throughout India, including the entire coastline, are to be brought under the administrative control of the Military Works Branch of the Public Works Department.

THERE has been an outbreak of cholera at several places along the line of railway in the Nerbudda Valley, commencing at Jubbulpore. At Nursingpore there have been many deaths, among them that of Dr. Thompson, Civil Surgeon. At Sohagpur, also, there has been serious mortality from the same cause.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL T. H. WAY, commanding at Bellary, shot himself with a carbine on July 5th. At the inquest held a verdict of "suicide during temporary insanity" was returned. General Way was extremely popular. Colonel Parsons, of the 2nd Lancers, has assumed command of the station pending the appointment of General Way's successor.

MR. JUSTICE BADEN-POWELL, of the Punjab Chief Court, had a slight attack of apoplexy while in his place on the Bench on July 6th. He is, however, pronounced to be doing well.

MR. W. BLENNERHASSET, Judge of Cawnpore, takes three months' leave shortly, when Mr. Moule, the collector, will officiate. Mr. Bird, who is returning from leave in England, will probably act for Mr. Moule.

MR. HORACE BELL has assumed charge of the North-Western Railway at Lahore from Colonel Wallace.

COLONEL COLLETT, the late Deputy Adjutant-General, officiates for Brigadier-General Lockhart in Burma, who, as stated in the last Mail, is going on leave.

MR. J. M. SLEATER, Chief Engineer, Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, has been appointed a member of the Committee on the Future Extension of Bombay, during the absence of Major Bisset on three months' privilege leave.

SIR COMER PETHERAM goes on short leave from the 25th July, and Mr. Justice Romesh Chunder Mitter officiates as Chief Justice of Bengal.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA has appointed the Rev. Arthur Kitchen to officiate as Archdeacon during the absence of the Rev. F. R. Mitchell on three months' privilege leave. Mr. Mitchell sailed in the P. and O. steamer Chusan.

MR. DALY, late Inspector-General of Police in Upper Burma, reverts to his old appointment as Commandant of the Frontier Police, Cachar and Sylhet. Mr. Savi, who succeeded Mr. Daly in the latter appointment, will be required to vacate it.

MR. O'CALLAGHAN, C.I.E, and Staff, having completed the railway survey over the Khojak Pass, have broken up their large camp at Shella Bagh and returned to Quetta. Mr. Wood, with a small survey party, will remain at Chaman for the present. Rumour says that the Engineers will return in September to commence the actual work of construction. Captain DuPerier, R.E., and Lieutenant Harvey, R.E., are surveying for a new road with gradients 1 in 25, as the old military road is considered too steep, although it has been repaired and widened.

THE true story of the revolt at Herat is that Taimur Shah Khan, the Deputy-Governor, suborned a number of Cabuli troops, with the intention of suddenly rising and getting possession of the city, and then inducing the remainder of the garrison to join him. The Governor was, however, warned, and took measures accordingly, with the result that the rebels found themselves in a hopeless position when they tried to carry out their plan. They attempted to escape and Taimur Shah himself got as far as Kuhsan, on the way to Persia, before being captured. He was sent to Cabul, but no news of his arrival there has yet been received.

Eleven of the prisoners taken in the recent emeute at Palpa, Nepal, have been condemned to be hanged. Dil Dikrum will probably be sent into captivity, and the others will be banished to Nopalese Siberia.

THE Durani levies are said to have headed back the rebel Handari refugees from Herat, who are trying to join the Ghilzais on the borders of Tirin.

A PROCLAMATION by order of the Ameer has been nailed under a copy of the Koran at the Cabul gate, granting free pardon to all his enemies, and remission of the two years' taxes now due.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal have declared a dividend on the past half-year at the rate of ten per cent. per annum. The available profits amount to Rs. 15,54,000, of which ten lakhs go in payment of dividend, and Rs. 40,000 to the Pension Fund; two lakhs to the Reserve Fund; and Rs. 3,14,000 are brought forward to the current half-year.

AN important contract entered into by Sir Salar Jung, the ex-Minister of Hyderabad, for the local manufacture of arms, such as muskets, pistols, swords, &c., by which the Government was committed to a monthly expenditure of Rs. 5,000 for a term of years, has, states the Deccan Times, been put an end to, on the ground that the contract had never received his Highness's sanction.

THE basis of the agreement the Government of India and the Bombay-Burma Trading Corporation is that the Corporation shall continue to work the forests up to the termination of the leases granted by King Theebaw, paying, however, a royalty per log cut, instead of a lump sum yearly.

THE balance of the Bombay Jubilee Fund, amounting to Rs. 35,000, has been handed over to the New Victoria Institute.

MR. T. N. MUKHARJI, F.L.S., formerly officer in charge of the Exhibition Branch of the Revenue and Agricultural Department of the Government of India, and now Assistant Curator of the Bengal Museum, who was deputed to England for the Colonial and Indian Exhibition last year, has again been authorised to visit Europe for the Glasgow International Exhibition.

THE Bank of Madras will pay a dividend for the half-year ending the 30th July of Rs. 35, free of income-tax, being at the rate of 14 per cent. per annum. The total amount of the dividend is Rupees three lakhs and fifty thousand; one and a quarter lakhs have been placed to the credit of the Reserve Fund, bringing it up to eleven lakhs; and a balance of nearly seventy-nine thousand rupees is carried forward. The net profit on the half-year's operations amounted to Rs. 5,16,936-5-6.

THE Bengal and North-Western Railway Company has, it is understood, made a proposal to the Government of India to purchase and complete the Assam-Behar system of lines, including the Tirhoot lines, upon what is known as "South Mahratta terms." That is to say, the Company would raise the required capital by 3½ per cent. debentures, guaranteed by the Secretary of State, and receive a quarter share of the net earnings. As money is cheap at home just now, and the Assam-Behar system is the only Schedule IA, or Famine protection line, of any magnitude remaining to be completed, it would seem probable that the Company's offer will be accepted.

THE prospectus of the 20th Annual Exhibition of the Simla Fine Arts Society, which is to be opened at Simla during September, has just been issued, and offers many attractions to fine-art students. It states that the Exhibition will be open to fine-art work of all kinds, while it gives a list of the prizes to be awarded. Amongst the prize-givers are H.E. the Viceroy, his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, the Commander-in-Chief, the Hon. Sir Theodore C. Hope, the Hon. J. B. Peile, Colonel H. C. Tanner, Sirdar Pertab Singh, and Mr. Guilford L. Molesworth. Mr. C. F. Tufnell is the honorary secretary of the movement.

HIS Highness the Maharajah Ashiraja Maharana Shri Wakhatsingji of Lunawara, in Rewakantha, has presented a sum of Rs. 2,000 to the funds of the Imperial Institute.

IN a letter, dated Buckingham Palace, 13th June, Her Majesty has been pleased to convey, through General Sir Henry Ponsonby, her thanks to Mr. P. B. Joshi, the local Maratha poet, for the poem he composed in honour of the celebration of the Jubilee of Her Majesty's reign. The poem is entitled "Victoria Mahotsada." It was highly spoken of by the Government Reporter on the Native Press and Publications.

THE installation of the lessees in possession of the Shavagunga Zemindari, in Madras, was celebrated with great rejoicings, which are considered to augur well for future relations between Europeans and Natives.

FRIENDLY relations have been established with the Shan tribes, east of the Ruby Mines district, and the Bhamo-Chinese traders display increasing confidence in the stability of our rule there.

DURING the past year twenty-six new companies and three societies have been registered in Bombay.

OBITUARY.—Brigadier-General T. H. Way, commanding the Bellary district; Mr. E. Austin Thompson, civil surgeon, Nursingpore; Rev. F. Abel, at Fyzabad.

THE Devastation and Ajax have been docked at Portsmouth, and orders have been received from the Admiralty directing both vessels to be prepared for sea with the utmost speed, as they would be expected to rejoin the Evolutionary Squadron in the course of the next day or two. Accordingly a large number of men are employed on the injured vessels, working early and late. The damage to the Devastation is scarcely so serious as the preliminary examination seemed to indicate. Under her bilge on the port side, just abreast of the after turret, there is an indentation in the plate of about two feet by about one foot. In the centre there is a crack about a foot long and only a few inches wide. The worst damage has been done to the propeller, which is twisted on one side, the shaft being also bent. The Ajax has her armour-plates separated on the starboard bow above the water-line, the rent being a very long one. Captain Luxmoore, C.B., has been superseded by Captain Vander Meulen in the command of the Devastation, and it is thought that his summary treatment by the Lords of the Admiralty will render a Court-martial unnecessary, all culpability in the matter of the collision being met by the dismissal of the captain.

NOTES.

THE Times of yesterday publishes a lengthy telegram, purporting to give news in detail from Afghanistan concerning the Ameer's doings, which are declared to be of a very high-handed nature. This news is dated Calcutta, July 31. A Reuter's telegram from Allahabad, August 1, states that, owing to the disturbances in Afghanistan the Candahar road is no longer safe, and that greater difficulty is therefore experienced in obtaining news regarding the state of affairs in the Ameer's dominions than heretofore We imagine this to be the more correct information, and we have before now expressed surprise at the persistent way in which the Times allows its Calcutta correspondent to wire all manner of "shaves" regarding matters beyond the North-West Frontier, which are well-known in India to be but the idle gup of the Peshawar or Simla Native bazaars.

BOGUS news from Afghanistan may do little harm here where public opinion is more concerned about a policeman and a milliner case than about the Ameer of Afghanistan and all relating to him. But read on the Continent, where it is held to be the one representative of English power and public opinion, the Times does no good to British prestige by allowing telegrams from India to appear continually representing our Government there to be in a constant state of anxiety and alarm about disturbances in Afghanistan and Russian intrigue. When Mr. Bob Acres on the approach of his rival said to Sir Lucius O'Trigger, "We won't run, Sir Lucius, will we?" he was not supposed to be expressing much confidence in himself, or displaying the proverbial coolness of English courage. Yet this is the attitude which some of the French, German, and Russian papers ascribe to the British Government in India, on the strength of the false and sensational news which finds its way into the Times.

BUT sensational telegrams are also sent from London to the Indian Press. The Bombay papers to hand by the present mail are well supplied with this quality of news regarding the sudden departure of Holkar from England. It is reported that the Maharajah "strongly resents the manner in which he has been treated in connection with the Jubilee celebration, and indignant at such treatment declined to attend the laying of the foundation-stone of the Imperial Institute." The special correspondent who sends the telegram accuses the authorities here of having given a false explanation of his Highness's absence, as the correspondent hears, "on good authority," that his real reason is "his dissatisfaction with the manner in which he has been treated by the officials, who have not paid him that amount of deference which he considers to be his due as one of the leading Indian potentates." This is hard upon Sir Lepel Griffin and Mr. Fitzgerald, the Political A.D.C. at the India Office; but more remains behind.

THIS correspondent further wires: "I also hear that the other Indian Princes consider that they have been slighted throughout the Jubilee. 'An Indian Prince,' they declare, 'is not a British Feudatory, and the English do not know how to win our hearts.'" It might be interesting to know who made this declaration, but it has had its effect, of course, in India; for both English and Native editors there accepting the statement as "excellent copy," at all events, have been making copious and extraordinary comments thereon.

THE Bombay Gazette considers that the India Office was wanting in tact from the first reception of the Indian Princes, and fails to find an explanation of the "fact" that "each and all of these notable personages was ignored on his arrival in London, and that those of them who had made no arrangements of their own were dependent upon the first hansom within hail at Charing-cross to take them to the first hotel that the light of nature or the judgment of the cabman might reveal to them."

THE Indian Daily News of Calcutta follows suit. "We are inclined to ask," it says, "what Sir Lepel Griffin, the

'able administrator' in charge, has been about that there should be any ground for a complaint of official neglect? He must have known the conditions on which Holkar consented to go to England, and he should have been able to arrange matters, &c." And this wise and loyal English writer concludes that "the Indian princes have probably seen that they had not been invited for their good or the good of the country. If this is the impression created the Jubilee will probably prove to have been one of those political blunders which are said to be worse than crimes."

THE Madras Times, in the course of a long article, says:—"We do not wonder that 'the officials' have broken down; we should have wondered had they gone through the prolonged pageant without contretemps. The Englishman is, perhaps, at his very worst when he attempts the rôle of courtier; and of all Englishmen, the body of effete nobodies who succeed each other in the dreary duties of the Court officials are, perhaps, the least possessed of natural or acquired courtesy."

THESE are extracts taken from English journals of the three Presidencies. After such light and leading the Native Press would naturally follow in the same line, and several have done so. But there are exceptions. One journal, representing Native opinion, says:—"No doubt there is much explosive matter in the very difference of the ideas of the East and the West about Court etiquette, and there is likewise danger in the different estimate which might be taken in England of the position of Native Princes than that arrogated to them by themselves. Very probably a Native Prince feels that he is an independent monarch, although he is not nearly such, while people in England cannot be blamed if they consider him to be not greater than a very wealthy and powerful noble. We do not for a moment entertain the idea that any offence was meant."

THIS is sensible enough, but another Native journal says about Holkar himself:—"He is difficult to please, and it is quite likely that the simple people of Europe may have worked a change for the worse in his already overflowing pride. If the Maharajah expected to see himself in a higher place than that occupied by the kings and princes of Europe in the Queen's Imperial Durbar, he must have considerably overrated his position. The Native princes are greatly inferior to their European colleagues in education, morality, etiquette, wealth, and power. That the Native chiefs should learn to understand this is one of the many advantages that they are expected to derive from their visit to Europe."

THIS is not very far from the truth. But might not all misrepresentation have been avoided by a full and frank official explanation in England the moment rumour commenced to wag its scandal tongue? Up to the present no such explanation has been given, and so the worst is being said not only here, but in India.

AMONG the Indian Princes travelling at this time under Messrs. Cook and Sons' arrangements are the Gaekwar of Baroda, who is spending a short time in Switzerland for the benefit of his health; the Maharaja Holkar, who has left Europe for India; the Rao of Cutch, who is making a tour through England and Scotland; the Thakore of Limri, who is on the point of starting for the United States; and Sir Salar Jung, who has just arrived in London from Constantinople.

THE Queen has approved the appointment of Sir Cecil Clementi Smith, K.C.M.G., to be Governor of the Straits Settlement, in succession to Sir Frederick A. Weld, G.C.M.G., whose extended term of office will expire in October next.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JULY 31.

A meeting of the Legislative Council was held at Simla on Wednesday. The Viceroy, speaking on the Burma Military Police Bill, said he desired, on behalf of himself and his colleagues, formally to express his great satisfaction with the manner in which the Indian military police in Burma had discharged their duties—as arduous, dangerous, and prejudicial to health as those of the regular army. They had on several occasions distinguished themselves in a remarkable manner, and individual Native officers had shown exceptional bravery and enterprise. The force had discharged its duties under very peculiar conditions, and he thought it had been worked up to a high state of military discipline.

The news of the settlement of the Afghan boundary question was received in India without much excitement, and has not attracted any great amount of attention from the public or the Press. The Times of India remarks that, while the arrangement removes for the time being a disquieting feature in Central Asian politics, it remains to be seen how it will be received by the Ameer. It adds that if Herat is still to be considered the "gate of India" we cannot claim to have the best of the bargain. The Lahore Civil and Military Gazette says that the first natural feeling must be one of relief at the eliminating of a cause of friction with Russia, the second feeling one of doubt as to the permanence of the arrangement, and the third feeling one of suspicion that England has not come out with flying colours. The Pioneer thinks the news cannot fail to be received with satisfaction. It is true that the Russian frontier is now a day's march nearer Herat. That, however, matters little, as in the opinion of this journal the danger to India is more likely to come on the Cabul side; and it is therefore important to have the Oxus question settled, if only for a time.

The Supreme Government has at last taken steps to check the ever-increasing tendency of the local Governments and Departments to submit more and more bulky reports and statistics on all kinds of subjects. A resolution published in the official Gazette states that the Governor General in Council is disposed to regard annual reports as a useful means of testing departmental efficiency and correcting administrative mistakes. He thinks, therefore, that such reports must be maintained in certain cases. But he expresses an earnest hope that the local administrations will insist on a curtailment of the reports to the utmost extent that is consistent with a proper examination of the facts and figures presented in them. A reduction of the size of the reports on gaols, police, education, and sanitation is especially necessary, as they have become far too discursive. A compression of reviews is not less called for. Such reviews should contain only what is necessary to communicate the judgment of the reviewing authority regarding the salient features of the report reviewed. The Government, therefore, trusts that a vigorous discretion will be exercised, not only in reducing the bulk of the reports and returns which are retained, but also in abolishing those not really required.

Heavy floods are reported in the southern and eastern divisions of the Central Provinces. No lives have been lost, but much property has been injured. Several hundred feet of the embankment of the Nagpore-Khyragurh Railway have been swept away, but it is believed that the interruption of the traffic will be only temporary.

The prospects of the indigo crop throughout Lower Bengal have somewhat improved, but it is expected that the outturn will be short. There are similar expectations regarding Behar indigo, while in the North-Western Provinces the prospects are generally favourable.

The libel prosecution instituted by Rukhmabai's husband against the editor of the Bombay Gazette has been withdrawn, on the defendant delivering the original copy of Rukhmabai's letter, and giving a verbal expression of regret. He, however, declined to subscribe a written apology. The case against Rukhmabai and her uncle is proceeding.

Another shipmaster, Captain Shand, of the British ship Aladdin, has been convicted by the chief Presidency magistrate of Calcutta of the offence of navigating a ship on the high seas by night, without side lights. The sentence was the same as that passed on the master of the Brenda—a fine of Rs. 600, or, in default, three months' simple imprisonment.

Colonel R. D. Barrett, commanding the 19th Regimental District, Richmond, has been granted a distinguished service reward of £100 a-year. Colonel Barrett entered the army in 1846. He served in the Eastern Campaign of 1854 and part of 1855 with the 19th Regiment, including the affair of Bulganac, battle of Inkerman, and siege of Sebastopol (wounded, medal with three clasps, 5th Class of the Medjideh, and Turkish medal). He became lieutenant-colonel 1876, and colonel 1881.

THE PUNJAB UNIVERSITY.—THE CHARGES AGAINST THE REGISTRAR.

(Pioneer.)

At the meeting of the Senate of the Punjab University, held in the Senate Hall, Lahore, recently, the formal proposals of the Syndicate were received and considered with regard to the recent Law Examination of 1887. There were a large number of the Fellows present, the Vice-Chancellor, Mr. W. H. Rattigan, presiding. The main resolution before the Senate was that, in consequence of certain statements made by Ram Saran Dass, a mukhtiar, and Protab Singh, of Shahabad, in the district of Umballa, and with regard to the statement made by Mr. Larpent to the Vice-Chancellor in connection therewith, Mr. Larpent be suspended from his duties as Registrar.

Mr. Rattigan, in opening the discussion, said that the meeting was for the purpose of considering a question of grave importance, and it was not too much to say that the welfare of the Punjab University, in which all its members were interested, would largely depend on the nature and character of the resolutions passed at this meeting. Various reports, the Vice Chancellor said, had been in circulation, and in consequence of these, which have brought certain grave accusations against the Registrar of the University, a sub-committee was appointed to inquire into the alleged irregularities. Mr. Rattigan then observed :—

"When I remind you that it included the names of Mr. B. H. Baden-Powell, Mr. Coldstream, Mr. Pourno Chunder Chatterjee and Mr. Gulam Hassain, of Umritsur, you will agree with me that no stronger committee could have been appointed. The statements of the witnesses, Ram Saran Dass and Protab Singh, were not taken upon oath; but they were recorded by gentlemen who were used to taking the evidence of Native witnesses."

The Vice-Chancellor then read the statements of Ram Saran Dass and Protab Singh before the sub-committee. These statements dealt with a certain number of charges against Mr. Larpent. Mr. Rattigan, continuing his observations, said :—

"Mr. Larpent has heard these charges in full for the first time, and it is manifestly unfair to publish the statements made by witnesses before the sub-committee when Mr. Larpent was not represented, and which at that time did not form a judicial inquiry."

Mr. Larpent's explanation to a letter forwarded by the Vice-Chancellor was then read, after which Mr. Larpent was called upon to reply to the charges brought against him. He said he would confine himself to a general statement that, as soon as these allegations became known to the public, he would take steps to vindicate his character. He requested that he should be supplied with a copy of the statements submitted to the Senate by the sub-committee, so as to enable him to take proceedings before the proper tribunal against the persons who had tendered evidence.

The Vice-Chancellor negatived this request on the ground that the statements of these witnesses were primâ facie and privileged. Mr. Larpent represented that if the materials were denied him in order to refute the statements, it was doing him an injustice.

Further discussion took place, in which Mr. Larpent reiterated his demand to be supplied with the statements of the Native witnesses, in order that he might take legal action thereupon.

The Vice-Chancellor then put the following resolution to the meeting :—"That in consequence of certain statements made by Ram Saran Dass and Protab Singh, of the Umballa district, and having regard to the statement made by Mr. Larpent to the Vice-Chancellor in connection therewith, and after hearing such furher explanation as Mr. Larpent had to offer orally, it is deemed advisable to suspend Mr. Larpent from his duties." The Vice-Chancellor, however, stated that the papers could not be surrendered for such a purpose as Mr. Larpent desired and Mr. Baden-Powell expressed himself as decidedly of the same opinion.

Mr. Larpent then stated that, as his hands were tied by this decision, he had no option but to request a further inquiry, which should be a full, fair, and honest inquiry, and in which he should be represented as Registrar of the University, pending the result of any further inquiries which the Senate may direct.

The three Native members of the Senate appeared to be in favour of an amendment to the effect that Mr. Larpent's resignation of the Registrarship should be accepted; but this amendment fell through, and the original resolution being put, it was carried with but one dissentient.

With regard to the second proposal placed by the Syndicate before the Senate, namely, that some arrangement should be made for carrying on the duties of Registrar during the period of Mr. Larpent's suspension, the Senate came to the agreement that they should appoint a Registrar, who should be as near a full-time Registrar as was possible, and that he should also be appointed Principal of the Oriental College. The Vice-Chancellor said that he had been engaged for some time in trying to obtain a duly qualified European Orientalist for the post, and had, he thought, obtained such a person; but inquiries were being made which would entail some little delay. In the meantime, Mr. W. Bell would continue to officiate as Registrar.

On the proposition of Mr. Baden-Powell, seconded by Mr. T. Gordon-Walker, it was resolved that the Report of the Law Sub-Committee be now sent into the Syndicate, who should consider it and be prepared either to submit the matter through the Vice-Chancellor to the Government, with a view to ascertain what action, if any, the Government may think it necessary to take; or if the Government take no action, for the Syndicate to nominate, if it so desires, a further committee for their own purposes, at which, of course, Mr. Larpent and his counsel would be present. This motion was carried accordingly, and the proceedings then terminated.

A meeting of the Syndicate was subsequently held.

(Indian Spectator.)

Cramming is certainly no new art in India. The ancient Rishis and Pundits of India were, we are afraid, as first-rate crammers as our competition-wallahs, if not greater. But, then, their cramming was a sacred duty, and it was always a stepping stone to higher things. Our cramming is now a most profitable business and leads to anything but holiness. A masterly crammer is nowadays entitled to become a ruler of men—he may not be a formed man, he may not be a truly educated man—but nevertheless he has every right to be put at once in charge of a division as large as Wales, if not much larger. The practice of Government in awarding the highest prizes of office to the best crammers has of course influenced the whole of our educational system, and the vice has now become so common and so familiar that but very few persons can discern its innate ugliness. We have been told of a professor in the Elphinstone College who used to insist upon his students repeating word by word the language used by Todhunter in his works on Mathematics. He did not care to explain the use of what was learnt—or to create any interest in such dry studies as the Binomial Theorem on the Infinitesimal Calculus, or the sines, tangents and secants, and the result was that a friend, whom we have followed in after life, on taking his degree was as ignorant as ever of these subjects. His case is not a solitary, but a typical one. He was no crammer by nature, but his Professor of Mathematics made him one, and to this professor he has never considered himself indebted for anything more than this initiation into the mysteries of cramming. Our University examinations set the law to our school examinations—just as, we are afraid, the Civil Service examination in a great measure sets the law to our University examinations. The infection has thus tainted the very life-blood of all of our educating agencies, and tainted it to such an extent as to become a part and parcel of them, to grow with their growth, and strengthen with their strength. Unfortunately or fortunately, in India the schools and colleges are not exclusively reserved for "gentlefolks and pure aristocrat bodies"—and cramming is thus a vice or a virtue common to high and low alike. Is there no way of introducing a more healthy regimen in our educational institutions? The highest physical blessing, perhaps, is that of "good digestion waiting on appetite, and health on both." The highest mental blessing ought to be of a piece with this. Cram your mouth and your stomach full of a variety of viands and victuals, and you wake next morning with a colic or a headache. Can the result of cramming your mind with numerous odds-and-ends of learning be other than windiness or cerebral disturbance? We think it is high time to eschew "the knowledge that puffeth" from our school and college curricula; but a revision of our standards alone will not do much good. The best remedy that suggests itself to us is a teaching University on the model of the German Universities. This experiment is worth trying, and we would commend it to the patronage of our millionaires.

OLD INDIAN ITEMS.

(Deccan Times)

The way in which an Indian day used to be spent a hundred years ago was very different to that in which it is occupied in the present times. The distribution of time in the three Presidencies, separated as they were by long travelling distances, was not altogether alike; but all have been getting into later and later hours, thus lengthening the day for the purposes of business. The junior "writers" alone seem to have had hard and regular work to perform. They were fully engaged from nine till twelve, and again from two till five. In 1765 our forefathers are what has been called by a Mrs. Fay—a facetious epistle writer of the times—"day-light dinners." In every class of English society all over the country the hour was one o'clock. It was customary to sit a long while at the table and drink a good deal of wine. Then came the Siesta. The custom of reposing, if not sleeping, after dinner was so general in Calcutta that the streets were from four to five in the afternoon as empty of Europeans as if it were midnight. Next followed the evening airings, and then tea was served. After tea cards or music filled up the space till ten o'clock, when supper was announced. Short formal visits used to be paid in the evening. If a gentleman calling was asked to put down his hat it was considered as an invitation to dinner. Tiffins was unknown before the early part of the present century. After their introduction the dinner hour was thrown back and supper abandoned. At twelve o'clock they take, says Lord Valentia, a hot meal which is called "tiffing." Early breakfasts were then in vogue. Sir James MacIntosh thus describes his morning meal:—"We return from our ride at eight o'clock, when, to show the enervating effects of the climate, I eat only two eggs and a large plate of fish and rice called Kedgeree, not to mention two cups of coffee and three of tea." These appear to have generally formed the Oriental déjeuner. This is how the above said Mrs. Fay delineates the dinner:—"We were frequently told in England, you know, that the heat of Bengal destroyed the appetite. I must own that I never yet saw any proof of that; on the contrary, I cannot help thinking that I never saw an equal quantity of victuals consumed. We dine, too, at two o'clock, in the very heat of the day. At this moment Mr. F—— is looking out with hawk's eyes for his dinner. I give you our bill of fare and the general price of things. A soup, a roast fowl, curry and rice, a mutton pie, a fore quarter of lamp, a rice pudding, tarts, very good cheese, fresh churned butter, fine bread, excellent Madeira (that is expensive, but eatables are very cheap):—A whole sheep costs but two rupees, a lamb one rupee, six good fowls or ducks, ditto; twelve pigeons, ditto; twelve pounds of bread, ditto; two pounds of butter, ditto; a joint of veal, ditto.

OUR ARMY RESERVE IN INDIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

In Mr. Yates's Gold Medal essay, published in the last number of the Proceedings of the United Service Institution of India, is discussed the question of employment of European and Native Army Re ervists in a Railway Corps. It has become abundantly clear that a very weak point of our Reserve system is the difficulty experienced by the soldiers, whom we yearly throw back into civil life, in finding employment there. It was not sufficiently considered how much our Reserve system differs from that of Continental nations. In Germany, for example, where the whole able-bodied population is liable for service, the employer of labour has no choice. All whom he employs are like himself under the liability of being called away to the colours. But the Reservist in England is naturally at a disadvantage, for any one would prefer to employ a man of whose service he is certain, rather than one who may be called away to his regiment at any moment. Evidently it cannot tend to the popularity of the army in England that the frequent spectacle should be presented of Reservists unable to find work because they are such. Evidently, therefore, every opening which can be found for employing these men in the public service should be taken advantage of, and every attempt made to induce public bodies connected with the Government, such as (in India) the Bank of Bengal and the railway companies, to employ them. This should be done both in view of the advantage of having trained and disciplined men for the performance of duties in which these qualities of the soldier are particularly desirable; and also for the sake of lessening the difficulties of Reservists in civil life, and the unpopularity occurring to the army from the spectacle of those difficulties.

The same applies to the Native Reserve in India, for both the reasons stated. Certainly, in this country there is not likely to be the special difficulty which Reservists experience in England. The Native Reservist either owns land, or can obtain it as tenant. This is the only form of employment which exists for the class to which he belongs, and this form of employment is just as available to him after he leaves the ranks as before he enters them. The pressure of population on the soil is, in many parts of the country, rendering this mode of livelihood yearly more difficult to follow, but such difficulty is general, and can in no way affect the retired soldier more than another. But if we have not to contend against the unpopularity of the army on this score, it is still very necessary to popularise service under our colours. The popularity of that service has been steadily falling off as the improvement of the rate of pay has failed to keep pace with the improvement of means of livelihood in other pursuits, and as the demands upon the labour of the soldier have increased year by year in the gradual perfecting of our military machine. To this end it is of the utmost importance that service in the ranks should be found a ready passport to the service of Government in the Civil Departments. Hitherto this has not been the case; nor indeed until the Government insists, and stringent orders are issued on the subject, is there much hope that the Police, the Revenue, the Forest and Canal establishments, the orderlies of the Government offices, and the employés of the Government Railways will be recruited from among the soldiers who pass out of the ranks.

This should be done as a matter of course. The excuse, hitherto, for not employing retired soldiers has been that they were not serviceable; that they had seen their best days, and had acquired ways not suitable for Police, peon or orderly duties. Now, however, it should be laid down that none others than Native Reservists should be employed in any Civil Department unless it were certified that none such were available. To each district should be assigned certain regiments from which to obtain its employés. The Government officers of the various departments in that district should be ordered to apply for men they required to the Commanding Officers of those regiments; stating pay, duties, and qualifications required. It will be found that most Reservists will thankfully accept employment in their own part of the country on the smaller pay given to constables, revenue peons, and such like, eked out with what they will themselves receive as reservists. The fact of their being Reservists will be sufficient guarantee of their efficiency for such duties.

The proposals of Mr. Yates, regarded only in the view of affording employment to European and Native Reservists, are most useful, apart from their importance in a directly military point of view. In that point of view they deserve careful consideration. Without a Railway corps, how is it proposed to work the railway between our Sind frontier and Kandahar? Throughout this long distance the line will traverse country occupied by tribes always troublesome, and whom the slightest war excitement might render very actively mischievous; and any reverse, or rumour of a reverse, turn into formidable enemies. Is it for a moment to be supposed that under these circumstances the line can be worked by the ordinary machinery of a railway—by Babus who regarded war as a "dangerous department," and by Native drivers, guards, signallers and so forth, such as are seen on the Indian lines of railway and telegraph? The idea is evidently absurd, and unless such a corps is organised as Mr. Yates proposes, the only course will be to improvise, on the outbreak of war, special arrangements for the working and protection of the Kandahar Railway and telegraph lines.

If the organisation of such a corps as is proposed by Mr. Yates entailed any very great additional expense, without corresponding usefulness in time of peace, it might be very difficult to get over the objections of the Financial Department. Such objections have proved fatal to an equally necessary measure—the organisation of an efficient transport service. It was not necessary that this should be the case. We imagine that it would be perfectly possible to maintain a large quantity of Government transport without great additional expense, by the simple expedient of hiring out the mules and bullocks for agricultural and traffic purposes. Plough bullocks are yearly growing dearer and more scarce, and agriculturists would readily hire the Government bullocks to draw their ploughs and carts. There is a great carrying traffic on mules and ponies, for which we think the Government pack animals could easily be let out on sufficiently remunerative terms. In either case it should be within the capacity of the most departmental mind to ex-cogitate a system whereby the hirers should be responsible for the health and condition of the animals hired, and whereby sufficient supervision of this could be maintained. We are not without hopes that, under some such arrangement, Government will presently see its way to maintaining a sufficient number of transport animals at call, without prohibitive expense, and thus get rid of the financial objection to a measure of vital military importance.

But, as before said, to the proposal for a railway corps no such objection need apply. Such a corps would simply work the existing North-Western Railway during time of peace, at a cost little in excess of an ordinary railway establishment. When war required their services further west, they would be replaced within our Indian territories by an ordinary railway establishment drawn from the eastern railways, and would take up the working of the purely military line. For the details of the scheme we refer the reader to Mr. Yates's prize essay. They are worked out most thoroughly, are practical and reasonable, and they indicate a most satisfactory method of employing some of our reserve soldiers, European and Native. In this view, and in that of the efficient working of our railway line of communication in the approaching war, we trust that these proposals may meet with early acceptance.

AFGHAN AFFAIRS.

(Pioneer.)

The continued absence of any news of the least significance from the Ghilzai country cannot but draw attention to the singular lethargy which the Amir's generals are showing in the face of the rebellion. It is a full month since Iskander Khan and Gholam Hyder effected their junction in the Maruf District, when with their superior numbers and infinitely superior armament they might have been expected to grapple with the insurgents forthwith. The meaning of their inaction is not clear, but it may be presumed that they would not be risking the displeasure of the Amir without good reason. The only thing certain, however, is that they have done nothing. Reports have come in that Gholam Hyder has moved north again to clear the Kabul Kandahar road, where the insurgents were lately reported to have been marauding; but nothing definite seems to be known of his actions. On the other hand, the tribal cause does not seem to be making any progress. Their great obstacle to success is the enmity which exists between the Nasiris and the Suleiman Khels, and prevents these powerful sections from taking common action. The son of Mushki Alam has been endeavouring for some time to induce them to lay aside their differences, but hitherto without effect. If they should make common cause with the revolt, things would no doubt become serious for the Amir's officers, who, as it is, are only equal to holding their own. On the other hand, we cannot argue from the Ghilzais not taking the offensive that they are cowed. Their tactics are probably to wear out the Amir's troops, or to entice them on to the hills so as to catch them at a disadvantage. The Amir's stern policy of destroying the villages and crops of the rebels wherever he could get at them now recoils upon his own head, as the tribesmen have no longer any object for giving in, and have no homes to return to. The destruction done has been very considerable. In particular all the famous almond orchards of the Hotaks south of Khelat-i-Ghilzai, which formed the main source of wealth in that district, have been ruthlessly cut down—a loss that the country cannot recover from for many years.

MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH.

(Madras Mail.)

Alarming news for the Indian Government has been received from Moscow. Forty thousand Sikhs—probably men in buckram—are only waiting for the arrival of the son of the one-eyed Lion of the Punjab to rise in rebellion and march upon Delhi. They expect, it is true, to be joined by a Russian army, which only three weeks ago was not in existence. Dhuleep Singh has also, it appears, talked to M. Katkoff of his influence in Afghanistan, and has promised to give the Ameer and his English allies very serious trouble as soon as it shall please the Czar to give the signal for the grand assault. In the meantime his Highness is comfortably lodged at the Hotel Dussaux, in company with his attendant, or aide-de-camp, Arouah Singh, who, with the exception of a big turban, is attired in the garb of a cockney excursionist. No Englishman is admitted to his august presence. He is surrounded by M. Katkoff's people, and never stirs abroad unattended. Occasionally he dines with M. Katkoff in grand style arrayed as an Indian prince. He pretends that the India Office, while professing to allow him a pension of £40,000 a year, gave him only £25,000. Of course he says nothing about the payment of his debts, nor does he trouble himself to explain that he outran the constable by striving to surpass the expenditure of English noblemen and old county families with twice his income. It is not, however, a matter of the slightest importance to the British Government whether he has sense enough to return to Norfolk and eat his dumplings in peace and affluence, or whether he elect to lead an ignoble existence as a hanger-on of the Panslavonian agitator, until his intrinsic worthlessness is discovered and he himself is dismissed with contempt.

What is really puzzling is the fact that M. Katkoff should be so egregiously imposed upon by such a very empty-headed adventurer. A Russian politician in his position might surely be expected to know something of Dhuleep Singh's antecedents. We may rest assured that they are familiar to the Foreign Office at St. Petersburg, though it could not be expected that M. de Giers would take much pains to warn his rival against being led astray by the transparent untruthfulness of his Indian client. It is said, however, that M. Katkoff has persuaded the Czar that Dhuleep Singh may yet prove a trump card that shall sensibly affect the winning of the odd trick. Such may very likely be the case, as Alexander III. is described as one of those who put faith in unexpected occurrences and in unforeseen combinations. He gives his instructions to M. de Giers, but he betakes himself for counsel to M. Katkoff. He is, in short, a pendulum vibrating between his honest aspirations after peace and his irresistible infatuation for Panslavonian designs and unprincipled longing for fresh territorial acquisitions. On the other hand, it is inconceivable that his Imperial Majesty should be so ignorant of the state of affairs in British India as to attach any credence to the absurd exaggerations of a vindictive, unscrupulous expensioner, intent on vilifying his benefactors, and quite ready to involve two great nations in war in the hope of filching a few rupees for himself. A man of ordinary common sense, however exalted his condition, before he accorded his confidence to an apostate and a traitor would naturally make some inquiries as to the man's motives and previous mode of life. The more so when the wandering mendicant professed to have a nation of warriors at his back, and to be able to set in motion another nation still more fierce and intractable. As autocrats are not supposed to be bookmen, the Czar may be excused for not being aware that the Sikhs and Afghans—or Pathans—were never on friendly terms with one another, and that the latter would be far better pleased to see oil the Punjabis than to place a son of Runjet Singh on the long vacant throne of Lahore. Be that as it may, Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, alias Patrick Casey, has, for some time past, been living in clover at an excellent hotel without being called upon to pay the bill—though, perchance, it may be secretly accumulating to his ultimate disadvantage. The thousand pounds of which he is reported to have been robbed at Berlin—if, indeed, that story be true—are believed to have represented the last relics of his fortune which he ha squandered seemingly without bestowing a thought upon the Maharani and his children, now dependent on the generosity of the India Office.

BENGAL.

MR. WYNNE, Engineer-in Chief of the Bengal and Nagpur Railway, has, says a Calcutta paper, decided to make Asansole, rather than Sitarampore, the junction of that line with the East Indian Railway.

MR. F. B. WALKER, Engineer-in-Chief of the Assam-Bengal State Railway, will carry on the management of the Tirhoot State Railway, during the temporary absence of Mr. Bell, in addition to his own duty.

DR. J. ANDERSON, Superintendent of the Indian Museum, Calcutta, who has been on furlough for some months now, has resigned his appointment, and will, it is said, be succeeded by Mr. J. Wood-Mason, Deputy-Superintendent. For Mr. Wood-Mason's successor the trustees of the Museum have, it is believed, secured in England the services of Mr. W. Sclater, a gentleman reported to be specially qualified for the post, and who, if his appointment receives the approval of the India Office, may be expected out in this country at the end of the year.

IN the last quarter of 1886, 579 books, pamphlets, and periodicals were received into the Bengal Library, of which 399 were classed as non-educational and 180 as educational. It is satisfactory to see among the books several giving instructions in the erection of building houses, culverts, and thatched huts; in cooking for sick persons, according to the European and Native systems; a cooking-book for Native ladies; several works on agriculture and horticulture; and one giving instructions for the preparation of ink, fireworks, and other articles.

MADRAS.

THE Government of India have accepted the view expressed by the Madras Government that it is not expedient to amalgamate the duties appertaining to the office of the Inspector-General of Registration with those of any other appointment, but that the salary attached to the post should be reduced from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 1,250 on the occurrence of a vacancy.

BY a resolution of the Government of India passed in 1884 it was decided that the system of compulsory examination of assistant surgeons at septennial periods, which had been allowed to fall into abeyance, should again be brought into operation. In August last year Surgeon-General Bidie, however, addressed the Madras Government, proposing that assistant surgeons possessing European or Indian degrees not lower than M.B. and C.M. should be exempted from any examination in virtue of the qualifications they had already obtained, and the proposal thus made was submitted to the Government of India with the remark that the Madras Government was in favour of its adoption. After consulting several authorities on the subject the Government of India have replied that, as the majority of those consulted are in favour of the retention of the existing orders, and as the arguments of the few who advocate a change do not appear to be based upon any practical inconvenience found to exist in the present system, while, on the other hand, there are assurances that the orders in question work to the advantage of the public service, they have decided that, for the present, the existing practice in regard to the examination of assistant surgeons at septennial periods shall be adhered to.

RUMOUR has it that, at an early meeting of the Senate of the Madras University, a scheme will be brought forward in connection with a degree to be entitled "Doctor of Commerce." This degree is to be conferred on students in the commercial classes of the various colleges in Madras, who passed the higher test in commercial examination. For the encouragement of other students it may be mentioned that some students who have passed the lower test have succeeded in obtaining employment in some of the Houses of Agency on a salary of about Rs. 15 per mensem; and one of the said houses, it is said, is disposed to close its doors against all applicants for employment except those who have had a commercial training.

MAJOR-GENERAL HUGH ROWLANDS, V.C., C.B., Commanding the Bangalore Division, took advantage of the Brigade parade at Bangalore on Thursday (30th June) to decorate Sergeant-Major A. M. Kierton (Hampshire Regiment) with the silver medal which had been awarded that warrant officer by Her Majesty for "long service and good conduct." In doing so the General said that a duty like this was one of the most pleasant any officer could be called upon to perform, more especially was it so to him on the present occasion, inasmuch as it was a well-merited reward. He had presented some hundreds of "good conduct medals" in his time, but never to so worthy a recipient. Before coming to parade he had looked over Sergeant-Major Kierton's defaulter sheets and found that after a service of twenty-two years not a single entry was therein recorded.

BOMBAY.

CAPTAIN R. BAILLIE has been appointed to act as District Registrar of Deesa.

MISS C. ELLABY, M.D., has been appointed substantive pro tem First Physician of the Cama Hospital.

MR. A. CUMINE, C.S., has been appointed Second Assistant Collector, vice Mr. W. H. Horsley, C.S., promoted.

COLONEL W. P. LA TOUCHE will act as Cantonment Magistrate of Poona during the absence of Colonel C. D.'U. La Touche.

THE charge of the public works duties in the Baroda cantonment has been transferred from the Executive Engineer, Ahmedabad, to the Executive Engineer of Kaira and Panch Mahals.

NEW rules have been formulated by Government for regulating the manufacture, possession, and sale of explosives. These rules for the present will apply to the cities of Bombay and Kurrachee.

MR. W. SUMMERS recently shot a tigress at Khandalla. The animal measured seven feet in length, and was only about eight feet away from the shikari, when it was shot with a No. 6 shot from a No. 12 breech-loaded.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the purchase of a new first-class dioptric light from England for the lighthouse at Manora, Kurrachee, on the understanding that the value of the old light is credited to the defences.

ACCORDING to the report of the external land trade for Sind for 1886-87, the imports by rail and road have fallen off from last year's figures by a lakh and a half, and the exports by fourteen lakhs.

THE Sind Gazette states that every item of supply, down to fuel and forage, for 100,000 men can now be placed by rail within eighty miles of Kandahar, and that an order for the despatch of 20,000 tons of coal to Quetta is now in course of being carried out, and great quantities of stores are being sent up to depôts on the Kandahar line.

THE Pioneer says :—Rukhmibai has written a long letter to a Bombay paper in refutation of the charges made in the letter published some months ago by her would-be husband. She makes it abundantly clear that Dadaji is not over-scrupulous regarding the accuracy of his assertions ; but, as we have before hinted, the public is little concerned with the question of Dadaji's dissipation or Rukhmibai's ability to write English. If her appeal for help is to bear fruit at all, it will do so because it is based on the broad principle that infant unions are absurd and intolerable.

WITH effect from the date on which the lien of Mr. G. Druitt on his appointment of Secoud Grade Judge and Sessions Judge of Kanara ceased, Mr. C. G. W. Macpherson, C.I.E., is to be Second Grade Judge and Sessions Judge of Kanara, retaining, during his absence on privilege leave, a lien on his acting appointment of Judge and Sessions Judge of Satara. Mr. A. H. Unwin is to be Third Grade Judge and Sessions Judge of Shikarpur, continuing to act as Judge and Sessions Judge of Satara during the absence of Mr. C. G. W Macpherson, C.I.E. Mr. W. H. Horsley to be Joint Judge and Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad, continuing to act as Judge and Sessions Judge of Khandesh till further orders.

BURMA.

RESSAIDAR SHAIK MAHOMED ALI, of the 3rd Regiment, Hyderabad Contingent Cavalry, has again distinguished himself, telegraphs a Rangoon correspondent. He recently marched some fifty miles into the Hmaw Forest, and came upon a body of dacoits whom he attacked. He killed eight, and then the dacoits retired to their stockade. The Ressaidar dismounted his men and turned the stockade, by doubling round to the right of it, and rushed it, killing one man ; the remainder escaped in the dark into the jungle. The stockade and dacoit camp were burnt, a number of arms were captured, and many prisoners captured.

THE Mandalay paper protests against the removal of the Secretariat establishment of Upper Burma to Rangoon. It thinks that a more politic measure cannot be adopted, looked at from any point of view. Lower Burma, which has been under British rule for over thirty-five years, may with safety be left to the care of the Chief Secretary on the Chief Commissioner's staff. Upper Burma, on the other hand, has not progressed so far in the work of pacification that it can be administered apart from the Chief Commissioner's immediate care and personal supervision. Many administrative improvements require to be looked into—primarily a revenue and agricultural bureau, including those sources of continuous revenue to the Government which are derivable from the mineral wealth and oils of the country. Then there is the judicial administration of this province. How can the Government lose sight of an efficient judicial tribunal to superintend and revise the working of the subordinate courts which require much greater attention than those in Lower Burma? Then there is a very large body of state prisoners in the province, especially in the city of Mandalay, who are all looked after by the Secretariat, for which purpose they present themselves periodically. Taking all the facts and circumstances into consideration, therefore, it thinks that it will be a most imprudent measure to remove the Upper Burma Secretariat to Rangoon. It does not wish it to be inferred that Mandalay should become the headquarters of the civil administration ; what it means is, that for a time, at least, the presence of the Chief Commissioner in Mandalay is imperatively necessary, and periodical tours, such as Mr. Crosthwaite is now engaged in, will do the people and the country all the good, inasmuch as the Chief Commissioner's personal interest and presence now and again amongst them will reconcile the people to British rule more rapidly.

The Rangoon correspondent of the Times writes :—

Mr. Crosthwaite's visit to Bhamo has been satisfactory. He found the district quiet. Trade at Bhamo is prosperous and steadily increasing. Mr. Crosthwaite held a durbar at Bhamo on the 23rd inst. It was numerously attended by Burmans, Shans, Kachyens, Chinese, and natives of India. In the course of his address the Chief Commissioner said he was glad to find the country peaceful, and that the Burmans, Shans, Kachyens, and Chinese were able to meet together for the purpose of trade without fear of being plundered. Bhamo was the link in the trade between Western China and Europe. It was a place to which Chinamen came to make their fortunes, just as Englishmen visited Calcutta or Rangoon. Formerly even under a weak Government trade had flourished in Bhamo. Now that the British Government protected them traders could entertain a sure hope of amassing wealth, without fear of oppression from officials or robbery from others. The Chief Commissioner concluded by predicting a brilliant future for Bhamo ; and, addressing the Burmans, Chinese, Kachyens, and Shans who were present, he said that if they felt any doubt as to his words they had only to ask the many natives of all parts of India now in Bhamo whether the British Government did not give them perfect peace and security throughout India.

The latest news from Bhamo shows that the trade in jade and in india-rubber is likely to increase very much. The supplies of india-rubber are very large at present. The trade is now in the hands of the Chinese merchants, who work it through the wild Kachyen tribes occupying the hills whence the supply is drawn. The numbers of Shan-Chinese who are migrating into the Bhamo district are steadily increasing, though no inducement is held out to them.

NORTH WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

THE Government of the Punjab has suggested that the Lahore Central Museum should establish a sub-department of the Art section for the purchase of art-wares for sale to visitors, thus serving the double purpose of keeping up a better display of specimens, and the same benefiting both the purchasing public and the artizans. This is the practice adopted by the Lucknow Museum, and we are of opinion that if all local Museums followed it, a great deal of profit might be derived therefrom.

THE final report on the wheat crop in the Punjab for this season shows that the area under cultivation was 5,913,500 acres, or 15 per cent. less than last year, after making deductions for the area in which wheat was sown. The total yield is estimated at 27,238,305 cwts., which is 25 per cent. less than that of last year, but it is thought that this estimate is some three million cwts. too low. Although the returns of the crop are small, it is believed that the yield, where a fairly well-matured crop has been harvested, has been extremely good, especially with irrigated crops. The grain is plump, heavy, and of good quality, and harvesting, threshing, and winnowing were finished in the most favourable weather. According to the latest prices prevailing in the Calcutta and Kurrachee markets, taking the average prices at 17 seers per rupee, the whole crop is worth Rs. 8,97,26,182.

A LEOPARD AT SIMLA.—Season, a Simla paper, says :—"Some villagers brought information that they had got a leopard into a cave near one of the villages just below Annandale, and Lord Herbrand Russell and Dr. Finplay immediately went down to secure 'spots.' The beaters soon turned him out of the cave and a shot from Lord Herbrand Russell laid him low, and so has ended the career of a leopard which has been a terror to the neighbourhood of Annandale for the past three years."

A DESPERATE SIKH.—The Rawulpindi paper of July 2 says :—"News has arrived here of some desperate murders on the Kohat side, all committed by one man, a Sikh constable. He, Jhunda Singh by name, happened to be posted in the village of Tiri, in the Khatkut Ilaqua of the zillah of Kohat. His comrades happened to be all Mahomedans, who constantly annoyed him on religious grounds, and we hear that he had repeatedly applied for a transfer from their company. The annoyance most practised was defiling his eating or cooking place with bones, flesh, and other articles repugnant to him. One night he got up, apparently to bathe, and on taking up his lota found there were bones in it. He drew his sword and made an onslaught on the other men. With a few desperate cuts he killed the nearest three, and then ran through the village, where he cut down three more and one woman, the last being merely cut about the hand, as if she had simply tried to stop Jhunda Singh. In the darkness the Sikh escaped and reached a village called Masmi, where he hastily called on a Hindu to bring him water, as he was in pursuit of a man escaped from havalat. His disordered and blood-stained clothes and sword, however, alarmed the Hindu ; the alarm was raised, and he was seized by the people and is now awaiting trial."

THE Government of India has recommended to the Secretary of State that Major-General Sir A. Cunningham, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., R.E., late Director-General of the Archæological Survey of India, be granted a pension of £150 per annum in addition to the military pension he receives. General Cunningham was for fifteen years at the head of the Archæological Survey Department

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTAIN G. W. ROUGHTON has been transferred from the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps to the command of the Bombay Volunteer Artillery, with the rank of Major. The vacancy in the Volunteer Rifle Corps caused by the resignation of Lieutenant Stead has been filled by the promotion of Colour-Sergeant N. Devlin.

THE extension of leave granted to Colonel H. Moore, C.B., C.I.E., dated June 29, is for one year, or until promotion to the rank of Major-General.

LIEUTENANT RICHARDSON, 13th Madras Infantry, has been permitted to resign his probationary appointment to the Staff Corps, and directed to rejoin the 2nd Battation East Yorkshire Regiment, Colaba.

SURGEON-MAJOR BATTY, I.M.S., Bombay Establishment, has retired from the Service. Surgeon-Major Batty was serving in Burma when relieved of all duty.

COLONEL E. B. BURNABY, Commanding the 1st Battalion King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, has been directed to proceed to England, on completion of six years as a Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel.

COLONEL MAITLAND, Poona Horse, has been appointed as a temporary measure to the Quartermaster General's Department at Simla. Colonel Maitland is now on leave.

LIEUTENANT H. E. STANTON, R.A., has been appointed paid attaché in the Intelligence Branch, Quartermaster General's Department.

THE following are the Home reliefs of the year, so far as they are known at present.—

HOMEWARD.—12th Royal Lancers, Bangalore; 1st King's Own Yorkshire, Light Infantry, Burma and Dinapore; 2nd North Stafford Regiment, Aden; 2nd Hampshire Regiment, Secunderabad.

OUTWARD.—21st Hussars to Bangalore; 1st Royal Fusiliers, 1st Cheshire Regiment, and 1st Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, destination not yet fixed.

THE non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Artillery under orders for England next trooping season, who care to remain longer in India may volunteer to remain. These men may select the Presidency in which they will serve, but are not allowed to select any Battery.

IT is stated that complete arrangements have been made at Simla for placing an Army Corps in the field, and that the whole force, thoroughly equipped and perfect in every respect, could be put in motion at less than twenty-four hours' notice.

THE Government of India has approved of the proposal of the Surgeon-General, H.M.'s Forces, Bengal, to reduce, by half a Native Field Hospital, the number of Field Hospitals, half British and one Native, allotted to Quetta: thus reducing the total number required for all purposes to 30, and also to a modification in the distribution of the eight British Field Hospitals, authorised for the lines of communication. By this arrangement the 30 Field Hospitals (17 British and 13 Native) will be maintained in the three Presidencies for British and Native troops, and will be distributed as follows:—

	British.	Natives.
Frontiers...	1	3
First Army Corps	8	10
Lines of Communication	8	...

CAPTAIN J. W. CURRIE, of the 20th Madras Infantry (now attached to the 10th Madras Infantry in Burma), is the second of the two officers selected from the Burma Field Force to be Extra Aides-de-Camp to the Viceroy. The 10th Madras Infantry has been singularly unfortunate in Burma. Two senior officers could not accompany it on service, and it went to Burma with no fewer than five officers "attached" from other regiments. Of these Captain A. W. Rendle was recently killed in action, and Lieutenant Colonel Wroughton died on the 14th of last month from apoplexy. A third officer has been wounded, and now the withdrawal of Captain Currie, who has been officiating Second-in-Command, makes another gap.

Lieut.-General A. B. Little, Bombay S.C., is about to be placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List, he having been unemployed for five years. He entered the Indian Army as an Ensign in 1842, and has therefore nearly forty-five years' service. During this time he has taken part in four campaigns, beginning with the Scinde Campaign of 1843-45. He was next employed in the Persian Expedition of 1857, and in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny during the years 1857-59, and was three times mentioned in despatches, and thanked by the Government. His last war service was in the Abyssinian Expedition of 1867-68, for his services in which he was again mentioned in despatches.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE.

Mr. George Baden-Powell writes as follows to The Times:—

Varied is the advice now being offered to Government in regard to the proposed opening up of the new route to the East viâ the Canadian Pacific Railway. At this juncture it may be well to clear away certain misconceptions which still prevail in certain quarters. Many naval authorities are known to object to the expenditure of money in subsidising possible armed crusers—chiefly on the plea that additional men-of-war would be far more to the purpose. But in the first place men-of-war cruisers of speed are not able to carry much coal. Those of the newest designs only carry 600 to 700 tons, on a daily consumption of 120 to 150 tons. Such cruisers, if stationed at Vancouver, would find considerable difficulty in steaming even half-way to the China seas, supposing the breaking out of war to call for their presence across the Pacific; and it would be but poor satisfaction to have even the most perfect of men-of-war lying coalless and helpless in the mid-Pacific while some Russian "volunteer" cruiser is sweeping the seas of Japan. In the second place, such a man-of-war costs the nation more than £100,000 in initial outlay, and certainly £10,000 per annum in upkeep and depreciation—exclusive altogether of the expenses of manning. But, according to responsible tenders now before the Imperial Government, at least five or six full-powered speedy steamers, convertible into transports or armed cruisers at the shortest notice, would be always ready on the Pacific, and would be capable of carrying coal, and to spare, to take them right across that ocean, while the cost to the Admiralty vote of the provision of so excellent a supplemented service would not exceed £10,000 per annum. Thus from the purely naval point of view this latter plan is incomparably cheaper; and these steamers would at all events be there on the spot ready to fight, so far as they can, and certainly to transport men or coal or stores or torpedoes and torpedo boats in, say, ten days to the China seas from the British base in British Columbia, which is connected through British territory with the already powerful British settlements in the eastern portions of the Canadian Dominion. I need not here allude to the great commercial advantages which could be secured by establishing an alternative and additional route to the East. The latest news tells of the Parthia crossing the Pacific in twelve days, which, with organised through communications, brings Japan with twenty-five days of England. This fact is of the first importance in regard to letters, samples, and patterns, and to passengers and light cargo traffic. I am informed, on the best authority, that if no subsidy is forthcoming this new Pacific service will perforce be given to foreign lines. Recollections of what passed last autumn, when a portion of the American mails was transferred from an English to a German line, prove the political danger, in the present temper of the public mind, to any Government if it permits such a truly national and much-needed service to pass to the hands of foreigners. I am confident that the country and Parliament would willingly sanction the wise expenditure of a Post Office subsidy of £35,000 per annum and an Admiralty subsidy of £10,000 in order to inaugurate two powerful mail and trade lines of English vessels on the Pacific. Canada and Australia are ready to join hands with the mother country in setting up this additional and excellent line of Imperial communications

THE ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—The annual distribution of prizes to the students attending the Royal Indian Engineering College, Cooper's-hill, was held on July 27 at Egham, Mr. B. H. Currey, Vice-President of the Council of India, officiating at the ceremony, in the absence of Viscount Cross.—In presenting the report, having reference to the operations of the last twelvemonth, General Sir Alexander Taylor, the principal of the college, said they were now completing their 16th session. With regard to the studies, a satisfactory amount of work had been accomplished; while in the senior division, with a few exceptions the students had all qualified themselves for the public service.—The prizemen were afterwards presented to the meeting, and received their awards from the chairman, who, in addressing the the company subsequently, heartily congratulated the governors upon the admirable results which had attended the working of institution. The college was now practically self-supporting, and the education it afforded, he had every reason to say, was of the highest and best quality. Some time ago it was pointed out that some addition to the number of scholarships would be of advantage to the institution, and he desired, with the permission of the authorities, to transfer to them the sum of £1,000 to found a scholarship to be known as the Vice-President's.—On the part of the governors, Sir A. Taylor thanked Mr. Currey for his attendance, and the company were afterwards entertained at luncheon.—Prominent among the prize winners were Mr. A. H. Gale, who took the Argyll Scholarship, and Messrs. H. A. F. Currie and Smith-Ainsley, who each obtained prizes on several subjects.

THE dates on which evidence is to be taken by the Sub-Committee of the Public Service Commission at Simla are, for the several Departments, fixed as follows:—July 18th: Accounts, Archæology, and Customs. July 19th: Education, Forests and Geological Survey. July 20th: Jails, Mint, and Opium. July 21st: Pilot Service, Post Office, and Police. July 22nd: Public Works, Registration, and Salt. July 23rd: Surveys and Telegraphs.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

It is impossible not to welcome to the pages of the National such Liberal contributors as Earl Selborne and the Warden of All Souls, Oxford; and we do so the more gladly that they are eminently qualified to set forth, from different points of view, the reasons which have brought, and will continue to bring, truly consistent Liberals within the Unionist "fold." Earl Selborne investigates, with kindly cruel nicety, the foundation on which the well-known dictum of the late Premier—that "the opinion of the civilised world" is in favour of his notable scheme for the disruption of the Empire—may rest; and he has, of course, no difficulty in showing that such a foundation is simply non-existent. Pointing to the strenuous efforts—made assuredly as much by the "masses" as the "classes"—of Italy and the United States of America (to which he might well have added the not less striking instance of Germany) in the direction of aggregation, as opposed to segregation, he clearly points the moral, that it is only the enemy of England and her Empire who desires the introduction, in whatever case, and under whatever form, of the thin end of the disruption wedge, yclept "Home Rule."

The Warden of All Souls belongs, both by birth and position, to the "classes;" though it is by no means on this ground that he objects to the sharp distinction between them and the "masses." As he truly remarks, to say that on all great political issues the "masses" are always right, and the "classes" always wrong, is merely to assert, in other words, "that ignorance, if you can only get enough of it, is a better guide than knowledge." He well exposes, too, the risk which we are running, lest the constituencies, misled by the "taking," but wholly indefinite, and practically unmeaning, form of words, "An Irish legislative body for the management of Irish affairs," should "accept a principle which, according to its application, may mean anything or nothing. The country," he warns us, "may wake up to find that it has made an unconditional surrender to Mr. Gladstone, who in his turn has to satisfy Mr. Parnell with . . . . the American Irish party."

The position of the Liberal Unionist party is sensibly dealt with by the Editors, who express their conviction that much closer union between that and the Conservative party is desirable, an opinion in which we cordially concur. The editors intimate their readiness (should this meet the views of intending Unionist contributors) to have the National Review "regarded as a Unionist, rather than, as hitherto, an exclusively Conservative organ." We think the wisdom of this open to question; the Conservatives will long form the large majority of the Unionist party: and (though Lord Selborne's concluding remarks on Free Trade suggest, that there may be other points of agreement between Liberal and Conservative Unionists than the maintenance of the Union) may well be thought entitled to a monthly organ of their own.

The lessons to be learnt from that Jubilee, the afterglow of which is still with us, and the considerations to which it gives rise, form the subject of two thoughtful papers, Mr. H. D. Traill's "The other side of the Medal," and Captain Penrose Fitzgerald's suggestive question, "Are we worthy of our Empire?" Mr. Traill, holding the mirror up to ourselves, asks us, whether we can aver that we stand on a higher level, in truthfulness, bravery, or political morality, than we did fifty years ago. Kid-glove refinement, he well shows, is not of necessity equivalent to moral improvement, or to an "insight into the truth of things." From Captain Fitzgerald we have, as we might expect from a sailor, some plain commonsense, "upright and down-straight like a yard of pump-water." Reminding us, like Mr. Traill, that the game of British politics "has come very low when the losing side tries to upset the chessboard as soon as they see checkmate to be inevitable," and that "a man who deliberately wants to break up the Empire, and talks treason against his Queen and country, is a rebel and a traitor, and nothing else," he naturally turns to the Navy, the condition of which he depicts in terms not a whit too forcible. The Navy—it is impossible to repeat it too often—"is neither more nor less than the insurance paid for all that makes us a nation. . . . If we were to suffer a serious naval defeat we should be starved into submission, and be obliged to submit to annexation or any terms of peace dictated to us."

The position of the country Clergy, especially lamentable in Wales, and one which the tithe-war threatens to make worse, is touched on by one of their number, the Rev. E. W. Bowling; but chiefly from the point of view of the misrepresentations to which they are exposed. Turning from the clergy to the consecrated edifice, we find much to interest, and to instruct, in Mr. E. G. Howard's Paper on "Ancient and Modern Painted Glass." The writer judiciously avails himself of modern blunders to show us "what to avoid" in future. An amusing little poem, "the Ring and the Casket," by Lord Lytton (not without its moral), an interesting notice (by the Countess Martinengo Cesaresco) of North-Italian agriculture, some curious details of the life of the great Composer of the "Music of the Future," and a critical paper on the mystical side of—the daily less read—Wordsworth, deserve to be specified as miscellanies in an unusually good number of this Review.

PRINCE ALEXANDER OF BATTENBERG.*

Who does not remember the unctuous piety with which a certain leading statesman, whose name shall be nameless, turned up his eyes to Heaven and denounced Bulgaria and her atrocities! Who does not call to mind the fierce and fiery orations which lashed up this country to a fury of madness! And, all important consideration, who has let slip from memory the change of Government which followed this fortunate phrenzy, this most opportune discovery! But a change has come over the spirit of the dream. It now appears that public indignation should have been launched against Holy Russia, who stirred up intrigue, who countenanced rebellion, who fanned the flame of discord, and nourished the adder of mischief. Gold from St. Petersburg, complications from the land of snow, emissaries charged to plot, to depose, to murder—these were the causes of Bulgaria's troubles. And yet not a word is heard now as to Russian atrocities—no. Tempora mutantur. Great men are too much occupied with Ireland to think of foreign climes. The ladder, too, will not reach to the coveted Bench. Voila tout.

If, perchance, any one has hitherto been disinclined to credit what is abundantly shown in the literature of the Bulgarian crisis, a perusal of M. Koch's very plainspoken narrative will serve to dispel the haze of doubt which ignorance has originated. Not a page but tells a tale of cunning treachery, deceit, and dishonesty. Not a chapter but occasions disgust at unpunished dissimulation and unrequited want of uprightness. There is no screen drawn before the actions of men for whom everlasting infamy is too good a punishment and eternal disgrace an easy escape. Everything is laid bare with merciless justice and equity, and what a picture of wickedness and vice! what a record of sin and villainy! M. Koch's most outspoken volume appears, too, at an opportune time, when a new sovereign is about to sit upon the throne of Bulgaria, and Russia is once again bringing forth the chaldron of intrigue, and making ready the fire of treachery. "What think ye will be the end thereof?" Can there be a doubt? We have none; but is it not Holy Russia?

SEA MONSTERS AND SEA BIRDS.†

If a love of the marvellous be the predominant taste of the age, assuredly Natural History should be one of the most popular sciences of the day. Take even such comparatively simple works as Dr. Hartwig's "Winged Life in the Tropics" and "Sea Monsters and Birds." What an array of wonderful, in some instances, indeed, incredible facts are placed before the reader! How, for example, can one realise that a single queen ant lays 50,000,000 eggs in the two seasons during which the insect lives, or that she increases in size during this period till she weighs upwards of 30,000 of her own subjects? Who, again, could picture the fire-flies of the West Indies as so brilliant that on one occasion the commander of the British forces took them for lights moving about, and supposing the Spanish to be approaching with an overwhelming force hastily re-embarked before the imaginary foe?

Who can explain that seals are so susceptible to sounds that they will come to the surface of the water and stretch out their necks to the utmost extent should any one strike up a tune? And yet these animals have no ears!

Is it not, too, inexplicably puzzling that when hundreds of thousands of aquatic birds make their nests in one locality, they are enabled by instinct to find their own eggs, and yet to an ordinary observer there are no distinguishing marks to enable the mother to repair to her own locality amidst a darkening mass of birds all on the same errand intent?

From these few examples, taken at random, it will be seen that these little volumes are at once instructive and replete with interest. Boys are now about to come home for the holidays; they might do worse than spend an hour or two occasionally in company with Dr. Hartwig and his birds, beasts, and fishes.

The Century Illustrated Magazine for August is perhaps a little too full of the American War; but, apart from this, there is plenty to read, and the pictures are of the highest order of merit.

THE EURASIAN QUESTION.

AMONGST the various matters affectin g India upon which the Home Press has commented there is one which does not seem to have attracted any attention here, and yet it is one, not only of vital, but of pressing necessity, so far as British rule in India is to be accepted as a success or otherwise. That matter is the Eurasian question. What is to be the future of that vast and ever-increasing population sometimes called "half-castes," but better known in India under the less reproachful name of Eurasians? This great community has hitherto been grossly neglected by the Paramount Power—whether that Power held office under the old East India Company or the Crown. The authorities in India, Civil and Military, have been watching the growth of this community, but have been doing so with folded hands and averted eyes as to the future. At last the community has commenced to assert itself, but, like every personal movement in India, the leading idea is to fall back upon Government. "What is the Government going to do for us," is now the question which is being asked by the Eurasian men and women who have hitherto done nothing for themselves. And it is not an easy question, to answer. Of mixed parentage, the Eurasians, possessing many of the virtues which English society commends, have also not a few of the vices which the same society condemns. They do not like menial labour; they have been brought up to no manner of skilled or industrial handicraft. Ambition—that ambition, at least, which is said to be a vice hinging on virtue—is unknown to them. If there be any glimmering of it in their minds it takes the shape of the ambition of a Bengali Babu, whose chief aim and object is to become a Government clerk. But official clerkism in India is being overstocked by the Bengalees themselves, to say nothing of the Mahomedans, who are now being encouraged—and we consider wisely, too—to look for employment under British rule. The difficult question of what to do with the Eurasians still remains. It has been suggested that they should be encouraged to enlist into the military ranks, or be drafted into a separate arm of interior defence themselves. If such a solution of the difficult problem could be thus easily arrived at, argument need not go further; but the problem is not so readily solved. The majority of the Eurasian men are not of the material of which good soldiers—either for courage or endurance—are formed. They may have brave hearts—and there was proof of this during the Mutiny; but the brave hearts are generally encased in very weak physical bodies. To tell the honest truth, the half-caste breed in India is a weak and degenerate one. We are not writing thus in any terms of reproach, but the truth must be told. There have been, and there are, exceptions to all Nature's rules, but so far as India is concerned the population, which has been the result of intermarriage between Europeans and Natives, is not of the strong fibre of which soldiers are supposed to be made. An attempt was made in 1857 to form more than one Eurasian corps of cavalry and infantry, and the attempt was not attended with very encouraging results—although it must be said that during the Mutiny some splendid work was done by Eurasian men and women. Kavanagh's act, by which he gained the Victoria Cross, will always be accepted by English historians as part of the military glory of which the nation has reason to be proud.

But the sad question still remains of—What is to be done with the evergrowing Eurasian population of India? In one respect—that of undoubted loyalty—it is a strength to British rule, but in almost every other respect it is a weakness and an anxiety.

RUKHMABAI'S REPLY TO DADAJEE'S "EXPOSITION."

There appeared some time since over the signature of Mr. Dadajee Bhikajee in the newspapers, as well as in a separate pamphlet form, what is called "An Exposition of some of the facts of the case of Dadajee v. Rukhmabai."

As most of the facts mentioned in this "Exposition" are fictions, pure and simple, I could not do Mr. Dadajee Bhikajee the injustice of crediting him with a knowledge of what has been before the public in his name. Mr. Dadajee Bhikajee cannot write or well understand English; he knows nothing about the Jews in Egypt, or who was Pharaoh, and these references show that a Christian hand has helped to write the so-called "Exposition." But some of my friends think that several of the statements in the "Exposition" should receive public contradiction from me. I defer to their wishes, though in doing so I remember that I am in an exceptionally delicate position.

The following are some of the assertions made in the "Exposition," and which the public is asked to believe.

ASSERTION.	CONTRADICTION.
1. At the time of my marriage my wife was 13 years.	I was only 11 years.
2. The marriage was sought for by Rukhmabai's family.	It was sought for by Mr. Dadajee's mother, who had for years importuned my mother and grandfather to marry me to one of her sons.
3. This was a signal for open hostility of her mother and her grandfather.	Mr. Hurrichand Yadowjee did not meddle in these matters, as everything with regard to me was then done by Dr. Sakharam.
4. My health was sound then as it is sound now.	Quite untrue.
5. The property is of the estimated value of upwards of Rs. 25,000.	It was not worth even half that sum.
6. My mother-in-law and her father are now in the enjoyment of the property.	Neither of them is.
7. The statement that my circumstances had changed is an after thought.	They are not after-thoughts; the change in Mr. Dadajee's circumstances was that four months after the marriage his mother died, and his family house was broken, and he went to live with persons of objectionable surroundings, and gave up studies and good habits.
8. I asked for the removal of my wife to my family house.	This is a misnomer. Mr. Dadajee had no family house as he correctly puts it, in his plaint. What he should say is the "house he resided in."
9. I have never quarrelled with Rukhmabia, nor have I given her occasion to dislike me.	There is some truth in the first assertion, the other is untrue.

Some of these points I give in detail below.

Both my late lamented stepfather, Dr. Sakharam Arjun, as well as Mr. Dadajee's mother, the chief contracting parties to my marriage, are dead.

As I was married by Dr. Sakharam, and as he looked to my education, &c., everything relating to me was referred to him. Mr. Hurrichund Yadowjee was only formally consulted, as he was my natural father's executor.

My mother and my grandfather are said to be in the enjoyment of my property: I cannot understand in what tense the word "enjoyment" is used. My mother is not connected with my property in any manner whatever. My grandfather, as my executor, collected rents, &c., for a long time, but he submitted the accounts to me, and I checked them myself. Since 1882, long before Mr. Dadajee filed his present suit, I had opened an account with the Bank of Bombay in my own name.

The death of Mr. Dadajee's mother wrought a great change in his "circumstances." Mr. Dadajee began to lead a wild, reckless life, and went and lived with an uncle whose surroundings are most objectionable. I should have stopped here, but the person who writes for Mr. Dadajee has the audacity to say that "in regard to the questionable character of a person who was living in our family house, the attempt to prove it completely broke down." In paper book containing the evidence in the present suit, printed under the superintendence of Mr. Dadajee's attorneys, it will be found on pages 24, 28, and 31 that Mr. Dadajee, his brother, and his uncle admitted the fact that what is conveniently called a person lived in the house of his uncle. The relationship of that person to Mr. Dadajee's uncle would have been proved if witnesses on my side had been examined. But the presiding judge did not think it worth while to take any defence. It is abusing language to say, after this, that the attempt completely broke down. I have to reluctantly observe that this person is no other than a mistress of Mr. Dadajee's uncle, who has been living in his house for some fourteen years, as admitted by him; and to avoid whose tyranny the lawful wife of this man had once jumped into a well. I did not wish to live in the same house as the companion of this woman. If Mr. Dadajee never quarrelled with me, it is because I have been never with him since the day of my marriage: when he says that he gave me no occasion for disliking him he is mistaken. He abused my relatives, including my mother, in language which was shameful. He set at defiance the efforts made by my father and grandfather to educate him, and took to ways which a woman's lips cannot utter. Mr. Dadajee went through every course of dissipation, till my aversion for him was firmly settled. Having watched his movements for the last five or six years, I gave him up as irreclaimably lost, and made up my mind to wash my hands of him for ever.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO POISON A BRITISH REGIMENT.

The Railway Service Gazette publishes a sensational account of an attempt to poison the Manchester Regiment, stationed at Agra. A correspondent to whom credit for reliability is given, furnishes the following particulars of the incident to which no political importance is attached:—

It seems that some seventy men belonging to the Manchester Regiment shortly after visiting the canteen were seized with violent attacks of vomiting, which created a suspicion that something was wrong with the beer. The beer on tap was accordingly examined, when it was found to contain arsenic. Several other hogsheads were then examined, and to the consternation of those engaged in the tests the beer in every one of them was found to be poisoned by the introduction of arsenic. The dastardly attempt is not considered to have been made with any political object, but it is somewhat strange that only those casks containing beer for the Manchester Regiment were found to have been poisoned. A cask that had just been tapped at the Sergeants' Mess, Royal Artillery, was tested and found to contain arsenic, but it had been previously marked for the Manchester Regiment, which strengthens the belief that there is nothing political connected with the attempt, for had there been all the troops in the garrison would have been served alike. The whole of the beer in store at Agra is undergoing a strict chemical analysis, and samples of each cask are being taken and sealed. Every inquiry is being made and rewards have been offered to try and discover the authors of this diabolical plot.

NEW FOUR PER CENT. LOAN.

The Government of India is inviting tenders for a new Four per Cent. Loan of Rs. 2,00,00,000. The determination to borrow this amount is notified in a "Gazette of India Extraordinary," which was issued simultaneously at the various seats of Government. The loan forms a part of the Four per Cent. Loan of May 1, 1865, and will be governed by the conditions which apply to the notes of the latter loan. Tenders, which must be in sums of Rs. 500, or multiples of Rs. 500, will be received by the Comptroller-General, Calcutta, up to noon, and by the Accountant-General, Bombay, up to eleven o'clock, on Tuesday, Aug. 2 next, when they will be publicly opened. Among the conditions which apply to the new loan are the following:—

Each tender must be accompanied by a receipt from the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or one of their branches, or from an officer in charge of some Public Treasury, or by a cheque drawn in favour of the Comptroller-General on a Bank in Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, or in favour of the Accountant-General, Bombay, or a bank in Bombay in respect of tenders received by him, or by Government promissory notes, standing in the name of or endorsed to the tenderer or the person making the deposit, for not less than one-hundredth, or, if the tender be for less than Five Lakhs of Rupees, then for not less than one-fiftieth part of the tender.

Deposits, not being promissory notes, will, in the case of accepted tenders, be credited proportionally in part payment of the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender, and will bear interest for the purpose of clause 14 below from the date of the opening of tenders. If any allotment-certificate is not fully taken up, the deposit credited in respect of it will be forfeited.

Promissory notes deposited in respect of any accepted tender will be held until all the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender are paid up, and will, if the allotment-certificates are not fully taken up, be appropriated by the Government and cancelled.

If the allotment made on any tender is less than Rs. 3,000, then the whole of the allotment-certificates (after credit of the deposit under clause 4 (b) will be made payable upon the 13th September. Otherwise the whole amount of each allotment will be divided into three instalment as follows:—

Instalment I.—As near as convenient to thirty-five per cent., but not exceeding thirty-five per cent., payable upon the 16th August.

Digitized by Google

Instalment II.—As near as convenient to 35 per cent., but not exceeding 35 per cent., payable upon the 13th September.

Instalment III.—The balance payable upon the 18th October.

Payment of any allotment-certificate may be made to the account of the Government in the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or in any Branch of these Banks, or into any Public Treasury or Treasuries in India which may be named in the tender in respect of which it was issued. When any allotment-certificate is fully paid up, the holder will, on presenting it duly receipted at the place where it was paid, obtain from the Public Debt Office, Calcutta, promissory notes of such values as he may desire.

RELATIONS BETWEEN CHINA AND NEPAUL.

A few years ago a writer in The Times recounted the story of the war at the beginning of this century between China and Nepaul, in which the Chinese army was completely successful, and which resulted in a peace dictated by China under the walls of Khatmandu. Happily there is no cloud on our relations with the martial and profoundly interesting State of Nepaul, although it is the recruiting ground for some of the bravest troops in the Indian army, men whose whole bearing and jaunty stride betoken the born warrior. Our policy in recent years has been to let the State severely alone. Yet it cannot be denied that we have done so simply because we believed no other Power had any influence there, not because the condition or future of Nepaul was indifferent to us. China, the nearest neighbour on the north, was far off, and it was not believed that she took any interest in the remote Himalayan hill State. A statement published a few months ago in India that a Nepaulese mission bearing tribute to China was making its way across Asia to Peking was received with incredulous wonder. But it was nevertheless perfectly true. We have now before us two documents which accompanied the mission. The first is a memorial to the Emperor by the two Imperial Residents of Lhassa, the capital of Thibet, reporting the arrival of the mission there and how it had been treated; the second is a translation of a letter addressed by the ruler of Nepaul to the Emperor of China. In the former the Residents report that a tribute mission from Nepaul arrived in Lhassa on Dec. 13, under escort from Nilam, on the Thibetan frontier. The members carried certain articles of tribute, which the Residents duly inspected, and then entertained the envoys at the customary banquet, and made them presents of satin, silver medals, purses, tea, sheep, rice, flour, and money to pay travelling expenses, and to purchase fur clothing for the journey. During the period that the envoys were at Lhassa they were instructed by the memorialists in the usages and etiquette of the Court, and after they had rested a while from their fatigues they were sent forward on their journey on Feb. 16, the articles of tribute being done up securely in oxhide wrappings. One of the Residents should have accompanied the mission into Sze-chuen, but they were both very busy in keeping order at sundry festivals (in other words, the crossing of the passes into China in the month of February was distasteful to them), and someone else who was going that way took command of the mission escort. The Nepaulese letter, or rather the Chinese translation of it (which may be a very different matter), is addressed by Erdeni, King of the Goorkhas, "who humbly prostrates himself with nine obeisances before the throne of his great Majesty, whose fostering kindness is like the overspreading vault of heaven and the rays of the sun and moon, and whose benevolence is extended to a myriad kingdoms." He predicts for the Emperor length of years enduring as the mountain Hsü Mi, round which the sun and moon revolve. The letter states that in accordance with the custom which requires the King of Nepaul to send tribute once every five years to Peking, he has this year selected the full complement of offerings and has despatched them by the hands of a principal and assistant envoy with their following. In accordance with the course always pursued when events occurred in Nepaul which had to be reported to the Emperor, the writer had petitioned the Residents in Lhassa, begging them to address his Majesty in his behalf. He hopes due allowance will be made for the distance of Nepaul from Pekin, and his own unfamiliarity with the usages of the Imperial Court, and trusts that his aspirations towards civilisation may be taken into consideration. The writer dwells on the sincerity which has characterised the relations of his predecessors ever since their allegiance was tendered to China, and trusts that the errors and shortcomings into which the inexperience of youth may lead him may meet with that leniency which is extended to a slave as he would fain be regarded, and that he may ever be the recipient of celestial bounty, for which he will be inexhaustibly grateful. He indites this letter upon August 4, 1886, and accompanies it with a respectful offering of gold satin brocade. On it is the following laconic Imperial minute:—"We have perused the letter."

Now, we are far from asserting that the epistle written by the ruler of Nepaul was in this slavish and grovelling style; but what is beyond question is that this is the document received by the Chinese Government as the Nepaulese letter. The Residents at Lhassa may have "cooked" the translation so as to make it more pleasing to their superiors; but however this may be, it represents in the form here given the relations between Nepaul and China as understood by the latter. This being the case, it is a question for the Indian Government what they think of the position of this frontier State towards the great Empire of China as here revealed. It would be impossible to acknowledge dependence and vassaldom in stronger terms. It must be remembered also that Nepaul is not the only Indian frontier State over which China professes to exercise, and sometimes actually does exercise, the rights of sovereiguty. Only last year the Residents at Lhassa reported some disorders in Bhotan, and the peremptory instructions they had sent to the Deb Rajah in connection with them. Troops at the same time were sent to the Thibetan frontier of Bhotan to enforce the orders of the Residents, and were there until quite a recent date. Possibly they are there still. Yet at the very moment when the Chinese are receiving these marks of suzerainty, and are exercising sovereign rights over States beyond Thibet, they are telling the British Government that they cannot at present require the Grand Lama to receive a mission from India to which they had originally consented. We do not mean to allege any breach of faith against the Chinese Government in this respect; no doubt they believe honestly that a mission would be better received, and its task in Thibet be easier a little later on; but if China claims these powers over States which are much more remote than Thibet, why does she shirk the responsibilities involved? The answer is that China has always done this. This hand-to-mouth policy has characterised her dealings with all her so-called feudatories in recent years; she accepts their "tribute" missions and homage, she resents any attack on them, but she evades any responsibility for them. She will not punish them herself, she will not force them to do their duty, and she will do all she can to prevent others doing it. No question of this sort, happily, arises now in regard to Nepaul; but there is all the more reason therefore why the Government of India should examine the situation in regard to these frontier States, and come to some understanding with China in regard to them at a time when no feelings are excited and no fears aroused.—The Times.

LOSS OF THE P. AND O. STEAMER "TASMANIA."

The Board of Trade inquiry into the stranding of the P. and O. Company's steamer Tasmania, which was wrecked in the Straits of Bonifacio on April 17, was re-opened on the 26th inst., by Mr. Rothery, Q.C., wreck commissioner, and three assessors, at the Sessions House, Westminster. It will be remembered that a similar inquiry was opened a few weeks ago and had proceeded for some time, but in consequence of the death of Captain Besley, one of the assessors, it was abandoned, the Commissioner holding that the court was not properly constituted, as in the Act of Parliament creating this tribunal it was provided that when the Court was ordered to see if the certificate of an officer was to be dealt with one of the assessors should have considerable experience as a commander in the merchant service, Captain Besley being the only assessor so qualified. Dr. Raikes, Q.C., and Mr. Baden Powell now represented the Board of Trade; Mr. Hall, Q.C., and Mr. Mansell Jones were for the owners of the vessel; and Mr. Myburgh, Q.C., and Mr. Howard Smith for the officers of the Tasmania. Mr. Bliss, one of the passengers, informed the court that they were no longer represented by counsel. The passengers had already spent a large sum of money in watching their case, and now many of them had returned to the East, or were abroad, so that they could no longer act together. All they could do, therefore, was to leave their case in the hands of the Court. Mr. Myburgh, Q.C., contended that the Board of Trade had no power to order the investigation. He submitted that this was a court which was the creation of an Act of Parliament, and that it could only proceed under the powers of that Act and the rules. Now, unfortunately, the proceedings of the first investigation had been rendered abortive, owing to the loss the Court had sustained. Had the Legislature intended that under such circumstances there should be a fresh investigation it would have provided for such a contingency. The parties he represented had been put to great inconvenience and expense, and they would be unable, unless in very exceptional circumstances, to recover from the Board of Trade. It appeared to him, therefore, that not only on a point of law, but looking at the case on its merits, if it was contemplated to give power to the Board of Trade to hold another inquiry such power would have been given by Parliament. Mr. Hall, Q.C., desired, on the part of the P. and O. Company, to say that he was instructed to endeavour to assist the Court as much as possible to arrive at a termination of this lengthened inquiry, and in any way that was possible to shorten the proceedings. Dr. Raikes thought the objection must fall to the ground, as the Board of Trade had undoubtedly power to order a fresh inquiry or a re-hearing of the case.—The Commissioner said no doubt the Board of Trade had power to hold a fresh investigation, or a re-hearing. In criminal trials, and this was a quasi criminal trial, if one of the jury died, the proceedings were commenced again, He, therefore, must overrule the objection, but would take a note of it.—Dr. Raikes then proceeded to open the case on behalf of the Board of Trade.

The inquiry was resumed yesterday morning by Mr. Rothery, Wreck Commissioner, and three assessors, at the Royal Courts of Justice. Mr. Curtis, second officer of the Tasmania, was, previous to the adjournment on Saturday, recalled, and, in answer to Mr. Myburgh, Q.C., said that during his watch, on the morning of the wreck, no alteration of the course took place unknown to the captain and without the captain's sanction. The statement of the witness Fagg was untrue. The last and final course taken before the stranding of the vessel was set by the captain and reported by the witness to the captain. He never was off the bridge from the time he left the chart room at half-past three A.M. until the vessel struck. There was no truth whatever in the statement made by Cole, the quartermaster, that he was in the chart room when his watch was relieved. The last course he gave the captain was north, 50 west.—By the Commisisoner: The responsibility for the course taken rested entirely with the master. He believed he was well acquainted with the Straits of Bonifacio. He had no instructions from the captain to take the bearings of any light.

This concluded the evidence offered by the Board of Trade.

CAPTAIN H. C. HOGG, Bombay S.C., Second Squadron Commander, 3rd Bombay Cavalry, has been granted leave out of India on private affairs for twelve months.

THE

BROAD ARROW

AND

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE O INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle-on-Tyne,
May 25, 1887.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND SOLE GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS.

The reputation of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS originally introduced into England by the SOLE AGENTS, Messrs. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established, and the success of their enterprise has surpassed their expectations. DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS afford the only instance hitherto attained of the perfect representation of real Diamonds by artificial means. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real Diamonds of great value at the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense to imitations. They attracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grand monde and élite of society, and are now worn at the Court Balls and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for interadixing with and replacing parures and other costly Diamond Ornaments, and can be worn at all times with confidence and security.

Every article is Mounted in 18-Carat Gold by the best Diamond Setters, exactly in the manner of the finest Brazilian Diamonds.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

THE course of instruction is designed to PREPARE BOYS (Sons of Gentlemen, from 7 years of age) to occupy the positions of Land Owners and Occupiers, Land Agents, Surveyors, intending Colonists, &c. The education secured at this institution is of a very superior character, the whole object of the School being to impart a thoroughly practical and scientific knowledge of all agricultural subjects; a thorough moral, intellectual, and physical training, it pledges itself to send forth its pupils practically religious and sound scholars. The school is most pleasantly situated in a healthy locality. The greatest possible care is bestowed upon the health and domestic comfort of the pupils. The diet is excellent and unlimited. The school is very strongly recommended. References throughout Great Britain.—Address for prospectus the PRINCIPAL, Maypole Road, East Grinstead, Sussex.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 8, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 19th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 17th July; and from Calcutta to the 16th July.

AT a meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla, July 13th, the consideration of the Bill for the regulation of the Military Police in Burma was postponed in order that further remarks—which had not arrived—from the Chief Commissioner of the Province might be taken into consideration.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN moved to introduce a Bill for the Establishment of Bonded Warehouses at places other than the Customs Ports, which, under the Sea Customs Act of 1878, could alone be declared Warehousing Ports.

IT was expected that the Report of the Select Committee on the Punjab Tenancy and Land Bills would probably be presented in the Council about July 31st.

THE Hon. Mr. Quinton, a member of the Committee, was to remain at Simla until the report was presented, and was then to join Sir Charles Turner at Bombay.

THE Sub-Committee of the Public Service Commission was to open their sitting there on July 18th and at Madras Aug. 1st. They expect to have their report ready by the middle of September, when the Commission itself will reassemble, under Sir Charles Aitchison, to prepare the Report covering the entire subject.

BEFORE taking up the Lieutenant-Governorship of the North-West Provinces it is said that Sir Auckland Colvin will probably go on three months' leave to England, on medical certificate, starting early in August, Mr. Westland officiating, in ordinary course, as Financial Member of Council.

SIR STEWART BAYLEY has accepted the office of Patron of the Indian Club in Calcutta in place of Sir Rivers Thompson. He held a Durbar on the 15th July to invest thirteen Native gentlemen with Khilluts appropriate to titles conferred on them on the Jubilee day.

OUT of respect to the memory of Sir Ashley Eden the Bengal Secretariat Offices were closed on July 13th.

THE Government of India will shortly issue Resolutions laying down instructions for the shortening of Official Reports.

THE Military Works Department is passing into a stage of increased activity. Its strength has been augmented by the grading of eleven Lieutenants of Royal Engineers, and the transfer of others from the Public Works Department is under serious consideration. Arrangements meanwhile are being made to revise the old and to prepare new projects for defence works in India, and it is hoped that a commencement may be made during the current financial year. The supply of heavy guns is being expedited, and a considerable number of weapons of light calibre have already arrived in India.

COMPLAINTS have been made that the troops in Lower Burma had been omitted from any recognition in the Burma Despatches. The matter, however, is now under the notice of the military authorities, and there is every prospect of the services of the garrison of the Lower Province being suitably recompensed.

SIR BENJAMIN SIMPSON, Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, having returned from leave, Deputy Surgeon-General Walker has reverted to the North-West Provinces.

MAJOR D. ROBERTSON, Assistant to the Resident at Mysore, has been posted temporarily to Hyderabad as First Assistant. Mr. Forbes, Assistant Secretary in the Foreign Office, will, after taking leave, relieve Major Robertson at the end of the year. In the meanwhile Mr. L. W. King is posted as First Assistant to the Resident of Mysore, Mr. Carlo Bayley taking his place as Assistant Commissioner at Ajmere.

MAJOR E. A. FRASER has rejoined the appointment he formerly held as First Assistant to the Governor-General's Agent in Rajputana.

CAPTAIN C. W. RAVENSHAW has been appointed as First Assistant to the Resident at the Persian Gulf.

CAPTAIN HEXT, R.N, has been allowed a further term of five years' service under the Indian Government as Director of the Indian Marine, dating from March next.

THOMAS, the clerk in charge of the Lost Note Section of the Paper Currency Department at Bombay, has been found guilty of fraud at the Criminal Sessions. The jury recommended him to mercy, and the judge sentenced him to six years' rigorous imprisonment.

THE Government of India has refused an application lately made by a District Board in Southern India for permission to purchase in India the ironwork for the construction of a bridge of considerable size over a river within their district. The Government has informed the Board that the ironwork must be purchased in the usual manner through the Secretary of State for India.

IT is reported in Simla that when Mr. J. Westland, Secretary to Government in the Finance Department, goes on furlough at the end of the year, he will be succeeded by Mr. C. P. L. Macaulay, who will be permanently appointed to the post.

WHILE some recent examinations were being made on the Miri in Quetta, a bronze figure was unearthed which is supposed to be of Greek origin.

THE total quantity of wheat exported from the Central Provinces from the 1st of October, 1886, up to the 2nd of July was 2,763,715 bags of two and a-half maunds each, as compared with 2,371,303 bags exported in the corresponding period of 1885-6. The quantity of linseed exported was 352,099 maunds, as against 433,885 maunds.

THE Chief Commissioner has ordered Theebaw's sacred white elephant to be sent down from Mandalay to Rangoon.

THE freebooter Sadu, who joined Nur Mahomed in his expedition to Khost, is said to have lifted 200 horses on the Zarmat Border before returning to his old grounds north of the Safed Koh.

A PORTION of the troops who recently arrived at Kandahar from Herat have been sent to Tirni, eighty miles north of Kandahar, to aid the Durani tribesmen against the Andari sepoys who revolted at Herat, and are making their way viâ Obeh and Ghor towards the Southern Ghilzai country.

KABUL news shows that the Amir is holding Durbars very regularly, and conducting the business of State with his old vigour and sternness. His health is so much improved that he now takes riding exercise.

COLONEL H. A. SHAKESPEAR, commanding the 5th Bengal Cavalry at Meean Meer, died suddenly from apoplexy on the 10th July. Colonel Shakespear was present at the Jubilee sports given for Native troops held on the preceding Saturday, a day which will be remembered for the intense heat which prevailed during the afternoon. At midnight on Sunday he felt feverish, and shortly afterwards got unconscious, and died the following morning. He joined the Army in November, 1858. He served with the Bhootan expedition in 1864-65 (medal with clasp); in the Afghan war in 1879-80; and was present in the operations in the Mazeena Valley (mentioned in despatches and medal).

NOTES.

THE news from India received both by wire and post is satisfactory, so far as tranquillity and progress are concerned. The latest intelligence from Burma is an answer to those evil-croakers who were never tired during the late campaign of prophesying all manner of evils as likely to happen in consequence of the wicked annexation of Upper Burma by England. What has been the result?

A TELEGRAM from Rangoon dated only yesterday tells it. On Saturday the Chief Commissioner, Mr. Crosthwaite, held a large durbar at Mandalay, and in his address contrasted the condition of Upper Burma in August, 1886, with the present state of the country. Last year, he said, every part of the land was infested and plundered by numerous gangs of dacoits, headed by noted leaders. Few of these gangs were now in existence, and most of the leaders had been killed, or captured, or had surrendered, or had perished at the hands of their own followers. British authority established, the Government would encourage the employment of Burmans in the Military and Civil Service of the Crown. There would be no interference with the Buddhist religion or monastic schools, but Government would aid by supplying trained teachers, books, and educational appliances. Confidence is everywhere being restored and trade commencing to flourish. This is the news by telegram and post. Out of the much-predicted evil great good has come.

THIS has been happily the story of all British advance in India. The annexation of the Punjab, the annexation of Oudh, were at the time denounced as crimes by the pseudo-philanthropists of the day, and vengeance, it was said, would come to guilty England for the part she then played. The vengeance has come in the shape of blessings to many people. Oudh is to-day a smiling province, and the loyalty of the prosperous Punjab is a proverb. But the good results have come even quicker in Upper Burma.

LOWER BURMA has, however, its grievance. According to a telegram published in the Times this morning "much annoyance is felt and expressed in Rangoon at the manner in which the Jubilee address from the citizens of Rangoon was dealt with in London. A large and enthusiastic meeting, representing all the varied nationalities which form the population of Rangoon, passed a loyal address of congratulation, which was forwarded in a silver casket to London for presentation to the Queen-Empress. Mr. Thompson, one of the leading merchants, and president of the Chamber of Commerce here, was deputed to present the address. He was, however, refused permission to do so."

AS the citizens of Rangoon commemorated Her Majesty's Jubilee by deciding to erect a memorial hall and a statue of the Queen-Empress, and sent also considerable subscriptions to the Imperial Institute, a larger measure of courtesy might certainly have been secured to them, and we do not wonder at the local journals commenting on the fact that no acknowledgment of the address has been vouchsafed.

WHO is to blame for all this blundering, for blundering it surely has been if all that is stated be true? There seems to have been gross mismanagement in nearly all matters connected with India in this Jubilee affair if we are to believe what is appearing in the Press, both at home and in India, concerning the want of courtesy shown in quarters where courtesy ought to have been most conspicuous. Holkar's affair has perhaps been made more of than facts justified, and other reasons might be given for his action which would not throw all the blame—as it has been thrown—upon the India Office officials who were supposed to attend upon him. But it appears now that Holkar's is not the only case where complaint has been urged.

SIR T. ESMONDE has given notice of several questions which he intends to put in the House as to the way in which other Indian Princes were treated during the Jubilee celebrations. The indictment contained in these questions, it will be seen, is rather a serious one. He is to ask:—

Whether it is a fact that on the occasion of the Jubilee Volunteer Review the Indian Princes were compelled to leave their carriages outside the precincts of Buckingham Palace and to walk across the courtyard, while others were allowed to drive up to the pavilion; whether it is a fact that those of the Indian Princes who attended the laying of the foundation-stone of the Imperial Institute were not provided with seats on the dais reserved for Royalties and their attendants, but had to sit in the arena, that they were not even given front seats, and that after the ceremony they had to struggle through the crowd like ordinary visitors; whether it is a fact that the Princes were required to pay their railway fare to Portsmouth and back on the occasion of the Naval Review, that they were not accommodated with places on board one of the Royal yachts, and that the Maharajah of Kuch Behar had to travel in the same railway compartment as his servants, as a seat in a first-class carriage was not reserved for him; whether it is a fact that this lack of attention towards these notabilities has aroused considerable ill-feeling in India; and who is responsible therefor.

THESE questions would appear to have been framed from matter which appeared in an evening paper on Friday last, in which the blame is laid upon Mr. Fitzgerald, the Political A.D.C. to the Secretary of State for India, as he is now styled, but "Mehmandar" as the journal in question prefers to call him. "If," says that journal, "Mr. Fitzgerald cannot ensure proper respect being paid to distinguished Indian visitors, the sooner Mr. Godley's proposal to abolish the expensive office of Mehmandar is carried out the better."

THE expense of such an office, if its duties are properly carried out, ought not to be grudged. They are important and delicate duties when Natives of high rank visit England, and when it is advisable that they should return to India favourably impressed with their reception here. How far Mr. Fitzgerald is responsible for the failures attributed to him we cannot say, nor are we qualified to pass any comments upon his fitness for a post to which he was no doubt appointed owing to his experience of the manners and ceremonials of Native courts, and to his knowledge of the ways of Native Princes of India and their languages. But, as we said before, it is a pity that nobody will explain where the blame for the shortcomings complained of ought to lie.

IT is under contemplation to do away with the "intermediate class" carriage on the South Indian Railway, as this class of passenger vehicle has, since its introduction, three years ago, been a failure, and not availed of by the class of railway passengers for whose special use it was introduced on this Company's system. Its introduction in the North of India, strange to say, has been, on the contrary, a success.

TWENTY SIX miles of the Sindh-Pishin Railway were laid between the 8th of May and the 1st of August last year, and the report on the line for last year says:—"The heat throughout this whole time was terrific, and so trying that on many occasions it seemed impossible to go on with the work. The staff suffered terribly from fever; the platelaying gang were practically renewed every month by fresh importations from India, as they melted away from fever, dysentery, and scurvy. In thes ame way the gangs of girder-erectors dropped off, and during four months were twice replaced from India."

THE JUBILEE IN JAFFNA.—The Times of Ceylon reports a terrible accident at Jaffna during the Jubilee Celebration on the night of the 28th ultimo:—"So far as we are informed, it appears that fireworks were being let off, when a rocket which had been handed to a Tamil bystander who, without authority from anyone, ignited the same, and, instead of allowing it to ascend, appears to have clung to it, burst with a loud report, killing him and two others who were standing close by instantaneously, and throwing a number of others who were in the immediate proximity on the ground. Mr. Charles Morrison, of the Oriental Bank Corporation, was standing close by them, and is said to have been splashed with the blood of the three men who were killed as they were shattered to pieces by the force of the concussion."

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 7.

Tenders for the loan of two crores of rupees, advertised some weeks ago, were opened in Calcutta last Tuesday. More than twice the required amount was tendered. The minimum rate accepted was 97 rupees four annas, and tenders at that rate were accepted to the extent of 52 per cent. The loan was issued at an average rate of 97 rupees, six annas, 10 pies, which is considered a favourable result, although not quite equal to that of last year. The total amount received by the Government is 1,94,85,113 rupees.

Mr. Smeaton, Director of Agriculture for the North-West Provinces, has issued an interesting note on the competition between Indian and American wheat. The conclusion to which he comes is that it is not in prime cost that India is at a disadvantage. For the same outlay she can raise nearly twenty per cent. more grain than America, and of not much inferior quality; while she has resources enough in area and labour to raise sufficient wheat to supply the entire demand of the British market. India, Mr. Smeaton thinks, possesses means to compel America to withdraw her hostile tariffs and to open her markets to the products of British industry, but she is burdened in the struggle with America by, first, a primary railway freight about 25 per cent. higher; secondly, an extra railway freight of five per cent. on ballast; thirdly, a further extra freight on bags; fourthly, excessive handling; and fifthly, she brings into the English market an article inferior in appearance, though on the whole not much inferior in quality to the rival one. He urges the London merchants to take the matter up and use their influence with the Indian railway companies and merchants.

The Governor-General in Council has issued a resolution calling the attention of the provincial Administrations to the rules regarding the receipt of testimonials and addresses by public servants. He points out that officers are forbidden to receive addresses or testimonials, or to attend public meetings or entertainments held in their honour. Similar manifestations in the case of retired officers will be viewed with disfavour. It is not intended to prohibit farewell entertainments by an officer's personal friends, but they should be of a private, informal character. Officers are not forbidden to sit for a portrait or bust, provided these articles are not designed for presentation to themselves. The rules do not apply to the head of any government or administration.

Nawab Asman Jah, the new Prime Minister of Hyderabad, has arrived and taken up his duties. No durbar was held at his first audience of the Nizam, owing to the recent death of the young Prince. The administration will be conducted on the old lines. It is rumoured that the appointment of two chief secretaries to support the Minister will not be carried out, as he desires that there should be no change, at any rate, till he has tested the present system. The proposed change would have been unpopular.

An atrocious military murder is reported from Bangalore. The Native adjutant of the 12th Madras Infantry shot a Subahdar with a revolver and then fired at a Havildar Major, who escaped. The murderer then barricaded himself in his own quarters, where were his wife and two children and other female relations. The military authorities feared that any attempt to force an entrance might cause the death of the women, so they telegraphed to the Commander-in-Chief for orders. The reply was, "Try and take the murderer alive." Next morning three shots were heard in the house, and he called out that he had shot his wife. During the afternoon he let out the children and his mother-in-law, and then shot himself. The house was then forced, and the murderer and his wife were both found dead. It is believed that jealousy was the cause of the crime. Last year a private in the same regiment shot a Subahdar.

Probably the Viceroy and the Commander-in Chief will make tours of inspection along the whole of the north-west frontier during the autumn, but no plan has yet been decided upon.

M. Notovitch, special correspondent of the Novoe Vremya, who arrived in India a few days ago, will stay at Simla ten days, and then visit the important towns of Upper India, going afterwards to Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, and returning to Russia in three months' time, viâ Persia. He proposes to make a lengthened visit to India next year.

The Governor of Madras and his party while travelling last week near Bellary, where cholera is prevalent, were attacked with symptoms suggestive of that disease. They immediately left the locality, and have now quite recovered.

Great floods have occurred at Chanda, in the Central Provinces. The water reached in places over the walls of the town, and communication with the outer world was cut off for four days.

The trade and navigation reports for June compared with those for the same month of last year show a decrease in imports amounting to Rs. 14,97,250, and an increase in exports of Rs. 10,48,393. The result for the first three months of the financial year is an increase in both imports and exports, amounting in the former to Rs. 32,07,092, and in the latter to Rs. 46,14,632.

Sir Maxwell Melvill, a member of the Bombay Council, died last Friday from exhaustion after a severe attack of choleraic diarrhœa. His loss will be greatly felt in the Western Presidency.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

SIR M. E. GRANT DUFF.

(Times of India.)

Forgetting Sir Grant Duff, a past Governor of an Indian Presidency, and taking his address more as a light literary effusion, Ango-Indians will find in it much to amuse and interest them. It shows in striking manner the peculiar temperament of the author. Sir Grant Duff in a quiet country parish at home would have made a second and perhaps equally admirable White of Selborne His love of the varied animal and plant life around him in India seems to have been intense, and a source of unceasing delight. When he speaks of "the wealth of flowers which the possessor of ten Chateworths could hardly command in the sunless climate of England," and of the rolling downs of the Neilgherries with many "a forest dingle in which the eye may distinguish more shades of green than one who has not beheld them would believe to exist," his language becomes the language of enthusiasm, warm from the heart, and kindling to the imagination. Sir Grant Duff hardly thinks his countrymen in India make enough of the world of animal life by which they are surrounded, and in saying this he pays a warm tribute to "the powers of observation possessed by the author of that delightful book "Tribes on my Frontier," the ever fresh and ever delightful "Eha." Sir Grant Duff's impressions of the Indian climate are certainly widely different from those formed by the average Anglo-Indian. To him the climate of the plains behave "quite admirably" well, and he calls it "advisedly—a pleasure;" the mild summer climate of Ootacamund was not so congenial. If eccentricity makes a genius, Sir Grant Duff is certainly a genius – as to climate. All, however, will share his enthusiasm about the variety and surpassing beauty of the atmospheric effect in India, the magnificent afterglows seen in January looking westward from the Marina of Madras, and the loveliness of the terrace at Guindy under a full moon and of the nightly procession of the stars as seen from it. All of us also have, with him, a warm corner of the heart for "that admirable institution, the weekly European Mail," though too many will, unlike Sir Grant Duff, have to admit that our correspondence is largely of the "telegraphese" order. We can appreciate the humour of the picture of "one who has led the ordinary life of London and of the House of Commons finding himself surrounded by warriors all day and every day," and the genial kindliness of the tribute of friendship and praise to "my warriors" of the Madras Presidency.

SOCIAL PROGRESS.

(Indian Daily News.)

Solid as is the conservatism of India, it can scarcely be said to exceed that of China, which has held its own for thousands of years, only to yield at last to the influence of the West. There are not wanting signs that even India will yield at no distant date. The movement westward that has taken place this year will no doubt have the same effect, though perhaps in a less degree, as has influenced the Marquis Tseng. A number of Native Princes and Chiefs of a most orthodox character have ventured to set aside all prejudices, and have trusted themselves to cross the kalapani, and to run all the risks of being outcasted, not, perhaps, without some assurance that no penalties will be required of them, and if that fear be once overcome, the rest will follow. But the most remarkable feature in the case is that some of the visitors to the West have taken their wives with them. The Gaekwar of Baroda is accompanied by his Maharanee, who has announced that during her travels and her visit to Europe she will lay aside the purdah. If she does this, and is as strong a vessel as some of the weaker ones are, it will not be easy to induce her to resume it on her return to Baroda. Nothing short of an influence which would amount to a State necessity will induce her to forego the liberty she will have enjoyed, and she would soon be kept in countenance, as is the Marchioness of Tseng, by her countrymen in the adoption of social customs. The Maharani of Cooch Behar, of course, is free from the trammels of caste in this respect, and we have not heard that she has lost any of the modesty of grace of her sex by appearing without the veil. There is even a more striking example of the change that is coming over the spirit of seclusion. The Mahomedans are the most strict of the sectaries in this particular, and yet the wife or wives of the Khedive are either appearing, or have expressed their intention to appear, even in theatres and other public places, without that hideous covering to the face which is held to be essential in the Mahommedan community. There are evidences among the more enlightened of this country that they would like to introduce their families to more social life; but they say that it is not the ladies who are in fault or defect, but that the appreciation of woman in the abstract is so low among their countrymen, that they have not yet learnt the proper deference or respect that should be paid to a lady of their own race. This is a serious reflection upon them, but it is a defect which experience alone can remedy, and that experience will follow the examples to which we have now referred.

A POONA ROMANCE.

The Poona correspondent of the Pioneer tells the following romantic story, which has become a subject of inquiry in the Courts:—There has not been much going on in the Courts—only one case, which has some strange features about it. A Major Aflick died a couple of months ago, and the grave should cover up so paltry a tale of caprice and weakness as is now being told in the City Magistrate's Court. He had a somewhat questionable relationship with a young woman called Tessie, of the malli caste. The matter is no longer sub rosa, nor is her name a secret, as she has become the subject of a police-court case. It is stated she was purchased for Rs. 700; and Major Aflick, wishing doubtless to make what reparation he could, has bequeathed Tessie Rs. 5,000, to be invested so as to give her Rs. 25 a month. On the death of Major Aflick, Tessie continued to live on the premises until the property was disposed of, and then the executors, knowing that the girl could not return to her caste—she being a malin—interested the ladies of St. Mary's Home (a Roman Catholic institution) in her, and they undertook to afford her shelter and protection until some permanent arrangement was made. Things went well for a time, when suddenly the mother of Tessie, possibly with an eye to the Rs. 5,000, felt extraordinary yearnings towards her daughter, and formally demanded her from the ladies of St. Mary's. They said: "We will not detain her against her will; but, as she came to us at the request of Hari Rowji, one of the executors, and is unwilling to leave, we cannot send her away." The mother forthwith makes a complaint against the executors of the will, Mr. Vishnoo Ram Joshi and Mr. Ramaya Sayana, of the firm of Morgan and Balkrishna of auctioneering fame, charging them with "kidnapping" under Section 361 of the Penal Code, in that they took away Tessie from the lawful guardianship of the mother (Parwatie) without her consent. The case has been partially heard.

The evidence of the complainant, Parwatie, is that Tessie is thirteen years of age, that up to within ten months ago she was living with her, that on hearing she was in Major Aflick's house she obtained a warrant to search, did so, but found not Tessie. Sometime later Tessie turned up as part of the household, and apparently the mother then acquiesced, for she took no steps whatever to recover her daughter. She was, however, asked about the alleged sale, and her reply was that she never sold or gave away her daughter; and this statement was made probably to guard against an anticipated question that the circumstances of her acquiescence would naturally suggest. Tessie says that her mother objected at first to her going to St. Mary's Home, on the ground that she might be induced to become a Christian, but that she finally consented after cautioning her against taking that step. Next the Lady Superintendent of St. Mary's Home gave her evidence in a straightforward manner, asserting that the mother led her to understand that she was very glad that her daughter was in her charge; and she fell at the lady's feet, saying, "You are my mabap." The mother no doubt is justified in taking steps to recover possession of the girl; but it certainly does not appear that the accused persons are in any way guilty of the offence charged against them; and this is the view of the case likely to be taken by the Magistrate.

WANTED—A RAILWAY BOARD FOR INDIA.

(Calcutta Review.)

Railway rates have already become an important factor in the economic progress of India, and are destined as our railway system extends to become a burning question, involving interests of the greatest magnitude. It will add infinitely to the difficulty of dealing with such matters if we are found drifting along between one policy and another, as has been done for the last twenty years. As it is, no official, high or low, can rely for more than a twelvemonth at a time on what the Government intends to do with our railway system. We have at the present day railways made and worked by the State, railways made by the State and leased to companies, railways made by companies assisted and unassisted, and railways made by Native States. These are partly controlled by local Governments, and partly by the Government of India. Some lines in a province are controlled by the local administration, others by the Director-General of Railways, and some by the Government of India direct. This means that questions of rates and administration generally, on each, are subject to revision or alteration by either or all of these authorities, and in the case of guaranteed lines they are still further hedged in, and complicated by the need for reference to Board of Directors at home. The administration of our Indian railways is, in fact, nothing better than a patchwork system, exhibiting glaring contrasts of policy, and held together and made to cover our necessities only by incessant references and decisions by the Government. These decisions will, as already observed, and especially in the case of competing lines, involve large interests, and it is very doubtful whether the existing machinery for their satisfactory evolution at present exists. We have the appointment of a Director-General of Railways, which has not always been filled by an officer of wide railway experience, and whose proper duties, already heavy enough, are greatly, if not hopelessly, increased by his being at the same time a Deputy Secretary to Government. However zealous and able a man may fill this position, it is impossible that he can, with such a staff as he has at present, find time to examine and consider the information at hand, even if he can command the technical experience requisite for giving such advice to the Government as will carry due weight with railway companies or commercial men. The solution of this difficulty appears to lie in the establishment of a Railway Board for India, and though the impediments to this are by no means slight ones, it does not seem impossible to overcome them, and, at any rate, to give it a trial.

MAUNG PE, A DACOIT.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The subject of this sketch had a real existence. His name was Maung Pe—a name common enough in Burma. The Maung was the title used when he was our friend. His name was turned into Nga Pe when he became notorious in other ways. In person he was a strongly-made tallish Burman, always clean and neatly dressed. In face, he was good-looking, but cruel and determined. He was generally dressed in a padded coat, and never separated from splendid dah with a very indifferent sheath. He had an affection for a gun, and took great interest in arms of all sorts. I believe he just came into prominence through being suspected—a suspicion which was a moral certainty—of being one of the heads of a band of dacoits that had some years before the end of 1885 murdered the Woon of one of the districts bordering on our old frontier, at the instigation of a higher official who wanted to get a relation of his put in—a project in which he succeeded. Maung Pe kept quiet on the frontier until it was all blown over; and at the time I first met him he had been living quietly in Lower Burma for some time when they had nothing against him.

Guides being wanted for an expedition going across the frontier at the same time as the main expedition was going up the river, the Assistant Commissioner unearthed this man, who fulfilled the necessary qualification of knowing the roads beyond the frontier. How he had acquired that knowledge we did not know. He had it, and that was all we cared about. The man who brought him had to stand a good deal of chaff about him, as he was generally called ——'s dacoit;——being the Assistant Commissioner. We always kept a sharp look-out on our friend; we did not quite trust him; but as long as he was with us he appeared to justify ———'s confidence, and was a most useful scout, &c.

On one occasion he amused and astonished us. A band of bad characters from Lower Burma took to looting on their own account, and fifty of them were captured. We proceeded to search them, and rather flattered ourselves that we were doing very well, when our friend came on the scene to assist. His mode of searching was a very fine art He turned everything inside out in an incredible manner. They could hide nothing from him. He took in hand men we had already searched, and found all sorts of things they had successfully concealed from us. We had our fight, and settled down in a town we had occupied for some time. He remained and assisted in a variety of ways, helping to bring dacoits to justice. The district settled down—a calm before a storm—and he departed to his friends in Lower Burma. He, however, had not passed away altogether.

Some time afterwards the general disturbance spread to our district, and we heard from a neighbouring district that our friend had started business as a dacoit leader with a fair-sized band under him. For some time he did nothing very extraordinary, but he worked in conjunction with other large bands, and was heard of in various places, looting villages, &c. One morning early, before it was light, he made an attack with a few men on the Assistant Commissioner and a few sepoys, but did no harm, and got away without receiving any; though some of the Burman's with our party ran away and spread a report that the Assistant Commissioner had been killed; and the Assistant Commissioner's servant, who disapproved of fighting sought a safe place under a cart and got run over. For some time Maung Pe avoided our men, but his punishment was to come. One morning at daylight he woke in fancied security to find his stockaded village surrounded by the hated soldiers. He was at the zenith of his fame: he had eigthy men under him and a reward on his head. His experience of what rifles could do with us deterred him from trying to break the cordon. After waiting a couple of hours for reinforcements during which time a desultory fight was kept up, the sergeant, the officer being wounded, gathered some of his men together, charged in the village, and the band of dacoits was annihilated. Among the killed, shot through the head, probably early in the day, was the leader—our former quiet Maung Pe.

GOVERNMENT WARDS ESTATES.

(Pioneer.)

When the Indian Government and their local representatives in the various Provinces undertake to manage the estate of a minor or a lunatic or a spendthrift, their inspiration is properly rather fiscal than philanthropic. To render the revenue secure was the consideration that led in the first instance to the establishment of Courts of Wards, and though the function of these Courts has since come to be interpreted in a larger sense, so as to include the training of the ward, the prosperity of the dwellers on his estate, and the general improvement of the land, the wider responsibility can hardly be justified unless its acceptance be an cillary, if not subservient, to the original purpose. Even then there are other circumstances to be taken into account. The time which Government officials have to devote to this sort of work is necessarily limited, and if estates are hopelessly encumbered, it may be better policy to decline interference. As a general rule, therefore, many would say no estate should be managed by Government for its owner unless the latter can be prevented from making away with the profits of improved management, and unless there is a prospect of encumbrances being cleared off within a reasonable time. Neither of these conditions seems to be present in the case of many estates managed by Government agency in the Central Provinces. In a Resolution just issued on the subject by the Local Government, the Chief Commissioner states that in several cases proprietors have been incurring new liabilities, whilst the officers of the Government have been endeavouring to free them from past indebtedness. There is no legal basis for the management of their estates by Government. They were simply surrendered by their owners to the Deputy Commissioner until their debts should be paid; but there is nothing to prevent the owners incurring fresh liabilities, the Government Wards Act, which grants such a power, not having come into operation over the whole Provinces till last year. The Chief Commissioner remarks that he can see no reason why Government should continue to manage estates, the owners of which are frustrating its efforts in this fashion. No more can anybody else except the owners themselves. The only wonder is why things have remained in this state so long. What Mr. Mackenzie now advises should be done without delay; the option should be given to the proprietors in all cases when the estate has been taken over on account of indebtedness of taking back their estate or applying formally for a declaration of disqualification under the Government Wards Act. There are, again, several cases when there is strong reason to believe that Deputy Commissioners have not shown sufficient discrimination in taking over the charge of estates. For example, the Etawah estate has been six years under management, yet its debt has not yet been reduced by one-sixth, and it will take at least seventeen years to clear it. Obviously if estates in this condition are to be taken over, there will be no end to the burdens of district officers. No doubt ready assistance to old Provincial families increases in a certain sense the popularity of the Government; but this is too dearly bought if it fosters a disposition in extravagant proprietors to regard Government interference as a matter of course, and a conviction that the squanderings of years will be made up in the end, if only they submit to the moderate restraint of the Court of Wards. Mr. Mackenzie has one more fault to find with the present administration of Wards Estates, and it is one which demands serious attention, as it may not improbably be existent in another part of India besides the Central Provinces. Some years ago there was an outcry that the rents on Wards Estates were realised with too little sympathy and consideration, and Mr. Phillips, in his recent work on Indian Administration, speaks of there being occasionally, "excessive rigidity and punctuality of collection in unfavourable seasons." In the Central Provinces at least the pendulum has swung round in the opposite direction with a vengeance. The total rental demand for the whole body of estates was Rs.12,34,000, and the collections amounted to only Rs. 9,63,000, leaving a balance of Rs. 2,71,000 (equal to 22 per cent. on the demand). Of this no less than Rs. 1,30,000, or 13 per cent. on the demand is shown on account of the current year. No wonder the Chief Commissioner feels compelled to remark that these results are by no means creditable to the management.

BENGAL.

OWING to the want of funds, the proposed scheme for establishing experimental technical institutions in Calcutta or in the Mofussil by the Education Department is to be reserved for the next official year.

OF the 197 Covenanted Civil Servants and officers in the non-Regulating Commission under the Government of Bengal, thirty-six are at present absent on furlough, and three more have lately been granted furlough, which consumes the whole number of furloughs allowed. In July, August and September six Civilians are expected to return, so that this number of furloughs will probably be available by the 1st of October.

THE thanks of the Lieutenant-Govenor of Bengal have been given in the Calcutta Gazette to Babu Haro Chandra Chaudhuri, a zemindar of Sherpur in the Mymensing district, for a contribution of Rs. 100 a month towards the maintenance of the Sherpur Victoria Academy, which, in commemoration of the Jubilee, has been raised from a middle-class English-school to a high-class. The Babu has also made a donation of Rs. 900 to improve the accommodation of the school.

AMONG the various matters discussed at the Silk Conference held in Calcutta in March last under the auspices of the Government of Bengal, one question concerned the importation of an expert from France to make a thorough investigation into the disease prevailing among silkworms in Bengal, and to teach the native rearers to breed their worms on healthier and cleaner principles than at present obtain among the people engaged in the industry. The matter has been so far settled that arrangements are being made to engage in France—with the assistance of M. Natal s Randot, President of the Lyons Chamber of Commerce, and a high authority on sericulture in that country—the services of an expert, whose engagement would be for one year to begin with. The Governments of Bengal and India and the European commercial community interested in the silk industry in Bengal will, between them, defray the expenses of the expert, and it is estimated that the expenditure, which will include the erection of rearing sheds, purchase of seeds, &c., will amount to something like Rs. 20,000.

MADRAS.

THE Southern India Rifle Association meeting commences on the 1st of September.

IT is reported that the Maharaja of Mysore contemplates making a tour in Northern India during the ensuing cold weather. His Highness will leave the Province about the middle of December, and be absent about two months.

A PROPOSAL which has been under discussion in Madras since 1884 is at last about to be carried out. This is the establishment in Madras of a school for the sons and relatives of Native chiefs and zemindars. The scheme which has now been settled will cost about Rs. 2,500 per month.

THE South of India Observer says that another pest to the planter has cropped up. This is a caterpillar which attacks tea plants in clusters of half a dozen and a dozen, and gradually eats all the leaves upon them. When no more remain, they go on to the next bush, until they clear the whole row. Twenty children bring in about half a maund of these insects twice a day; but three days after they have been picked off others are to be found in equally large numbers.

THE Ootacamund paper learns that the crop of coffee recently gathered in Mysore has not been such a large one as was expected. When plants were in full bearing, it was thought the crop would be superior in quantity to those of past years; but after the curing it was found that the supplies were short. It would appear that in certain parts of the district rain did not fall, and that the plants in full bearing were not adequately supplied with moisture, and hence the decrease in the outturn. It is, however, stated that the result of the season is not unfavourable, being a fair average one, but that there has not been what are called "bumper crops" on most estates.

THE officials of the Madras High Court have been alarmed by a report that, on the recommendation of the Finance Committee, their salaries are to be considerably reduced. The salary of the Advocate-General is to be cut down from Rs. 2,200 to Rs 1,800, that of the Government Solicitor from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 750, and that the Government pleader from Rs. 500 to Rs. 250. The appointment of Clerk of the Crown is to be abolished, as also his office establishment, with the exception of one clerk on Rs. 30 a month, who is to be attached to the Registration Office. One of the deputy registrars will have to do the work in Court of the Clerk of the Crown.

BOMBAY.

THE following Political appointments have been notified:—Captain W. P. Kennedy to act as Second Assistant to the Political Agent, Kathiawar, during the absence of Captain W. B. Ferris; Captain L. C. Fenton to act as Third Assistant to the Political Agent, Kathiawar, in addition to his other duties, during the absence of Mr. P. S. V. Fitzgerald; and Lieutenant G. M. Schneider to act as Fourth Assistant to the Political Agent, Kathiawar.

SURGEON-MAJOR R. BOUSTEAD, Indian Medical Service, has been appointed Civil Surgeon, Ahmednuggur, on the retirement of Surgeon-Major R. H. Batty; Surgeon Major J. Davidson to act as Civil Surgeon, Belgaum, during the absence of Surgeon-Major D. E. Hughes; and Surgeon Milne to act as Civil Surgeon, Ahmedabad, during the absence of Surgeon Major Robb.

MR. GIBSON, of the Forest Department, who for the past two months has been lying in the European General Hospital suffering from wounds inflicted by a wounded tiger, died July 16.

A VESSEL from Tasmania has arrived in Bombay, bringing some boxes of apples as ballast. The apples are quite sound and of good quality. The possibility of bringing apples to India from that part of the world being ascertained, it is likely that someone will know how to turn it to account.

Ahmedabad has been the scene of another unfortunate accident—if accident it be—in which a Native has been shot by a British soldier. An affair of the same kind occurred in the early part of the year, the only difference being that whereas in the latter instance the careless use of the rifle produced fatal results, in the more recent case the victim is still living. It appears that three or four European soldiers were out shikarring about seven kos from the city, when one of them had the misfortune to shoot a Native in a field. The soldiers aver that it was a pure accident, but the Natives stoutly assert that the man was deliberately shot, because he remonstrated with them against shooting a peacock. Whatever may be the verities of the affair, the truth will have to be sifted by court-martial, as was done in the case which occurred some months ago in the same neighbourhood.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Captain C. H. Purvis, 17th Lancers, has been granted an extension of leave to October 1, 1887, on or about which date he will probably be required to take over the Adjutancy of the Lanarkshire Yeomanry Cavalry.

Major E. A. Brind, Deputy Assistant Adjutant General, Rohilkhand District, has been permitted to resign his Staff appointment in view of taking up the command of the 1st Batt. Connaught Rangers. Major J. C. R. Glasgow, Brigade-Major, Cawnpore, has been transferred to Bareilly as Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, vice Major Brind; and Captain E. O. F. Hamilton, 2nd Queen's, succeeds Major Glasgow as Brigade-Major, Cawnpore.

Captain F. S. H. Rickards, Connaught Rangers, has been posted to the 1 t Battalion of his regiment.

Captain H. H. Hart, R.E., is transferred from the Bareilly Division, Military W rks, to the Agra Division.

The following appointments have been made:—

4th Bengal Cavalry.—Lieutenant G. de S. Barrow, attached to the regiment, to be Squadron Officer, vice Lieutenant G. Browne removed.

15th Sikhs.—Lieutenant Cole, attached to the regiment, to be permanent Wing Officer, vice Lieutenant H. Trevor, seconded.

16th Bengal Infantry.—Lieutenant-Colonel A. L E. H. Holmes to be Commandant, vice Colonel J. C. Minto, vacated; Major W. M. Meacham, Wing Commander, to be Second in Command; and Captain A. Montanaro to be Wing Commander.

27th Punjab Infantry.—Lieutenant B. Strachey, West Riding Regiment, to be officiating Wing Officer, on probation.

24th Pioneers.—Captain D. W. Hickman, 1st Bengal Infantry, to be senior Wing Officer.

43rd Gurkha Light Infantry—Lieutenant-Colonel C. McD. Skene, Wing Commander, to be second in Command, vice Major G. W. Beresford, retired; Captain F. C. N. Goldney to be Wing Commander and to remain seconded; and Captain A. L. Barrett to be Wing Commander, sub pro tem., vice Captain Goldney.

4th Sikhs.—Lieutenant-Colonel J. E. P. Moseley, 3 d Sikhs, to be Second in Command, vice Lieutenant Colonel V. Rivaz.

2nd Punjab Infantry.—Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. Turner, Second in Command, to be Commandant, vice Colonel W. C. Chowne vacated; Lieutenant-Colonel W. C. Ramsden to be Second in Command; and Captain R. R. N. Sturt to be Wing Commander.

The personal of the N.W.P. Remount Committee, which meets on the 1st October next, is likely to be much the same as last year.

The India United Service Institution has decided that the Volunteers shall in future be represented on the Council by an officer of the force. The subject of the Institution's gold medal essay for 1887 has been recently announced; it is the well-worn but important theme of Infantry tactics and their probable future development under the fire of the repeating rifle and the machine gun.

Fifty Lee-Burton and fifty improved Lee magazine rifles were sent to the country last month from England for trial and report as to their suitability for the army in the matters of convenience in handling, ease in loading, the best form of magazine and some other points. They were distributed to four stations—Quetta, Meerut, Allahabad and Dum Dum—and were exhaustively tested in accordance with printed instructions by selected men. The result of these trials is that the Lee-Burton is condemned as being inferior in many ways to the improved Lee, and that the latter, although a handier weapon and superior in the matter of loading with and without a magazine, is considered altogether too heavy; and being after all merely a magazine and not a repeating rifle, is on the whole considered not a good enough weapon to which to commit the army for the next twenty years. Very successful experiments have been made with a much smaller calibre than the Lee or Lee-Burton rifles, so the chances are in favour of a weapon very much like the Lee in respect to action and magazine with a bullet in calibre not much over ·300. This, while involving less accuracy at long ranges, will at any rate enable the soldier to carry 120 rounds, thus solving to a great extent the difficult question of the issue of the first reserve of ammunition under fire.

The following further decisions in connection with the Leave Rules for the Staff have been published in an Army Circular, July 4:—

1. Officers who may have entered Civil employment after the 30th June, 1886, and before the 1st July, 1887, without having elected the leave rules for the Staff Corps, will be entitled, on reverting to military duty, to elect them under the conditions laid down in the 3rd Clause of Rule VII.

II. Officers who may have entered Civil employment after the 30th June 1886, having previously elected the leave rules for the Staff Corps, and officers who may have entered the Staff Corps under those rules and subsequently taken Civil employment, will be absolutely under the rules of the Civil Leave Code so long as they remain in Civil employment, but on reverting to military duty within ten years of their entry into Civil employment as allowed under G.G.O. No. 135 of 1884, they will again come under the leave rules for the Staff Corps.

III. Officers struck off the effective list of the Army, under the provisions of G.G O. No. 135 of 1884, after ten years' absence from military duty, cannot elect or revert to the leave rules for the Staff Corps, except for the purpose of immediate retirement with the advantage of counting all leave as service for pension, as provided for in decision No. 1 of Clause 113, India Army Circulars, 1886.

THE latest intelligence from the West Coast of Africa gives no confirmation of the reported death of Mr. H. M. Stanley, but direct news is shortly expected at Boma of the progress of the expedition towards the interior.

LORD SALISBURY has visited Norwich for the second time, and received addresses from a large number of Conservative Associations. He enforced the necessity of being always prepared for a General Election; meanwhile the organisations would be valuable as a means of putting down the misrepresentations circulated by their opponents. The earnest thoughts of the Government would be devoted to the consideration of any possible means of alleviating the difficulties under which agriculture suffered. As those difficulties arose suddenly it was probable that they would not endure, but would disappear as suddenly.

RUSSIAN INTRIGUES IN CENTRAL ASIA.

The Chief Afghan refugee, employed by the Russians to work political intrigues in Badakshan, Chitral, and even Swat appears to be, from Afghan accounts which have reached Lahore, one Omra Khan, an inhabitant of Badakshan, who has now resided for years at Kolab, in Bokhara, under Russian patronage. He was once sent by the Amir of Bokhara on a mission to the Court of Persia, and passed through India; making an apparently friendly acquaintance with English officials at Peshawar. He also stayed some time at Ajmere, and made a pilgrimage to Mecca. He is said to have lately been joined at Kolab by another important refugee from Afghanistan—one Shah Aga—who, originally an inhabitant of Kolab, was invited years ago across the frontier by the Amir Sher Ali, and granted a subsidy and a grant of land near Chiab, where he and his followers formed six villages. Under Abdur Rahman, however, Shah Aga appears to have found residence in Badakshan neither safe nor comfortable; and after going to Kolab, he sent thence, on Omra Khan's advice, for the rest of his tribe. Hearing this, the Afghan Governor, Abdulla Jan, sent an agent to dissuade the tribe from leaving. They, however, wounded the agent, and started for Kolab, pursued by troops despatched from Faizabad for their capture. Only four men and three women were, however, taken and sent back prisoners through Faizabad to Kabul. The rest escaped across the Oxus to Kolab, where they will be ready tools in the hand of Russia for causing trouble in Badakshan. These events are alleged to have taken place about a month ago.

THE military authorities (says the Pioneer) have a constantly recurring difficulty before them in the matter of inducing young and suitable officers to join the Commissariat Department. Circulars have been issued to divisions and corps with the object of beating up recruits for the Commissariat, but have gone forth without avail. The fact of the matter is regimental officers continue to be unwilling to undertake the serious responsibilities and heavy work entailed on Commissariat officers, because the inducements are insufficient. Endeavours have been made to render the department more attractive to outsiders by improvements in the designations of its officers; assimilation of the department to the general staff; a change of uniform, and a reconstruction of the various grades of the department—but the results of these changes are unsatisfactory. It may be said that one essential means of securing good officers for the Commissariat remains untried, and that is in the matter of emolument of the junior grades. The Commissariat has the reputation of being a well paid Department, and this is true enough as regards its higher grades; but in its lower appointments, in which young officers joining have to remain for a considerable portion of their service, the case is otherwise, and it seems clear that the staff pay of the lowest grades of the Commissariat Department, viz., Rs. 200 and 300 per mensem, in addition to pay of rank, is insufficient to tempt regimental officers to come forward and fill up its vacancies when they consider the length of time they must spend in receipt of this moderate staff pay. It is not worth a young regimental officer's while to throw up the chances of Army Staff employ on attaining the rank of captain, in which Rs. 400 a month is the lowest staff pay obtainable by a brigade major, in order to saddle himself with the responsibilities and hard work of a Commissariat officer. There is an old saying that "a good Commissariat officer is worth half an army corps," but what is so valuable must, of course, be paid for. The Commissariat Department is, after all, a small one. It requires only some three officers yearly to fill up the vacancies in Bengal, and these recruits would be easily enough found were sufficient inducement forthcoming.

THE Bombay Undergraduates' Association are preparing a protest against the recent resolution of Government, abolishing free studentships and disqualifying matriculated students from subordinate appointments.

A SINGULAR case of kidnapping of a European child from the railway quarters has occurred at Lahore. A woman servant, lately employed by a Mr. Snelleks, an engine-driver, carried off his little girl, a year old, to her village, where she sold her to another party. The police have traced and recovered the child, and arrested the parties implicated.

AN irascible and eccentric old gentleman, who has just died at Melun, in the department of Seine-et-Marne, France, has bequeathed all his fortune, amounting to about £24,000 sterling, to the German Crown Prince. It appears that the testator was revoked from the office of rural mayor for having fired at and wounded a workman in his employment who was pressing him for money. He was also condemned to twelve months' imprisonment, but as President Grévy did not order him to be liberated on July 14, the occasion of the national fête, he altered his will, under which he had made the Government his sole legatee, and became so excited against his countrymen that congestion of the brain set in and he died. The money is left to the Crown Prince, as representing Germany, on the condition that his Imperial Highness establishes a Teutonic colony on a certain specified portion of the testator's landed estate.

THE LOSS OF THE P. AND O. STEAMER "TASMANIA."

The Board of Trade inquiry into the stranding of the P. and O. Company's steamer Tasmania, which was wrecked in the Straits of Bonifacio on April 17, has been continued by Mr. Rothery, Q.C., wreck commissioner, and assessors, viz., Captain Castle, Captain Parfitt, Admiral Moresby, and Captain Harland. The counsel engaged in the case were Dr. Raikes and Mr. Baden-Powell, for the Solicitor to the Board of Trade; Mr. C. Hall, Q.C., and Mr. Mansel Jones, for the P. and O. Company; and Mr. Philip Myburgh, Q.C., and Mr. Howard Smith for the officers of the Tasmania.

The case for the Board of Trade was concluded on the 30th ult. It will be remembered that the first inquiry had reached this stage when it abruptly terminated in consequence of the death of one of the assessors.

On the 1st inst. Mr. Hall called Captain Angove, the P. and O. Company's marine superintendent, who produced the drawings of the Tasmania showing the details of her construction. He stated that she was nearly a new vessel, being only two years old, and was fitted with all modern improvements. Her value at the time of her loss was about £120,000. The company were their own insurers. The ship had six watertight bulkheads, all up to the main deck, and so strongly was she built that she was still hanging together on the rocks. The total cubical contents of her boats was largely in excess of the Board of Trade requirements. She was also provided with 155 lifebelts, one being hung up over each berth. In addition to these lifebelts for the passengers there were twelve lifebelts for each lifeboat, one for each thwart; and there were also twelve lifebuoys on deck. Of the six officers of the vessel four held master's certificates, and one of the four held an extra master's certificate. Witness was a master mariner, and had had great experience in the P. and O. Company's service. What is your opinion of a Lascar crew such as the Tasmania had?—I think they are very good. I prefer them to Europeans for our special work. We have a larger number than if we had Europeans. Are they amenable to discipline?—They are, and never refuse duty. We generally have 600 or 700 of them in the port of London, and we never have any trouble with them. Mr. Hall: I do not want to take away the character of English sailors, but do you find that when you are in London Lascars do not go ashore and drink? Witness: No, they do not. We always find them very sober. In answer to the Commissioner, the witness said that he had been through the Straits of Bonifacio a number of times, but he did not believe that he ever steered a course such as the Tasmania was stated to have steered. Captain Perrins, the master of the Tasmania, was an officer in whom he had perfect confidence. He was a most careful and smart man, and witness had no reason to believe that he would steer a course which witness would not consider a safe course.

Captain Burkitt, engaged in the British India Steamship Company's service, said that for the last ten years he had been running between London and Calcutta and other Eastern ports with Lascar crews. He always found them good and reliable sailors, especially having regard to the nature of the service in which they were employed. He had also found them to behave equally well in cold climates; they seemed to bear the cold very well. In a ship of 4,000 tons manned by Lascars he would consider eight Europeans—six quartermasters, a boatswain, and a gunner—quite sufficient in addition to the officers.—The Commissioner: Are Lascars good boatmen? Witness: Very good.—They are not quite so strong as Europeans? Not quite; but we have a few more of them.—Just so. You do not consider them quite so good as Europeans? Not quite.

Captain Hutchinson, marine superintendent to the British India Steam Navigation Company, stated that from 1869 to 1882 he sailed with Lascar crews. He always found them to behave well. On two occasions he had the misfortune to get ashore, and on both occasions the Lascars did exceedingly well. He once experienced very bad weather in the Bay of Bengal, when his vessel was in great danger for nearly a week, being at the time some 600 miles from land. The Lascars then did what was required of them efficiently and with success, the ship being brought safely to port under canvas. On another occasion he was the junior officer of a vessel that broke down at the entrance to the Persian Gulf, and he had to go ashore for assistance. His boat was manned by eight Lascars, who then pulled a distance of a hundred miles. He did not believe that Europeans could have rowed that distance, owing to the excessive heat. The Lascars rowed both night and day.—Did your company take to employing European crews at one time instead of Lascars? Yes; they tried it for six or nine months in about six ships, but they went back to Lascars.—Did they find that on the whole Lascars were preferable to Europeans? Yes; and more reliable. Man for man, the wages of Lascars are lower than those paid to Europeans, but for a whole crew the wages are about the same.

Captain Beer, of the "Clan" line of steamers, said that he had had very considerable experience with Lascar crews. He liked them very much, and preferred them to Europeans. They were able to stand longer hours than Europeans, and could work longer without food and without rest. He had been at Glasgow in the depth of winter, with the deck covered with snow and ice; even then he found the Lascars to work and behave well. Of course, they felt the cold, but they worked all the same.—Captain Marr, of the "Anchor" line of steamers, trading to Calcutta, gave evidence to a similar effect.—Robert Leslie, the chief engineer of the Tasmania, stated that the men who died on deck after the stranding were Seedie boys and Portuguese, and not Lascars.

Mr. Myburgh called Captain Hull, late of the Hydrographer's Department at the Admiralty, who stated that he had marked off on the chart the courses stated by the second officer to have been steered by the Tasmania. If these courses were actually steered the vessel ought to have passed from a mile and a third to a mile and a half to the southward of Monachi rocks. On these courses she would be within the area over which Cape Feno light was visible for a distance of over two miles. There was not the least danger in a vessel getting within the range of Cape Feno light so long as Cape Pertusato and Cape Feno lights were kept open. From what witness had heard of the evidence in this case there was nothing in the state of the weather to lead the captain to suppose that Cape Feno light would be obscured.

Mr. Hall then addressed the Court on behalf of the P. and O. Company, and said it had not been suggested throughout the inquiry that when the vessel left India on this voyage she was otherwise than perfectly and thoroughly equipped. Her boat accommodation was largely in excess of the requirements of the Board of Trade, and, in addition to a number of lifebuoys on deck, a lifebelt was provided for each of the 144 passengers on board. The only question raised with regard to the officers of the vessel was as to whether the captain was not more or less incapacitated by ill-health. But the suggestion that Captain Perrins's health was such as to unfit him for his duties was absolutely disproved by the evidence, and he (Mr. Hall) doubted very much whether any vessel ever left this country on a voyage to India and back which, so far as her owners were concerned, was better officered than was the Tasmania. As to the crew, the evidence was that it was composed of fifty-five Europeans and 105 natives, forty of the latter being deck hands. It had been suggested that a Lascar crew was not a proper crew for such a vessel as the Tasmania, but not a single scrap of evidence had been adduced in support of the suggestion. If there had been any ground for the contention the Board of Trade could have called masters of vessels to prove that Lascars were not reliable or that they were not fit to man large vessels of this class. The evidence before the Court showed beyond all doubt that the Lascars on board the Tasmania did their duty, and did it well. The suggestion that Lascars were employed in order to save money was now shown to be entirely without foundation. As a matter of fact, he believed that Lascars were slightly more expensive than European crews. He also contended that the allegations which had been made as to looting having taken place on board the Tasmania after the stranding were now seen to be utterly groundless.

On the 2nd inst. Mr. Myburgh addressed the Court on behalf of the officers of the Tasmania, urging the extreme improbability of Fagg's evidence being correct. The second officer had denied that he concealed from the captain anything as to the course steered, and he ought to be believed by the Court. Fagg had not said anything until this second inquiry about the second officer's having told him to let the ship come to so gently that the captain would not notice it, and he had not said so to the P. and O. Company nor to the Board of Trade officials before. He had not even hinted at such a thing. From the time the captain went below the vessel was in the charge of Mr. Curtis. He had to keep the course which, according to instructions left by the captain, was to be kept, and to see that currents were provided against, and he seemed to have been alive to the necessity for looking out for the Feno light, although not expecting to come within the range of it. Was it probable that an officer of such rank in the Peninsular and Oriental service, knowing that he was not clear of the land, would be so reckless as to be away from his post at the critical moment? The Court could place implicit reliance upon what Mr. Watkins said, and he said that he had never known Mr. Curtis to go off the bridge before he was relieved. Was he, then, likely to have left the bridge for the sake of two or three minutes' extra rest? If Mr. Curtis had left his post would not Fagg have mentioned it among his brother seamen? Would it not have been a subject of conversation among them? And then it would have been their bounden duty to mention it to the Board of Trade and the captain. As to the course set by Captain Perrins being a right one, he set a course which he considered would take him clear of the Monachi Rocks, and if he had intended to alter that course he would, no doubt, have given instructions to call him at a certain hour. But he intended it to be the final course, and the question was—Was it too fine a course? There was evidence that the current took the ship one and a-third mile out of her course, and ought allowance to have been made for that? This was not a sailing but a powerful steam vessel; she had gone through these straits before, and there was no reason for such a current to be expected, for it was usual for a heavy current to be preceded by wind. It was not so on this occasion, and, therefore, that ought not to be laid to Captain Perrins's charge. The cause of the disaster was unquestionably the abnormal set of the current. Fine as the course might have been, Captain Perrins was justified in setting it at the time. With regard to the behaviour of Mr. Watkins, that had been most exemplary throughout. So far as the officers were concerned every proper discipline was observed in regard to the manning and lowering of the boats

Dr. Raikes said that as far as the selection of the officers of the Tasmania was concerned nothing could be said against the P. and O. Company. The Court might disabuse their minds of the idea that Captain Perrins was in such a state of health as to be unfitted for the command of the vessel. The law allowed vessels to be manned by Lascar crews, but Europeans were relied upon for a backbone. The question was whether there was a sufficient proportion of Europeans among the crew. The regulations for boat drill had not been carried out in full detail. With regard to currents preceding wind in the Mediterranean, one would think it would be a matter of common knowledge that there was a liability to encounter surface currents there. Among the points on which the Board of Trade desired the opinion of the Court was the one whether it was justifiable to leave the officer in charge with a chart which had not the Monachi Rocks marked. The greater part of the loss of life among the Lascar seamen no doubt occurred from their being exposed on deck to the weather throughout the night.

The Wreck Commissioner said that the Court desired some time to consider its judgment, which would be delivered on the 8th inst.

LETTERS FROM IRELAND.*

An attentive perusal of letters from Ireland is calculated to cause much searching of heart on the part of those who prefer to advocate "Home Rule" as a cure for all the ills that Erin's flesh is heir to. A few quotations taken more or less at random will serve to make good this contention :—

"As to the desire for Home Rule it is generally admitted that the people care nothing for it, and only want the land." This is a somewhat discouraging opening of the campaign. But supposing a Home Rule Bill were passed through Parliament, what then? "Parnell would very likely seize the opportunity to retire into private life, having got what he had promised. If not he would be swept away by more extreme men. We should have them coming over in shoals; the country would be bankrupt; and it would be simply pandemonium."

What a truly inspiriting prospect! And this is to be the outcome of a policy of peace and persuasion!

"There can be no material change for the better without the suppression of the National League and the re-enactment in a perpetual form, applicable if possible to the entire kingdom, of the more useful provisions of the Crimes Act!" What! the Crimes Act to be perpetual! And yet does not the prophet of disruption, wtih the civilised world at his back, proclaim at every railway station in the United Kingdom that such an eventuality is a wile of the Evil One as represented by a Tory Ministry?

"A landlord was greatly astonished one morning to receive a round robin, signed in the names of his tenants, professing their utter inability to pay the half-year's rent which he had already received." The League had put pressure on these hapless wights, who, fearful to avow that they had squared accounts with their landlord, had no alternative but to sign the bewildering document, and throw dust in the eyes of those who tyrannised over them. Truly this looks as if the tenants were poor and destitute—and, indeed, their financial distress may be gathered from the fact, that in one district a small shopkeeper having received from her landlord some tea at 2s. a pound took it back in great distress of mind, saying "that her customers would never buy such a coarse leaf; in fact, they will have none but the finest China tea at 3s. and 3s. 6d. a pound!"

"At one meeting of the Clifden Board a guardian was assaulted, kicked, and pelted with ink-bottles by some fellow-members of the board." A pretty way to do business! Yet, forsooth, these are the people to whom an aged penitent would hand over the destinies of Ireland's citizens. Would that he might be tempted to read these admirable letters; but as he never looks at the Times, and, if public report be true, is never allowed to catch a glimpse of any work which does not coincide with his own views—or rather, to be critical and accurate, with his views of the moment—it is to be feared this admirable volume is destined to be read by none of the civilised world who are ranged under the banner of Separation and National Ruin.

WONDERFUL NESTS.†

How little the ordinary public know of the ordinary everyday doings in the world of creation Who, for instance, amongst the general uninformed portion of the community know that the common harvest mouse lives largely upon insects, especially flies, to catch which it displays the most extraordinary agility! Do many people, again, understand that squirrels build two nests, one for winter, the other for summer; the former placed in the foot of a tree, to secure protection and avoid detection, the latter a frail construction, located near the extremities of slender boughs, where it is patent to every passer-by, but, owing to its situation, is absolutely impregnable?

It is barely possible that some persons may have heard of the "Tailor Bird," which constructs nests by sewing together leaves, just as a human being would do in like circumstances; but not one in a hundred, we venture to assert, ever supposed that there is in Australia a "Honey Eater," which builds a complete and perfect hammock, on the identical principles which regulate the construction by man of those comfortable and luxurious indulgencies.

Yet another illustration, and the list shall be closed. There is in America, that land of wonders, a "Hermit" bird, which inhabits a zone that is never less than 12,000, and sometimes as much as 16,000, feet above the level of the sea, the line where perpetual snow begins. How can such delicate tiny creatures exist amidst such scenes of desolation and cold?

Such are a few of the wonderful facts which are crowded together in Mr. Wood's "Wonderful Nests," a work which should be read by all who take an interest in the wonders of the world in which they live. Concise, interesting, accurate, replete with admirable illustrations, there is little room for improvement, and the work will doubtless command an immense and well-deserved circulation.

THE INDIAN MAGAZINE.

The Indian Magazine for August, 1887 (London: Kegan Paul. Bristol: Arrowsmith), contains, besides a reprint of the Queen-Empress's Jubilee Letter to Her People, an account of the opening of the Imperial Institute, and a Paper on Kattywar (or Saurashtra), by Mr. J. Jardine, of the Bombay Civil Service, who passed a considerable portion of his early service in this very interesting province. If Mr. Jardine has nothing absolutely new to say, his sketch of the country and of its history is, nevertheless, well worth reading. Sir William Muir justly puts in his claim to be the originator of Her Majesty's Indian title, Kaiser-i-Hind, in the debates on which the present Parliamentary Opposition commenced, under their present leader, the system of obstruction of the entire business of the nation, in order to keep themselves constantly en evidence, which they have now brought to the rank of a science. Mr. A. Rodgers, late of the Bombay Council, contributes a spirited translation of Bidpay's well-known fable of the lion whose prime minister and eventual successor was a tiger. The burning question of "woman" is referred to, not only as regards the hard case of Rukhmabai (which, as we are glad to hear, will, if needful, be brought on appeal before the Privy Council), but in the report of a very sensible (and readable) lecture by Professor Satianadhan, of the College at Kombakonum. He justly complains of many of his compatriots, whose zeal for the cause of female education may induce them to "give elaborate lectures" on it, that "when it comes to teaching their own wives, daughters, or sisters to read or write zeal or eloquence seems to vanish." The number contains more than the average amount of matter. May we hope that it is not hypercritical to say that inaccuracy in writing names—not Oriental, with which, Inshallah, we shall not venture to interfere—has more than once struck us? The distinguished and versatile composer of the Ode sung at the laying of the foundation-stone of the Imperial Institute is no longer, we are glad to know, Mr. Arthur Sullivan; the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is Sir S. Bayley (not Bayly), and the able civilian who so well administered the Benares Division during the fearful time of the Mutinies, and of his obligations to whom the Maharajah of Benares has more than once shown his deep sense, was E. A. (usually known as "Single") Reade (not Read—quite another person).

The Art Journal for August is amply worth the trifling sum now charged for this publication, if only on account of the large etching of "The Grape Harvest," of which it is sufficient to say that it is a most charming reproduction of a most charming conception. The pencil pictures are good of their sort, albeit some persons, ourselves amongst the number, do not much affectionate that particular school of art.

"The Handbook to Government Situations," published by Messrs. Stanford, of Charing Cross, is in every way a most admirable compilation. In the first place, it gives all the situations offered to competition, as well as full information regarding age, subjects of examination, pay, &c. It also takes account of technical examinations, as well as less important examinations, held at irregular intervals. Lastly, all is arranged on a clear and intelligible system, while to lend absolute completeness to the whole work there is an alphabetical index which enables the reader to find with the utmost facility all the information he may require. Even now we have not exhausted the catalogue of the Handbook's merits, inasmuch as we have omitted to state that specimens of examination papers are given, so that the candidate may judge as to the nature of the task set before him.

THE salt revenue for the first two months of the current financial year has amounted to Rs. 1,25,65,000 on 64,67,000 maunds, as compared with Rs. 1,19,98,000 on 63,15,000 maunds during the corresponding period of last year.

PRESENTATION TO MAJOR EVANS BELL.—A meeting was held at the Westminster Palace Hotel on Saturday afternoon, to adopt an address to Major Evans Bell, thanking him for his published works on India, and for his other eminent services to the Princes and people of India. The Hon. Dadhabhai Naoroji occupied the chair, and Mr. Chesson, the secretary, read letters expressing sympathy with the objects of the meeting from Professor F. W. Newman, Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Judge Hughes (Macclesfield), Mr. George Holyoake, and Professor Max Müller. Lord Stanley of Alderley, in moving the adoption of an address, referred to Major Bell's work on the annexation of the Punjab, and his remonstrance as to the treatment of the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, and said, though the latter might not be a man of great account, still it was to be regretted that he should have been driven to Russia by our breach of engagement with him. A deputation will wait on Major Bell to present the address.

THE EURASIAN QUESTION.—II.

THE important question upon which we touched last week is, we are glad to see, attracting the attention of the English Press in India. So far as the Native Press is concerned, the Eurasian community is ignored or despised. The Native who holds hatred in his heart towards the pukka Englishman holds it still deeper against his progeny of the half-blood. There is no help to be looked for from Native generosity of feeling or from Native administration, if it had the power to aid. Were Native rule dominant in India to-morrow the first to feel its harshness would probably be the poor Eurasians. They would be turned into the outcasts or pariahs of the land or made human beasts of burden —hewers of wood and drawers of water for their dusky rulers. To English interference on their behalf, and to that alone, can they look in their present and darkening hour of need. And yet no signs of recognition are discernible from that quarter. Commissions are travelling throughout the country, and sub-committees have been sitting on hill and plain, examining witnesses and devising means of how best to meet the growing demand of the Natives of India for a larger share in the administration of the country, for wider fields of employment, for the opening up to them of higher and more lucrative offices under Government. But no thought has been been given to that vast and increasing Eurasian population who are going downwards to degradation every year. "Government," says an Anglo-Indian contemporary, "have been kind to everyone in the country except to their own children. The Native has been the recipient of many favours, and he has deserved them ; but the children of Europeans, though deserving, are allowed to look for bread in a land purchased by the blood of their fathers." And, as the same writer asks, "Why should these things be? And what will be the result of all this negligence and indifference? There is a voice in India which is being ignored because it is only a low groan when it might be a loud menacing demand. But it cannot be turned a deaf ear to much longer."

There can be no doubt at all of the seriousness of the situation, or of the responsibility of the Government. Something must be done, and that quickly too, to rescue the vast mass of European country-born people from disgrace. This is the opinion come to by one of the oldesta nd most experienced of the English journals in India, and it is an opinion that must be respected. That many of the Eurasian community have risen to certain positions of independence, if not of affluence, may be allowed, but it is for the poor unhappy thousands who are going hand over hand to perdition, especially in the large Presidency cities, that help is needed. Mere charity will be of no avail. The Government must gird itself up to meet a great a growing, difficulty which every day's delay makes more intense and troublesome. It should be borne in mind also that these poor, struggling Eurasians are not only the descendants of the Englishmen who won India for England, but they are of the same professing faith—they are Christian and loyal. What is to be done for them? To quote again from our Indian contemporary :—"Every industrial occupation is invaded and more than supplied by the Natives, who perform all the menial offices and furnish all the servants. Carpentry, joining, fitting, shoemaking, and other trades are all taken up by Natives who can earn a livelihood at rates of profit which would not keep a European or Eurasian." This is the state of things to-day, and it is growing worse. The Eurasian must be the loser as a competitor in any field of labour against the Native. But the Eurasian cannot be allowed to starve to death. He won't die out ; on the contrary, his numbers are increasing, and with them his poverty and his degradation. He is as yet pretty free from crime, but there is a point at which poverty becomes desperate and means danger to others. Surely before that point is reached some attention will be paid by the Government to the wants —nay, to the claims—which the Eurasian community has upon it. Every Native grievance, real or fancied, can get a hearing in England. Will no voice be raised on behalf of the unhappy people in India, who with English blood in their veins are the most wretched to-day of all the millions there under English rule?

IN MEMORIAM.—SIR MAXWELL MELVILL.

THE death of Sir Maxwell Melvill recalls to mind the good old days when "John Company" was king in Leadenhall-street, and the family of Melvill supreme. It brings to recollection the father, James C. Melvill, who as Secretary wielded a power well-nigh irresistible, as peers and princes did homage to the embodiment of that mighty influence which had sceptres in its grasp and the destinies of kingdoms in its sway. It is the fashion nowadays to point with the finger of scorn at the old regime of the twenty-four potentates who directed an Empire, and to dwell upon the nepotism which was then rampant in high places. Be it so, but are matters better now than formerly? There is much more pretending integrity of aim—is there more real purity of purpose? Ay, indeed! Take the Melvills as an example. Who desires, who wishes to deny, that the family influence stood them in good stead? Who questions that they owed their advancement, at any rate, in early life, in part to the name they bore? But it must not be forgotten that when they were passed by good posts were provided for those above them. Their rivals were improved in status, and received no harm. In this our present generation the authorities, thanking God they are not as other men, too frequently supersede the lowly and humble to make room for the lofty and exalted. Crying purity, they are corrupt; professing uprightness, they grovel in the dust of jobbery. Better plain, honest nepotism than intrigue veiled with the garments of public advantage. So long as man is man, and human nature human nature, will interest carry the day against merit, and no amount of asseveration will persuade to the contrary those who have had an experience of official life.

But to return to the subject of these remarks. Maxwell Melvill was one of four brothers, all of whom attained distinction in the Indian service. Entering the Bombay Civil Service in 1855, after an employment of upwards of ten years in various portions of the Presidency, he was detached for duty in Sind, where, joining the Judicial Branch of the Service, he gained that insight and experience which stood him in such stead when, after a lapse of five years, he was appointed a Judge of the High Court of Bombay. In this important and onerous post he remained for thirteen years, at the end of which interval he was promoted to the highest office open to a Bombay civilian, and became a member of the Governor's Council.

His reputation, always high, was considerably enhanced by the able and upright judgment which he displayed as a counsellor of Government. Careful, painstaking, cautious, but over and above all pre-eminently straightforward in all his dealings, the public placed in him the confidence due to the display of specialities which are not always to be found in high places; and it occasioned no surprise when, about a year ago, a seat in the Home Council in England was offered him, but he was perforce compelled to refuse an offer as complimentary as it was gratifying—for nature had not endowed him with a constitution capable of resisting the ferocities of an English climate—so he remained in the East. But fame had placed the mark of greatness against his name, and in 1886 he was appointed a C.S.I., while only a few weeks back he became Sir Maxwell Melvill, a Knight of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. Equally, too, Fate had placed a quiver in the bow of destiny, and his place in the Government of the Empire is now destined to know him no more. He lived a life of honest and conscientious duty; and he died full, not, alas! of years, but of honours—honours of respect awarded by his fellow-countrymen, honours of chivalry bestowed by his Sovereign.

Government has sanctioned the purchase for the Lahore Museum of a zoological collection illustrative of Indian silk culture.

A Viceregal Gift.—The Lahore paper says :—"His Excellency the Viceroy has made a present of a handsome gold watch and chain to a Babu in the Persian Branch of the Foreign Office, in recognition of his services in instructing his Excellency in the Persian language. The gift was accompanied with a letter, cordially acknowledging the Babu's services."

The man Gobardhan, who was sentenced to death at the Allahabad High Court for the murder of Nihal Sing, a connection of the Raja of Awa, has made a confession implicating a personage of high position, who will be prosecuted in due course. He will, it is stated, be defended by a well-known barrister of the North-West Provinces, for whose services an offer of a lakh of rupees has been telegraphed to England. Gobardhan has been reprieved.

Indian Condiments.—"An Anglo-Indian" wants to know where in London he can obtain genuine curry powder and paste and real mangoe chutnies? He says that the articles he has been getting hitherto under those names bear no resemblance to the articles he was accustomed to use in India. Let him try W. Newson and Co., 24, Jewin-street, E.C. Old Anglo-Indians of the Bengal Presidency will be familiar with the name of that firm, which is of some forty years' standing in Calcutta, where it earned a high and well-deserved reputation as manufacturers of Indian condiments. The cheap chutnies sold at home as mangoe are composed of vegetable substances—marrow, pumpkin, or refuse of rhubarb stalks—in fact, of anything but mangoe, the delicious flavour of which fruit it is impossible to successfully imitate. The majority of so-called curry powders are equally adulterated and spurious. Good chutnee and good curry powder must be made of the very best materials and spices, cunningly and cleverly compounded, and Messrs. W. Newson and Co. guarantee their Indian condiments to come up to the highest standard that the most seasoned Anglo-Indian palate can desire.

BROAD ARROW

AND

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

AND

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle-on-Tyne,
May 25, 1887.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

(Signed) LAMB AND ARMSTRONG, Architects.

To the Secretary of the Æolus Waterspray Company.

EXTRACTS.

THE COMPANY'S EXTRACTS are manufactured on a new principle, which yields products of the very best quality.

"Normal" Food Extract is superior to most, if not all, other Meat Extracts, owing to its richness in stimulating and restorative properties. It contains, as shown by analysis, less ash and water, and more substances soluble in alcohol, and more nitrogenous compounds than the best known Extracts.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

THE course of instruction is designed to PREPARE BOYS (Sons of Gentlemen, from 7 years of age) to occupy the positions of Land Owners and Occupiers, Land Agents, Surveyors, intending Colonists, &c. The education secured at this institution is of a very superior character, the whole object of the School being to impart a thoroughly practical and scientific knowledge of all agricultural subjects; a thorough moral, intellectual, and physical training, it pledges itself to send forth its pupils practically religious and sound scholars. The school is most pleasantly situated in a healthy locality. The greatest possible care is bestowed upon the health and domestic comfort of the pupils. The diet is excellent and unlimited. The school is very strongly recommended. References throughout Great Britain.—Address for prospectus the PRINCIPAL, Maypole Road, East Grinstead, Sussex.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scarce from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 15, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 26th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 24th July; and from Calcutta to the 23rd July.

THE Select Committee of the Viceregal Council met at Simla on July 21 to settle details regarding the Punjab Land Revenue Bill and the Tenancy Bill. It was expected that the report on both Bills would be presented to Council on July 27th.

THE increased activity in the matter of the defences of India is said to be due in no small measure to the Viceroy's personal action. Several officers of the Royal Engineers have been summoned to Simla to assist in preparing designs of the various defence works which the Government hopes to carry out. Special provisions for these works, both at the ports and inland, will be made in the next Budget.

THE subscriptions from India to the Imperial Institute now exceed six lakhs of rupees.

PROPOSALS have been submitted to Government with a view to making the English yard a legal measure of length in India in order to stop false marking of piece goods.

THE Indian Government have been invited to participate in the Centennial International Exhibition to be held in Melbourne next year.

THE extension of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway from Godhra to Rutlam is to be undertaken during the next working season. The estimated cost is £1,180,000, and Major Bisset, the Agent of the Railway, has been sent to England to consult with the Directors on the matter.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL has decided the matter of the Burdwan Raj succession in favour of the adopted son of the young dowager Maharani. It is expected, however, that litigation will be resorted to by the elder Maharani to press the claims of an adopted son of hers.

THE heir-apparent to the Nizam of Hyderabad, who was three years old, died on July 23.

THE Secretary of State is said to be likely to reverse the decision of the Bombay Government in the Cambay Case, in which Mr. Wilson, Political Agent of Cambay, was found guilty, by a Commission of Inquiry, of an alleged serious offence in connection with the daughter of the Diwan of that State.

MR. JOHN BEAMES has been censured and removed from the Bengal Board of Revenue on account of certain transactions brought to light by the accusations of a Native papers.

MR. LUSON, of the Bengal Civil Service, Assistant Magistrate in charge of the Meherpore sub-division of Lower Bengal, has been relieved of summary powers, powers under the Whipping Act and his independent charge, and censured by the Government of Bengal in connection with the Meherpore Fishery Case. Sixty-eight people were prosecuted before him for unlawfully fishing in a bhil at Meherpore, and he sentenced all between sixteen and forty-five years to floggings, and the remainder to two months' rigorous imprisonment. An appeal to the High Court led to the quashing of the sentences and a condemnation of Mr. Luson's action, and on this followed the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal's censure and punishment.

THE final end of the Sullivan-Garstin-Crole affair came off at Madras on July 20th, when the suit for defamation brought by Mr. Kotasawmy Tewar, Zemindar of Ramnad, against Mr. Garstin, with damages laid at half a lakh, was brought up. Mr. Eardly Norton, counsel for the plaintiff, asked for four months' adjournment; the defendant's counsel would not go beyond a fortnight, and so the case was dismissed.

COLONEL MALLOCK, Deputy Director-General of Telegraphs, has taken six months' leave to England.

COLONEL BUSHMAN, of the Adjutant-General's Department, has proceeded home on three months' leave.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL LUCK has been attached to the Adjutant-General's Department during Colonel Bushman's absence, as several matters connected with Cavalry questions in India are in the course of being dealt with.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL LOCKHART has been unable to avail himself of his leave, as he has been prostrated with fever at Mektila.

DURING the absence on privilege leave of Mr. Hobart, Colonel Olliphant, the Senior Deputy Inspector-General of Police, will act as Inspector-General in the North-West Provinces. Mr. Berrill officiates in Col. Olliphant's place, and Mr. Sydney Smith as Assistant Inspector-General of Railway Police.

MR. JAMES GOYEN, Assistant Magistrate, Allahabad, and Mr. H. J. Hoskins, Accounts Department, Allahabad, died of cholera on July 19th and 20th respectively.

MR. TRAILL, Acting Agent to the Chartered Mercantile Bank, was killed at Madras on July 21st. While riding in a paper chase his head came into collision with a casuarina tree, from which death supervened in a few hours.

THE Sub-Committee of the Public Service Commission, having concluded its sittings in Bombay, has adjourned to Poona.

PROCEEDINGS for alleged libel have been instituted against Rukhmakai, her grandfather Harichund Jadowji, and Mr. Grattan Geary, proprietor and editor of the Bombay Gazette, in respect of a letter published in that journal, and bearing the signature of Rukhmabai. The letter containing the alleged libel was written in reply to a pamphlet issued under the authority of Dadajee. The complainant is Narayan Dharmaji, Dadaji's uncle.

THE British India's s s. Mahratta, carrying 250 Native passengers from Chandbally to Calcutta, struck on the James and Mary sands in the Hooghly on July 24th, and broke in halves. Three of the crew were killed, and many passengers drowned.

THE chief engineer of the East Indian Railway reports that there is no truth in the statement that a caisson of the Jubilee Bridge at Hooghly has sunk.

THE Burma rupee, the old coin issued by the Burmese Government, and accepted as current and equivalent to the Queen's rupee up to this time, has been reduced in value to twelve annas.

THE Herat mutineers have reached the seat of the Ghilzai rebellion. They are well armed, having, when the outbreak occurred at Herat, broken into the magazine and equipped themselves with Sniders and plenty of ammunition.

IN a recent battle between the Ameer's troops and the Ghilzai's severe loss was inflicted on the insurgents.

THE Ameer is reported to have made an unsuccessful application to the Hazaras, south of Ghazni, to assist him against the Ghilzais, but is confident of being able to suppress the rebellion.

THE Ameer's body-guard is now composed entirely of Turcoman soldiers.

Now that a settlement has been arrived at on the Afghan frotnier question, a small party will probably be sent from India to trace on the spot the new boundary on the line agreed upon. The Ameer of Bokhara recently held a durbar of chiefs on the Afghan frontier. They expressed their disapproval of an invasion of Afghanistan, and if forced to fight declared that they would fight against the Russians.

SIR ALFRED LYALL is suffering from a painful, though not dangerous, indisposition at Naini Tal, whither Dr. Cleghorn, Civil Surgeon of Lucknow, has proceeded to give his advice.

A VERY serious riot took place on July 18 near Bara, the militia outpost, nine miles from Peshawur cantonment. The quarrel originated with the western Mamands, who dammed up the Bara River and diverted the water on to their own lands, thus depriving the eastern Mamands and the Khalil tracts as well as the Peshawur cantonment of their water supply. Meanwhile a considerable body of western Mamands, armed with rifles, kept guard over the bund. The obstruction continued for two days, and then water being very scarce the eastern Mamands began to protest, and being joined by the Khalils a free fight took place between them and the western Mamands. The encounter lasted for several hours. The lowest estimates show that over 5,000 men were engaged, and rifles were freely used by both parties. Four men were killed, including one Sarhaddi sepoy of the Bara post, and several wounded.

ADEN news states that the Italian main magazine at Massowah was blown up on the 13th July. The accident was disastrous, the casualties being ten killed and thirty wounded. An investigation has been ordered, as it is rumoured that the explosion was the work of Natives.

THE volume of Indian trade for the first two months of the current official year compares favourably with the same months of 1886. The imports show an increase of seventy-five lakhs, and the exports of thirty lakhs. The only imports which have fallen off are clothes and manufactured fabrics, which is a good sign if it means that Indian manufactures are taking their place. Every other item has increased, the largest growth being in raw materials and unmanufactured articles. In Indian exports there has been a large falling off in articles of food and drink, in chemical drugs and dyeing materials; and a less one in miscellaneous manufactures. Everything else has risen slightly; but oils, manufactured fabrics and raw materials very largely. Altogether the report for April and May, 1887, is distinctly encouraging.

NOTES.

THE news from India this week contains little that is sensational or out of the normal quietude which reigns over the whole country. Even at Lahore there appears to be a difficulty in finding anything startling to write or wire about, and so the Times correspondent has to fall back upon the old story often repeated—that Russian spies have found their way to India!

HERE is the tale as told in the Times this morning:—"A Lahore newspaper publishes an account of the proceedings of two persons whom it describes as Russian or Persian spies. It says that, after spending some time in Bombay, Peshawur, and Kurrachee, they travelled by different routes through Beloochistan to Candahar, and then returned to the Punjab and placed themselves in communication with the Shinwarris. All they learnt was sent via Bombay to Meshed, whence it passed to Russia."

WHAT these gentlemen learnt from the Shinwarris is not stated. It was probably about as valuable information as the Times' Calcutta correspondent learns himself about Afghanistan every Sunday when from the Bengal Club he wires to the Thunderer the gup of the Peshawur bazaar. But as all that the spies learnt was sent to Russia via Bombay it is a pity that the dangerous correspondence was not intercepted, and a threatened calamity to British rule in India averted.

IT is pleasant to turn from this foolishness to the serious utterances of Lord Salisbury at the Mansion House the other evening. He spoke hopefully of the probability of England and Russia coming to an understanding regarding their destinies in the East, quoting Lord Beaconsfield's remark that there was room for both Powers in Asia. So there is, and we are sure that if a bargain could be come to, between Russia and England, England would not be the first to repudiate. But, unfortunately for Russian promises, the history of the past gives little assurance that the Northern Power would respect any pledge or guarantee given to-day which it might suit her interests to ignore to-morrow. Russia is not to be bound by treaties, nor by fixed frontier demarcations either.

IT is well, however, to accept her present pledge to keep the peace towards our Afghan neighbour and ourselves, and it is pleasant to learn that Lord Salisbury's speech has given great satisfaction at St. Petersburg and Moscow. But it is also satisfactory to learn that the defences internal and external of British India are being pushed on with activity, and that Lord Dufferin is interesting himself greatly in the matter. It is to be hoped that this news has reached St. Petersburg also.

THE appeal of Lady Roberts for assistance towards establishing "Homes in the Hills" for the European lady nurses who will no doubt in considerable numbers volunteer for service in the military hospitals is certain to be liberally responded to. There has certainly been a wonderful change during the past twenty years in the method of treating the sick soldier. He certainly is well cared for now, and Generals of the olden days who are progressing towards Field-Marshalships must wonder and moralise when they think of the good old times when their sick and wounded were left to the tender mercies of the hospital orderlies.

LADY nurses were tried at the Scutari hospitals during the Crimean war, but the experiment was not altogether a success, notwithstanding the splendid efforts of Miss Nightingale to make it one. The doctors, it was said, opposed the scheme, and threw all sorts of difficulties in the way. But this will not be the case in India. The doctors there will welcome the ladies, several of whom will no doubt find husbands as well as patients in the sunny land.

INDEED, this contingency has been hinted at as a drawback to the scheme, but it cannot be helped. The ladies themselves will not raise such an objection. But it is to be hoped that greater care will be observed than there was in the Crimean days in the selection of the nurses to be sent out. There are many noble-minded women ready to volunteer for the good work of attending upon the sick or wounded soldier whose constitutions are quite unfitted to stand an Indian climate, and who would only go there to die. Zeal and readiness to serve ought, of course, to have due appreciation, but physical fitness will have to be considered also.

IN order to encourage non-commissioned officers of some years standing to continue for a lengthened service with regiments in India it has been suggested to grant furloughs to England to a certain number of sergeants annually, providing them with free passages in the troopships, on the understanding that they re-engage for service in India. The idea is not a bad one, and the experiment is worth a trial. It would be, of course, a great advantage to the European army in India to have always with it a number of steady, experienced non-commissioned officers, and the indulgence proposed might induce those who have enlisted for short service to return to duty in India, and re-engage for a further term of service with the colours.

IN a St. Petersburg letter of the Political Correspondence, it is stated that in addition to the solution of the Afghan Frontier question, an agreement has been entered into between Russia and England stipulating that in case of the fall or death of the Ameer, both Powers should take possession of the country. It is to be entered simultaneously from both sides, and, an English-Russian frontier agreed upon. This is news indeed! If the Ameer reads it he ought to place himself in immediate communication with the Times Calcutta correspondent, and let him know what is thought of the "agreement" in Cabul.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 14.

An official inquiry into the loss of the steamer Mahratta on the James and Mary Shoal in the Hooghly was held in Calcutta last week. The finding as to the causes of the accident will be reported to the Government. The Court of Inquiry into the loss of the Sir John Lawrence is still sitting, and the proceedings show little sign of approaching a conclusion.

The Native Volunteer question, which attracted some attention during the war scare two years ago, has again come to the front through the action of the Madras Government, which has announced that, in modification of previous orders, the Governor in Council is now pleased, under instructions from the Supreme Government, to declare Native Indian subjects eligible for enrolment as Volunteers. Separate corps, or even companies, consisting solely of Natives, are not desired, but if any Natives wish to join the Volunteers there will be no objection to their enrolment in any corps willing to receive them, provided they understand English sufficiently, adopt the prescribed uniform, and are ready and able to share in their comrades' duties.

Orders will, it is expected, be issued shortly regarding the four cavalry camps of exercise which it is proposed to hold next winter. The largest will be at Lawrencepore, in the Punjab, where some nine cavalry regiments, with a due proportion of horse artillery, will assemble.

It is understood that the latest criminal returns, after full examination, show that no abnormal increase of crime has followed on the release of 23,000 prisoners at the Jubilee celebration last February. Her Majesty's clemency has not been abused.

Mr. Townsend, the petroleum expert who was lately engaged in exploring for oil near Sibi, is about to make a thorough examination of the petroleum wells near Rawul Pindi. He resumes work at Sibi in the autumn.

The reports from the indigo districts of Lower Bengal continue to be bad. Owing to the heavy rain the outturn is certain to be unsatisfactory. The prospects in Behar and the North-West Provinces are more favourable.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 14.

The scarcity in Upper Burma has been sensibly relieved now that a large quantity of rice has been carried to the province in the steamers of the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company. The price of rice at Mandalay and other riverside towns has fallen almost to the ordinary rates. The districts in which the scarcity is most felt are Shwebo, the Shan States, and the Sittang Valley. Although severe distress undoubtedly exists in the Shan States, the Chief Commissioner announces that inquiry has shown that the reports as to starving Shans in the Eastern division are much exaggerated.

The engineers engaged in constructing the railway which will run through the eastern division have a difficulty in procuring sufficient labour, and could employ double the number of coolies now at work. The Shans can obtain employment on this section of the line, which they are easily able to reach. They, however, display great reluctance to work. Even Shan beggars asking for food in Mejktel have refused easy employment offered them, declaring that it was beneath them to work. In Pyinmana, where the distress was acutest, rice has fallen in price from 20 rupees per bag to 13.

The revenue prospects in Upper Burma for the current year are unsatisfactory. The revenue was considerably over-estimated in Sir C. Bernard's time. The amount of revenue due is seven lakhs less than was estimated. The amount to be collected will show a considerable further shrinkage. On the other hand, the expenditure was greatly under-estimated. In several departments the police expenditure has been 50 per cent. greater than Sir C. Bernard calculated on his own scale of strength for the force. Owing to the present scarcity very little revenue will be received from the Shan States, and Mr. Crosthwaite has decided not to press for payment of tribute this year. When the present scarcity is over the annual tribute from the Shan States will be about three lakhs. The forests, fisheries, and mines are certain in the future to prove fruitful sources of revenue in Upper Burma. The Thathameda tax will be maintained in Upper Burma as a regulated capitation tax; but the levying of it will be carefully guarded, and a portion of it will be commuted into a land-tax. Mr. Crosthwaite is engaged in framing a simple and workable system of land revenue under which all land, both Royal and private, will pay a graduated revenue according to its productiveness. This measure must be gradually introduced. There are vast tracts of splendid land now unoccupied and uncultivated in Upper Burma. When order has been thoroughly established, and the peasantry feel that their earnings are secure, this land must assert its value. In the immediate future indirect taxation will probably be mainly relied on to provide the surplus funds required to order to carry out the great public works which are so urgently needed in Burma, and which would in most instances prove immediately reproductive.

Liberal subscriptions are being given in Burma to the Imperial Institute. The Irrawaddy Flotilla Company has subscribed Rs. 10,000, besides contributing to the local funds.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE STATE OF UPPER BURMA.

(Pioneer.)

The reality of the pacification of Upper Burma, effected by the extensive operations of our troops during the cold weather, and the liberal posting of military police from end to end of the country, is day by day becoming more generally recognised. The skirmishes with dacoits which still occur are few and far between, and they only serve to show how much the soldiers and police have profited by their experience in jungle fighting, and how severe is the punishment now dealt out to such robber bands as are run to earth. The pressure brought to bear upon the lawless elements has been so constant since last October that they are now thoroughly disheartened; and the villagers themselves are taking independent action against the disturbers of the public peace. This shows marked trust in the stability of our administration, for the Burman country people, when they are not in with the dacoits themselves, have been taught by long usage to look upon their existence and exactions as a necessary evil. The Civil Officers find their work made much easier now that confidence in the new form of government has been widely established, not only in the large towns, but in the rural districts which were almost isolated from the capital under the Burman administration. The government is a reality in every petty village and hamlet; revenue is paid regularly and willingly; and the exercise of force is confined solely to those who are as much the enemies of their countrymen as of the British authorities.

Luckily for us there is no fanaticism in the Burman character. In Afghanistan it was felt that every man's hand was against them, openly or secretly: In Burma the great majority of the people are already settled down quietly under the new order of things. They see their religion respected and their priesthood treated with marked consideration; their own property and belongings are far more secure than in the old days when they were oppressed by rapacious officials and harried by dacoits; money is being poured freely into the country, and trade is developing by leaps and bounds; the railway is opening out the land-locked eastern districts, while in other parts roads are being made which cannot fail to advance their material prosperity. The doubts which existed in the Native mind as to the permanence of British rule have all been swept away: the evidence that the future of Upper Burma is absolutely linked with that of the Lower Province is too overwhelming to be questioned.

As regards the state of the frontier nothing could be more satisfactory. The expedition to the Southern Shan States has resulted in the complete breaking up of the few bands which certain pretenders had gathered together there; the cis Salween Shan Chiefs have welcomed Mr. Hildebrand heartily enough, and that officer reports everything going smoothly in the districts with which he is in communication. The Shans to the east of Mandalay have been much impressed by the Thebaw Tsawbwa's reception at Mandala, and our influence is gradually extending northwards to the clans near the Ruby Mines with whom good relations have been established. On the Yunan border everything is quiet, Mr. Warry's special knowledge of the Chinese and their ways having smoothed over all difficulties which seemed likely to arise from our occupation of Bhamo. The local merchants see that no interference is contemplated with their trade, and they are consequently only too anxious to reap the advantages which follow on the establishment of a settled government on the Upper Irrawaddy. Whatever the future may have in store, the Viceroy may at least be congratulated now on the comparative tranquillity which has been established in Upper Burma, both internally and on its frontiers.

SIR ASHLEY EDEN.

(Pioneer.)

With his vigorous energy and well preserved constitution, anyone would have said a week ago that there was a certainty of many years of work and usefulness before Sir Ashley Eden. But one of those diseases that lies in wait for healthy men has carried him off suddenly, and has robbed the country of a servant who has done it much good and useful service, and we believe in the next few years to come would have done more. Sir Ashley Eden was an excellent example of the typical able man that the Indian Civil Service produces. That Service make demands upon all the qualities of its members, but the very highest, the peculiar gifts, that is, that go to make the great orator and the great statesman. The man who goes through its varied training and with success may be said to be turned out to the world guaranteed as to industry and power of work, promptness and decision of character, mastery of business, and of despatch writing—in short, an excellent man of affairs. The applause of listening Senates he is not required to command, and to take occasion by the hand is only possible with the tedious sanction of official superiors. Whether Sir Ashley Eden had the powers that would have brought him to the front in the open competition of English public life is doubtful. He himself by going straight from his Indian Governorship to the oubliette of a Councillor's room in the India Office would seem to have recognised that his strength lay in official life rather than in the Parliamentary career which so many of his contemporaries have tempted; and all unsuccessfully. Within these limitations he must be recognised as one of the very ablest men that India has known of recent years. With a great capacity for getting through work, and a great power of clear and effective argument on paper, he made an excellent secretary; with a sanguine temperament, and energetic mind, clear commonsense and a sufficient instinct for governing, he made a first-rate administrator. He left Bengal indubitably the model Province of India, with the impress of his energy stamped in every department. To take a single instance, while the Government of India, with far more urgency to stimulate them, had hesitated and faltered about providing their seat with a railway even to Umballa, Sir Ashley Eden made the Darjeeling Railway an accomplished fact. A hospital for years had been called for ineffectually at Simla. Sir Ashley Eden saw the want of one at Darjeeling, and got it made forthwith. In the India Office the work of an individual is lost trace of to the world; but there is every reason to believe and we should believe if we had no such reason, that this was one of the most potent influences in the Council, and that in the matter of military reform especially, with which he was identified from his connection with the Commission of 1879, the Government of India found in him a valuable ally. It cannot be expected that a man naturally of a combative temper, and who never concealed an opinion, should have left this country without having created some animosities; but these will all be forgotten, and it is pleasant to think that his last words in India, who had taken part in so many hot controversies, were to testify emphatically to the harmony which had come to be established between the different classes of his countrymen therein, and which contrasted so strongly with his earlier recollections.

THE OUDH AND ROHILKHUND RAILWAY.

(Pioneer.)

A very considerable undertaking is exercising the minds both of the Home and Indian Governments, and of people interested in railway projects in London—the future of the Oudh and Rohilkhund Company, the period of whose contract with the Government expires immediately. By its provisions the Company is entitled to six months' notice of termination, which notice, however, it is competent for the Secretary of State to defer for six months; as also to prolong the contract itself for six months, should that seem advisable. But as the Company possesses a five per cent. guarantee, which it does not earn, we may conclude that for financial reasons the Secretary of State will take his pound of flesh, and bring the costly arrangement to a close as soon as he may. This, especially as the outside world is very ready to help him. The India Office despatch on the subject is now before the Government of India, asking its views, and summarising the methods of dealing with it which present themselves. In the first place, the Government may elect to take over and work the line as a State line; the objection being the necessity for raising a large loan wherewith to pay off the Company's shareholders; whilst the present policy favours the principle of providing capital for such purposes through private companies. The Oudh and Rohilkund shareholders themselves are understood to have submitted a project for continuing the business on much more favourable terms to Government. But there has been a good deal of friction of late years between their managers here and the official railway authorities, and the Company is likely to find powerful opponents both in India and at home. The East India Railway Company have made a bid, from which its enormous resources and influence must needs secure a patient hearing. But that Company has already too much power in its hands, and the arguments against bringing another large system under its sway should be unanswerable. Yet one more Company, the Bengal and North-Western, has come forward with a proposal, which is of a very comprehensive nature, embracing several important extensions; whilst the strength of the Company in its financial backing, and its prestige as being the only considerable line in India working without a Government guarantee, must give it at least as good a chance as the rest.

COVENANTED AND UNCOVENANTED.

(Madras Times.)

We frequently hear and read the assertion that certain rights and privileges are conceded to members of the Indian Covenanted Civil Service under their covenants. The latest enunciator of the doctrine is Sir Lepel Griffin, who, in a periodical of limited circulation, boldly claims to govern India by virtue of his Covenant.

Covenant is a fine, sonorous word. It recalls our early association with biblical history, in which a comparatively insignificant people, who (according to our modern views), conspicuous only for stubbornness, infidelity, and an incidence of cutaneous and other insanitary ailments truly surprising, were yet selected for a solemn compact which they respected more by continuous infringement than by adherence. Later in the world's history it is connected with a stern and uncompromising body of Scotch fanatics who bonded together to resist constituted authority; and although their success was limited, they contributed many brilliant pages to the record of their times.

There can be no doubt that to style an ordinary agreement, or bond, a covenant, is a grander way of expressing it than to adhere to the plainer terms. It is grateful and comforting, and arouses enthusiasm and other sentiments which are communicated by sound. A remarkable instance of this effect may be found in the case of the pious old lady who declared to her pastor that she derived much consolation and spiritual sustenance from repeating the word Mesopotamia.

Candour, however, obliges me to say that the covenants of Covenanted Civilians, including that of Sir Lepel Griffin, are mere agreements or bonds.

I write with a copy of a covenant before me which was entered into by a distinguished member of the Civil Service of about the same standing as Sir Lepel Griffin. You would not probably care to give sufficient space for its reproduction in extenso; but the following is a faithful abstract of its contents:—

Preamble.—The document is styled an indenture, and purports to be executed on a certain date, between A. B., hereinafter called the covenantor, of the one part, and the Secretary of State in Council of the other part. The document then proceeds to state that the covenantor has already been appointed by the Secretary of State to the Civil Service in a certain Presidency in the East Indies, and that he is to continue in it so long as the Secretary of State thinks fit, with liberty to resign with permission previously obtained, and that the said covenantor agrees as follows:—

1st. To be generally faithful in the discharge of the duties assigned to him.
2nd. To obey all orders issued to him by those who have lawful authority to command him.
3rd. That he will keep regular accounts, and shall not tamper with them, and that he shall give up all books, &c., which he may have kept, without obliteration and concealment, although they may not be Government property, and although they may contain records of his own affairs or the affairs of others.
4th. That he is not to misapply, or employ for improper purposes, property entrusted to his care.
5th. That he is not to divulge secrets unless authorized by the Secretary of State or other person properly empowered.
6th. That he is not to corrupt bargains or accept corrupt presents, gifts, or gratuities.
7th. That he is not to trade contrary to law.
8th. That he is not to quit India without leave, and must satisfy all debts due by him to Her Majesty before departure.
9th. That he must become a subscriber to the Civil fund and Annuity fund.

The above is a correct abstract of the indenture, which is signed at foot by the covenantor and two members of the Council of India.

I think it will be admitted that even the most imaginative person can scarcely interpret the above document as giving the person who enters into it any exclusive right to govern India, or to enjoy any particular rights or privileges; in fact, the entire document seems ridiculous and unnecessary. Some of its provisions are sufficiently met by that useful enactment, the Penal Code; and the remainder are utterly useless. It is surprising that the terms of the bond have not been resented by those who have had to subscribe to them. As a fact, very few read over the document (covenant, bond, indenture, or by what other term it may be called); but a general impression remains that it is something to their advantage; and, in after years, when this sentiment has mellowed, they even go the length, as Sir Lepel Griffin has done, of declaring it to be a charter of certain rights and privileges which really have no existence.

It may not be generally known that almost every person who receives his appointment in England is required to subscribe to a humiliating bond or indenture of the nature described above:—Cooper's Hill Assistants, Forest Officers, Telegraph employés, and even Mechanics, engaged at home, are all required to execute these covenants or agreements; and they have quite as much right to style themselves "covenanted" as Civilians have. In none of these departments, however, is the theory advanced of an exclusive right of administration.

But if some Covenanted Civilians err in misstating the real nature of the indentures, Uncovenanted Officers make a much greater mistake in accepting that the term "uncovenanted" is objectionable. In a recent memorial to the Secretary of State, they have even proceeded to the length of calling it degrading, quite forgetful of the fact that the heads of the Uncovenanted Service was ordinarily the Viceroy and Governors of the several Presidencies, who take up their appointment without executing any covenant or bond with the Secretary of State for India. I fail to see how it can be considered degrading not to be called on to execute an indenture promising not to commit forgery or abet forgery; not to embezzle; not to take bribes; not to abscond without paying debts, and other acts penal in themselves. The wonder is why this relic of barbarism is still retained in the India Office. It was probably introduced in the early days of the trading Company which laid the foundation of our Empire in the East, who desired to have a hold on their employés on their return home, as no proper means existed in India for punishing them when guilty of malpractices. Under whatever circumstances it may have been introduced, there really seems no sane reason for its continuance. A letter of appointment would serve all practical purposes, as everything else connected with the conduct of an officer would be governed by the rules of his service and the ordinary provisions of the criminal law.

It would still be necessary to maintain a distinctive expression to indicate the superior Civil Service ordinarily recruited from Home; but to base this distinction on the execution or non-execution of a useless indenture is misleading. If, however, it be deemed expedient to retain the associations of the time-honoured word "covenanted," let the form of indenture be amended; let all its insulting provisions be eliminated; and let it be really what Sir Lepel Griffin claims for it, a charter of the rights and privileges of a special class of Civil Servants;—but until he can affect this, his assertion is not consistent with facts, that his covenant or indenture gives him any express right to govern India.

SENEX.

THE PARADE OF THE PASHAS.

Much indignation continues to be manifested in Ceylon at the trotting out of Arabi Pasha and his fellow-exiles on the occasion of the Jubilee celebration in Colombo. A correspondent, writing on the subject to the Times of Ceylon, says:—

"I am told that it was not their own idea; but that they were in the Moorish Pavilion on Tuesday afternoon, when an official came up in uniform—I can't find out his identity; was it Mr. G. W. Campbell, an old friend of theirs?—and told them they were wanted to join in the procession; otherwise they would not have pushed themselves forward. In the Dark ages, we know, conquerors made their captives take a prominent part in ceremonial procession, but I thought this custom had died out long ago with torture, ransom, and other barbarities, and would not have been repeated in this year of grace. The Egyptians are prisoners and nothing else, and nothing else, and, while keeping guard over them, the Ceylon Government ought to let them severely alone. Their assertions about loyalty to Queen Victoria I call offensive hypocrisy." From the fact that Arabi Pasha took no part in the presentation of an address to the Governor on Jubilee Day, we inferred that all was not harmony between the Egyptian exiles. This is now confirmed by a letter from Yacoub Samy, Ally Fehmy, and Mahmoud Fehmy, who say they were not with Arabi when he paraded in front of the Governor at the Jubilee ceremonial. These request that we shall "not speak of them as Arabi's fellow-exiles, as every one is responsible for his own actions." We take this to mean that the above-named Egyptians do not wish to be linked with Arabi in anything, and that a serious quarrel has taken place between them, Arabi's friends being Abdulal, Toulba, and Mahomed Sami, who, together with Arabi, paraded in front of the Governor.

A joint letter signed by Yacoub Samy, Ally Fehmy, and Mahmoud Fehmy has been addressed to the editor of the Times of Ceylon as under:—

"We were astonished when we read in your issue of the 29th ultimo an editorial note relating to the "Egyptian Exiles and the Jubilee." With regard to the procession at Galle Face, that you mentioned the names of Arabi, Yacoub Samy, and Fehmy, who you say, stepped out of the procession and walked past the pavilion. We beg to contradict that we were not among Arabi on that day or walked in front of the pavilion, nor did we accompany Arabi and the procession or occupy a place with them. No doubt there were a great multitude of people, Police-Officers, Europeans, Moors, Malays and others who known to us by name and persons that follow Arabi and the procession. As you have given wrong names, we beg that you will be good enough to correct the names. It is true that we have submitted an address to His Excellency the Governor, by permission, at the Queen's House, as published in your issue of the 29th ultimo. Further, we beg, in future, if you will have occasion to speak of any of us, to mention our names, and not to speak of us as Arabi's fellow-exiles, as everyone is responsible for his own actions."

THE HYDERABAD LOAN.

(Times of India.)

We have received from Hyderabad a blue-book, or rather a yellow book, containing a detailed history of the loan of thirty-four lakhs of rupees by the Nizam to his own Government. It seems that in the year 1884 a large amount of the Nizam's money was lying idle in the Surf-i-Khas Treasury, while the Nizam's Government were borrowing temporary loans from the sowcars at the usual Indian rate of 9 per cent. Sir Salar Jung thought this money might quite as well be utilized for the joint benefit of the Nizam and his State. Thirty-four lakhs of rupees were, therefore, handed over to the Dewani Treasury. The money was composed of various currencies, 18 lakhs being Hallis, 15,42,000 Chalnis, and 58,000 Gopalpet—making up in all 34 lakhs. The conversion of the cash of the last two currencies into Halli Sicca cost 2,23,756-9-6, and left only 31,76,243-6-6 Halli Siccas for investment in Government Promissory Notes; and Government Promissory Notes of the value of Rs. 26,70,000 were purchased. The notes were deposited with the Bank of Bengal, Hyderabad Branch as security, and thus his Highness's Government was enabled to borrow from the Bank for purposes of the State thirty lakhs of Halli Sicca Rupees at 6 per cent. per annum, i.e., at 3 per cent. less than what had been previously paid to the sowcars on such loans. The Nizam himself got 4 per cent for his money, and thus made a private gain of Rs. 3,03,600 Halli Sicca Rupees, while his Government in paying 6 per cent. instead of 9 saved upwards of a lakh and a quarter. The money is now to be returned to the Nizam. "As his Highness, writes Mohsin-ul-Mulk, the Political and Financial Secretary, "now takes a more active share [in the control of the Government, especially the financial portion of it, whenever any necessity arises for the State to borrow money, it will be possible for his Highness, if he approves of the arrangement, to give the whole or any portion of these notes as security. In the event, however, of his Highness not approving of this proposal, or desiring to expend this money for any other purpose, the public finance will not suffer beyond an increase from 6 to 9 per cent. in the rates at which money will have to be borrowed." "The present actual cash balance," writes Mohsin-ul-Mulk, "is Rs. 11,325,000, and from these figures it is clearly apparent that the withdrawal of his Highness's promissory notes will not affect the financial condition of the Government in any way whatever. The thirty lakhs of rupees borrowed from the Bank of Bengal, for which his Highness's notes have been deposited as security, can be paid from the cash balance now at the disposal of the Government." This appears to have been a very neat financial transaction, and worthy of imitation by all the Princes who hoard their wealth.

BENGAL.

RUMOURS have been floating about Calcutta for some weeks past of the probability of a Company being got up in England to run in opposition to the India General Steam Navigation Company for the river trade between Calcutta and Assam.

COUSIN JONATHAN has apparently been trying on the "wooden-nutmeg business" in the kerosine oil trade with India. A Calcutta paper say that Messrs. Graham and Co. had bought a cargo of Stella oil, abont 60,000 cases, to arrive, shipped on board the ship Corboy, now discharging at Budge-Budge. The cases open out with a considerable proportion of water mixed with the oil, in some cases we believe as much as 50 per cent. The buyers have refused to take delivery, and Messrs. Graham and Co. had to cancel the cargo. Messrs. Gisborne and Co. have also a cargo, which is turning out in the same manner. On board a third ship, consigned to Messrs. Graham & Co., nearly all the tins are leaky, on account of some new acid used with the solder that attaches the labels, which has eaten holes right through the tin. As soon as the tins are lifted the oil literally pours out, and the greatest difficulty has been encountered in getting coolies to land the oil, as a kerosine shower-bath in the sun is more than even Indian coolies will endure without a considerable enchancement over the ordinary wage. These experiments of the New Yorkers will put a fine edge on the oil trade for some time to come.

THE river-borne trade of Assam for the first quarter of the present year shows some strange fluctuations as compared with the corresponding quarter of last year. The exports fell off by 50 per cent., while the imports increased by nearly 46 per cent. This is chiefly attributed to the injuries done to the crops in Sylhet by the floods in 1886, which resulted in a scarcity and a heavy rise in prices. The imports to the Brahmaputra Valley consisted chiefly of rice, salt, metals, pulses, and sugar, and in all these, with the exception of iron, there was a decrease. The other items of import are kerosine and other oils chiefly sent up by boat from Calcutta, while opium and Government treasure and liquors were sent up by steamer. There was an increase in the quantity of liquors and opium imported, but a decrease in all the other items. The principle item of export from the Brahmaputra Valley is coal, which shows an increase of 16 per cent. over the first quarter of last year. The coal was chiefly sent down by steamer to Eastern Bengal. There was a slight increase in the export of tea to Calcutta, and a large decrease in that of mustard. Timber, canes, and rattans, form a considerable item of export to Chittagong, while the jute went to Bengal, and the rubber, which was more than double that of last year, nearly all went to Eastern Bengal.

MADRAS.

THE Bangalore Spectator says there are ugly rumours of underhand conduct in the keeping of registers during the British Army Contest at the Bangalore Hebbal Ranges on the 14th July. The matter is being investigated.

A MADRAS paper states that the arrangement under which the South Indian Railway Company are to work the Nellore-Tirupati section of the Cuddapah-Nellore line is, practically, that the State pays for the actual working expenses, and that the surplus profits, if any, will be divided in the proportion of 1 to 3.

THE Budget of the Madras Presidency for 1887-88, the current official year, which has recently been passed by the Government of India, will be examined, says the local paper, with more than usual interest as embodying the first fruits of the new provincial contract. From the Budget we learn that the total income of the Presidency is estimated to amount in 1887-88 to 985 lakhs of rupees. The share of this sum which is appropriated to the Imperial revenues is, as might be expected, the lion's share—namely 635 lakhs, leaving some 350 lakhs of rupees as the net income of the local Government. In other words, out of every Rs. 100 collected by taxation in Madras, Rs. 64 go to the Government of India, and Rs. 36 to that of Madras. On the other side of the account dealing with expenditure, we find that the total expenditure of the presidency is estimated to amount to 782 lakhs of rupees, and of this total 428 lakhs are debited against the Government of India, and 354 lakhs against that of Madras. Deducting the expenditure classed as Imperial from the 635 lakhs which Imperial funds receive out of Madras revenues, it will be seen that a net contribution of about 207 lakhs is made by this presidency towards Imperial purposes, and this contribution is rather more than one-fifth of its total income.

THE Government of India have adopted a different view to that held by the Madras Government with regard to the appointment of Superintendent of the Central Jail, Trichinopoly, and have decided that it be included in the list of those charges reserved for commissioned Medical officers. Existing arrangements are, however, we understand, not to be interfered with until the occurrence of a vacancy.

THE scheme for the employment of pensioners from the Native army in civil employ appears to have worked very satisfactorily in Madras, as on the 31st of March last there were 1,831 pensioners employed under the new conditions. In addition there were no less than 1,170 pensioners employed previous to the introduction of the new scheme, but these appears to be rapidly decreasing, as there was a falling-off of no less than 213 during the year, of whom 181 voluntarily resigned. Every assistance is given by the officers in charge of pensioners to enable deserving men to obtain work, and registers of those employed or desirous of employment have been opened at the different pension stations. The conduct of the men, so far as has been ascertained by inquiry among their employers has, on the whole, been very satisfactory, and the scheme is likely to prove of great advantage to pensioned soldiers.

BOMBAY.

MR. A. L. P. TUCKER, C.S., has been appointed an Assistant Collector in Sind.

MR. T. M. FILGATE, Inspector-General of Prisons, has been allowed privilege leave for three months.

DURING the absence of Mr. Ozanne, Mr. W. P. Symons, C.S., will act as Director of Agriculture.

THE Bank of Bombay has reduced its rate of interest on demand loans on Government Paper to 4 per cent.

MR. P. S. V. FITZGERALD, Acting Third Assistant to the Political Agent, Kattywar, has been granted furlough for six months.

H.M. THE QUEEN REGENT OF SPAIN has made Professor O. S. Pedraza Knight Commander of the Order of Isabella the Catholic.

MR. JAMES HUTTON, the popular agent of the Bombay Branch of the Agra Bank, proceeds to Calcutta to act as agent of that branch. Mr. James Greenwood, who lately acted as agent of the Shanghai branch of the same bank, and whose business connection with the Bombay branch as one of its principal officers extended over several years, succeeds Mr. Hutton.

AMONGST the arrivals from Brindisi by last week's mail steamer was H.H. Nawab Asman Jah, the Minister-Designate of Hyderabad.

MESSRS. B. AND A. HORMARJEE notify that they will pay, on and after July 27, an interim dividend at the rate of Rs. 35 per share for the half-year to the shareholders of the Coorla Mills. After deducting commission, interest, and all other charges, the company has made a net profit of about Rs. 75,000, of which Rs. 45,500 will be absorbed by the payment of the interim dividend; Rs. 13,000 has been written off for depreciation, and about Rs. 20,000 carried to the reserve fund. The directors would have declared a larger dividend, but as they are now making large additions and alterations to their property, they deem it advisable to strengthen the reserve as much as possible.

THE LOSS OF THE P. AND O. STEAMER "TASMANIA."

The Board of Trade inquiry into the stranding of the P. and O. Company's steamer Tasmania, which was wrecked in the Straits of Bonifacio on April 17, has been continued by Mr. Rothery, Q.C., wreck commissioner, and assessors, viz., Captain Castle, Captain Parfitt, Admiral Moresby, and Captain Harland. The counsel engaged in the case were Dr. Raikes and Mr. Baden-Powell, for the Solicitor to the Board of Trade; Mr. C. Hall, Q.C., and Mr. Mansel Jones, for the P. and O. Company; and Mr. Philip Myburgh, Q.C., and Mr. Howard Smith for the officers of the Tasmania.

The inquiry was brought to a close on the 8th inst., when Mr. Rothery, the Commissioner, delivered judgment.

The Wreck Commissioner, after reciting the facts as set forth in the evidence given, dealt with the questions put by the Board of Trade In answer to the first question, as to the vessel having a proper equipment of compasses, the Court found that the evidence showed that every care was taken to ascertain the compass errors, and to apply the proper corrections to the course. In reply to the second question—"Whether the owners took proper and sufficient care in the selection of the master and officers of this vessel, and whether on leaving Bombay, or any time thereafter, the master's health was such as to interfere with his duties, or to render him unfit to command the ship?"—a statement had been handed in showing that the captain had been thirty years in the company's service, for the last twenty of which he had commanded the company's vessels, and that he held a certificate of competency; that the chief officer had been fourteen years in the company's service, and that he held a master's certificate; that the second officer had been seven years in the company's service, and held a master's certificate; that the third officer had been four-and-a-half years in the company's service, and held a first mate's certificate; that the fourth officer had been four years in the company's service, and held a first mate's certificate. It had been said that during the voyage the master was in delicate health, and that he was not in a fit state to perform his duty in difficult and trying circumstances, but in the opinion of the Court there was no evidence that this was so. The Court had received a copy of the last reports of each officer from their commanders, which spoke of them as being sober, steady, and good officers. It would seem, therefore, that the owners did take proper care in the selection of their officers. In reply to the third question—"Whether, when the Tasmania left Bombay, she was properly and efficiently manned for her voyage, and whether the persons composing her crew were sufficient, not only for the navigation of the vessel, but also for the proper manning of the boats in case of necessity?"—the Wreck Commissioner said that as regards the engineers', passengers', and stewards' departments nothing need be said. In those departments the crew appeared to have been amply sufficient for all that was required of them, and in tropical seas it was necessary to employ natives, more especially in the engine and boiler rooms. As regards the navigation of the vessel it appeared to the Court that a passenger ship like the Tasmania of nearly 4,500 tons gross, and having engines of 800-horse power, going at an average speed of from 12 to 13 knots, ought always to have an officer on the bridge, and yet if the officer had occasion to leave the bridge, either to consult his chart, or for any other purpose, there would have been none. When the master and other officers were probably about it might not be a matter of so much consequence, but from midnight to four A.M., when the second officer was in sole charge, it appeared to the Court that that was not sufficient. It appeared from the size of the vessel and of the trade in which she was engaged that she ought to have had six officers besides the master, so that there might always be two officers in charge and one always on the bridge. The carpenter and joiners kept no watches, while the seven quartermasters were divided into two watches, three in each watch, one a leadsman, and the other two taking the place of any quartermasters who might be ill. The look out men would relieve the man at the wheel, and the other would look out, so that the quartermasters would have continuous work—half-time at the wheel and half-time on the look-out. The third quartermaster had also his duty to attend to, to look after the line, heave the lead, and look after the lights. It certainly did not appear that to keep men four hours at the wheel was compatible with safety and efficiency, and if there had been four on the watch, so that the work was not so continuous, it would have been a better arrangement. The vessel had among her crew for service on deck forty Lascars. Allowing one and a-half Lascar for every European, which was the usual allowance, the Lascars being, it was admitted, physically inferior to Europeans, that would give a crew equal to twenty-six Europeans for service on deck, which, with the officers and quartermasters, would be sufficient for the proper navigation of the vessel. With one more officer, then, the Assessors were of opinion that she would have had an ample and sufficient crew for the navigation of the vessel. He might add, with respect to the Lascars, that they appeared in this case to have been almost the only sailors who had conducted themselves thoroughly well. With regard to the fourth question—"Whether the regulations of the company were proper and sufficient, and were duly complied with, especially as to boat and fire drill and navigation?"—it appeared to the Court that the company's regulations were substantially complied with. In reply to the fifth question—"Whether the chief officer was justified in ordering the four foremost boats to be swung in board on the morning of April 16?"—the Court thought that what was done by the order of the master the chief officer was bound to comply with. In regard to the sixth question—"Whether proper measures were taken, and by whom, to ascertain and verify the position of the vessel off Pertusato Light, at or about 2.53 A.M. on April 17, and whether a safe and proper course was then set, and thereafter steered, and due allowance made for currents and beam wind and sea?"—the Wreck Commissioner said that the second officer had stated that, when Pertusato was abeam, he found the vessel to be 3¼ miles from the light, by taking a four-point bearing from the light, and this he could have very well done. Seeing the importance of knowing the exact distance at which they passed Pertusato, it might be that the cross-bearings were taken, but whether they were or not, the Court had no reason to believe that any mistake was made in fixing the vessel's position off Pertusato. Assuming this to be so, then a course of north sixty-nine degrees west true would, if made good, have taken the vessel some three and a quarter miles west of Cape Feno, and the beacon on the Monachi Rocks being in one and the same straight line, it would, in the opinion of the Court, have been a safe and proper course, due allowance being made for leeway. The seventh question was—"Whether alterations were subsequently made in the course and by whom, and at what time; and if so, whether such alterations were safe and proper alterations?" On this point there was some discrepancy on the part of the second officer and Fagg, the man at the wheel. The latter told the Court that while he was steering north 65 degrees west on the compass, the second officer asked him what course he was steering, and on his telling him, the second officer told him he was wrong; that the master meant north 55 degrees west, adding that he was to alter the helm gently, so that the captain might not notice it. Unfortunately the master was not there to say what orders he gave, so it was quite impossible for the Court to say whether the second officer or Fagg was speaking the truth. Be that as it might, the course steered from 3.20 A.M. until the vessel struck was admitted to be north 50 degrees west by compass. It was said that it was a proper course to put the vessel in, and Commander Hull, who had had 22 years' sea service in the Royal Navy in survey and discovery ships, who for the last 13 years had been in the Hydrographer's Department of the Admiralty, and who had been for the last seven years the compiler of the Admiralty wind and current charts, had told the Court that in his opinion the course steered was a perfectly safe and proper one. But to tell the Court that it would be a safe and proper course, with a fresh and increasing breeze from the south-west, and with the wind and sea on the port beam, when there was no absolute necessity for her going so near the rocks, seemed almost trifling with the Court, and they were inclined to think that Commander Hull himself had been trying to see how far he could play on the credulity of the Court, and that he was not giving serious and thoughtful evidence. The best proof that it was not a safe and proper course was afforded by the evidence of Mr. Richardson, the second officer of another P. and O. ship, the Chusan, which was off Pertusato some two-and-a-half hours before the Tasmania. That gentleman said that he passed Pertusato at a distance of four miles, and that there the course steered was north 77 degrees west true for about 20 miles, when it was altered to north 57 degrees west true to make the Planiers Light—not as the Tasmania did, north 69 degrees west true for about four or five miles and then north 69 true. Captain Angove, the experienced superintendent of the P. and O. Company, who had for many years commanded some of their very largest ships, had told the Court that it was not, in his opinion, a safe and proper course, and it was not one which he would have steered. How it was that so able and experienced a commander as Captain Perrins, who had been 33 years in the company's service, and who for 20 years had commanded their finest vessels, had put the vessel, if he did, on such a course, was to the Court utterly inexplicable. The eighth question was whether, having regard to the position of the vessel and the regulations of the company, it was justifiable to leave the deck in charge of the second officer alone, with only a general chart of the Mediterranean and a special chart of Bonifacio Straits, not taking in the Monachi Rocks, in the chart-room, and without special instructions in the night order book? The second officer ought not to have been left without a chart including the Monachi Rocks and without any instructions as to how he was to keep clear of them. The ninth question was "Were proper steps taken by the second officer, after the master went below, to verify the position of the vessel and ascertain that she was making her course?" The second officer admitted that after the master went below he took no steps whatever to ascertain and verify the position of the vessel or to see that she was keeping her course. The tenth question was "How long before the vessel struck was she within range of Cape Ferno light?" Was the light sighted by any person on board before the vessel struck? Was a careful and sufficient lookout kept by the second officer for the light, was there anything in the state of the weather to prevent him seeing the said light or the beacon on the Monachi Rocks? The Cape Feno light had been placed there specially to warn vessels from getting on the Monachi Rocks, and any vessel coming within range of the light would know at once that she was getting into danger by seeing the intensity of the light increased. On the course on which the Tasmania was she must have been within the range of the light for the last three or four miles—that was to say, for a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes before she struck, her speed being between twelve and thirteen knots. The second officer, however, said that he never saw it, and he attributed that to its having been obscured by a land fog lying so low down as to obscure the Feno light, but leaving the Pertusato light clearly visible above it. Other persons on board did see the Feno light. How was it that the second officer, who was in charge of the deck, and whose special duty it would be to keep a sharp look-out for it, did not see this light? From the evidence before the Court, they were clearly of opinion that he was not on the bridge when the vessel struck, and they were disposed to think that he must have been in the chart-room. The next questions were whether the vessel was navigated with proper and seamanlike care, and what was the cause of the stranding? It had been stated that the cause of the casualty was an unusual current caused by a heavy gale which they afterwards encountered, and which set them towards the shore; and that it was only since this casualty had occurred they learnt that in these parts the currents preceded the gale. The evidence on this point was of the coosest possible character, and no Court could safely act upon it.

In the opinion of the Court the cause of the casualty was that the vessel was put upon a course to pass too near to the Monachi Rocks, and that the fresh breeze from the south-west, with a wind and sea on the port beam, set them to leeward of her course and on to the rocks. At the same time no steps were taken to see that she was keeping her course, although there were ample means of verifying the vessel's position. In regard to the next question, the Court were of opinion that the master seemed to have given proper orders when the vessel stranded. In reply to the next question, dealing with the discipline of the crew and the measures taken to lower the boats, the Commissioner said the boats seemed to the Court to have been properly launched and manned. In reply to the next question, the Court considered that the second officer and the third officer were justified in going away in the lifeboat; but as regarded the fourth officer, they were of opinion that there was no justification for his remaining in the boat when ordered out of it, and that his duty was to go on board the vessel. Dealing with the question, referring to the conduct of the officers on shore, the Court were of opinion that there were enough men to take the lifeboat back to the ship, and had the third officer acted promptly in all probability the men would have obeyed him, and he might have gone and brought back a boat-load from the wreck. Instead, however, of doing so, thinking he had not a sufficient number of hands to launch her, although as it afterwards turned out there was no difficulty in doing it, the third officer followed the ladies up the hill a distance of two or three miles in the hope, as he said, of being able to get some Corsicans to launch the boat. There seemed to be some dispute as to how long Mr. Bird was away from the boat, but the Court thought that he must have been away about two hours, which was a waste of most precious time. The next question was whether every possible effort was made by the crew and by the passengers on shore to render assistance to those on the wreck. In the opinion of the Court very few of those who went ashore came out with much credit, the most culpable being the carpenter, Mr. Andrews, and the stewards, who were personally appealed to by the third and fourth officers, and turned their backs and walked away. Nor, indeed, had the passengers come very well out of the affair, for they refused even to lend a hand in launching the boats. The twenty-third question was what was the cause of the loss of life, whether every possible effort was made by the chief officer to avoid it, and whether proper discipline was preserved on board after the departure of the boats? The deaths that occurred appear to have been almost inevitable under the circumstances. The Court saw nothing to complain of in the conduct of the passengers who remained on board the wreck. The twenty-fourth and last question was whether blame attached to the officers. As regards the chief officer, he was deserving of the highest praise, for, although he was the only officer left on board after the captain and fifth officer had been drowned, and had only two quartermasters to carry out his orders, he seemed to have done his duty throughout, taking a leading part in the construction of the rafts and doing everything for the safety of the passengers and crew who remained on the wreck. Everybody, indeed, spoke well of him. As to the third officer, the Court thought that he was wanting in his duty in not at once putting off with the lifeboat to the assistance of those who had been left on board the wreck, in allowing the crew to scatter, and in absenting himself for so long a time from the boat. The fourth officer seemed to blame for having gone off in a boat. His duty was on board the ship. The second officer was in the opinion of the Court chiefly to blame for this casualty. Whether or not he was to blame for the course on which the vessel was put and which would take her much too close to the Monachi Rocks, was a question which the Court must leave to his own conscience, and which the evidence of the master alone could clear up. He unfortunately is drowned. Be this, however, as it may, the second officer had admitted that before the master went below he took him down into his cabin, showed him the chart on which the course of the vessel was laid, which would take him clear of the Monachi Rocks, and read over with him the sailing directions. The second officer stated that the master was under the impression that the Monachi Rocks were further from the shore than they really were. It is clear, therefore, that his attention was called to those rocks, and that he must have seen what course would take him clear of them. Knowing this, and being left in sole charge of the deck from 3.30 A.M., when the master went below, he continued his course at full speed with a fresh and increasing breeze from the south-west, and a high sea on his port beam, without taking any precaution whatever to see whether or not he was being sent to leeward of his course, although there were plenty of lights in sight by which he could at once have verified his position. Not content with this, either he was below for some quarter of an hour or 20 minutes before the vessel struck, while the Cape Fero Light was in sight, when he knew, or ought to have known, he was nearing the Monachi Rocks; or if he was, as he says he was, on deck, he continued his course at full speed without taking the trouble to look for the Fero Light, which was clearly visible to a number of persons on board, and although he was in such a position, being nearly in sight of Persutato, and when he must have known, if he had thought at all, that he was running on the Monachi Rocks. More reckless navigation it had seldom been the lot of this Court to see. The result was that a splendid vessel, as well as a valuable cargo and effects on board had been lost, and for this he could make no compensation whatever. Add to this the great loss of life and the sufferings, privations, and losses of the passengers and crew, and they had some measure of that gentleman's misconduct. Officers who were placed in charge of these large passenger vessels with valuable property and lives intrusted to their care, ought to remember that more than ordinary care and vigilance was required of them. In this case the second officer had shown less care than would be required from the master of a small trading vessel. To inflict a punishment commensurate with the offence of which this man had been guilty was beyond the power of the Court, but the Court would do what it could to mark its sense of his misconduct by suspending his certificate for two years.

On the application of Mr. Howard Smith, the second officer was granted a mate's certificate in the meantime.

The Board of Trade have awarded testimonials for kindness and humanity shown by certain officials and natives of Corsica to the shipwrecked crew and passengers of the P. and O. steamship Tasmania, viz. :—A piece of plate to Mr. C. Souchard, Mayor of Sartene; a gold watch to Mr. P. M. Sinibaldi, chief secretary to the Mayor of Sartene; a revolver in case to M. A. Garot, captain of gendarmes; a revolver in case to M. J. B. Vallier, lieutenant of gendarmes; a gold watch to Dr. J. T. Susini; a binocular glass to M. J. F. G. Serra, overseer of maritime inscription at Bonifacio; a gold shipwreck medal to J. B. Rostini, brigadier of gendarmes; and silver shipwreck medals to two gendarmes, a roadman, and seven peasants.

IN HIS GRASP.*

Believers in physical science have long held the opinion that there is a mesmeric power which attracts and repels according to the individual characteristics of the persons endowed therewith. We have endeavoured to show in former reviews that the acceptance of this theory, or rather the results which spring from it, involves the most trying ordeal as regards the ordinary everyday experiences of everyday life. This step in itself goes far in the direction of peeping into the unseen world; but what is to be thought of the contention that there are natures on the earth possessing the faculty of influencing their fellow-creatures by means of the "black art," and leaving them, when so constrained, in a state bordering upon madness—a madness which distance does not effect, and upon which the remedial hand of time falls powerless. Picture for a moment what the effect would be in the body politic of mankind if such powers existed and should chance to fall to the lot of designing, intriguing villains eager and ready to turn their transcendent gifts to base and personal uses! Fancy what would happen were our wives and daughters, our maids, our matrons, to be at the mercy of any ruffian who chose to entrance them, and then draw them away from their homes and their protectors to dens of infamy and vice? Can it be supposed that the Great Ruler of the Universe could permit such base criminality—the more dangerous because the potentiality of taking precaution is absolutely non-existent? If this theory be true the future of society is fatally undermined, and home, with all its sacred charms and hallowed pleasures, must be swept into an abyss of ruin and destruction.

Yet "In His Grasp" is founded upon this most nefarious doctrine. That the work is interesting, that there are fine situations and soul-stirring scenes, cannot be denied. Nor do we hesitate to avow that we read the volume with avidity, and laid it aside with more or less regret; but it may, nevertheless, be questioned whether such works are healthy in tone and sound in theory. And to add to the confusion of brain which they are calculated to produce, they are always written as if true, and the reader is made to believe (if willing or able so to do) that such horrible, terrifying tales are but a narrative of the events of the world in which we live.

If, however, people like this style of novel, "In His Grasp" is quite as much calculated to absorb the imagination as any of the numerous physchical brochures of recent times.

STRUGGLES FOR LIFE.†

"Struggles for Life" are familiar to everybody in one shape or another. Some of us join in the fray personally, and realise the need of working hard to secure the daily portion of daily bread; others more favoured are forced, perchance, at times to mingle amidst crowds where hunger, want, and destitution hurry to an early and untimely end the seething mass of humanity with whom life is a perpetual struggle against poverty and lack of food.

But there are other struggles not so patent to the unreflective mind, and it is to these chiefly that Mr. Knighton draws attention. "Struggling with Nature." Aye, what a fearful source of meditation does this chapter afford! What terrible scenes must the world have witnessed in the primeval ages when all the forces of Nature poured forth their irresistible fury upon the poor, scarce inhabited earth! What miseries must have been endured when volcanos consumed and floods overpowered; when ice and snow left poor cowering humanity wandering and desolate upon the surface of a relentless land and a dreary solitude!

Then there are "social struggles;" struggles against improprieties in high places and the allurements of position; struggles against bribery, corruption, and deceit; struggles against the evils of party; struggles against unjust laws and offensive ordinances; struggles to improve the lot of the poor; struggles to raise the aspirations of the lowly.

"Religious struggles," too, demand attention. True, the fierce and ardent flames of persecution no longer play upon the feeble frame of the heroic martyr; but are there not countless forms of petty tyranny in matters appertaining to the soul? Do not bitter malice and malevolent uncharitableness still flaunt the standard of scorn, and lay in the dust of despair many a weak-kneed son of religion? Liberty of soul is far distant from this island, albeit nearly 2,000 years of Christianity have softened hard hearts and spoken peace to the people.

What, too, can be said as to the struggles of "greed?" Slavery may be extinct in this land in the grosser form of human bondage; but is there not the oppression of the poor, the sapping of the life's blood amongst the daily toilers in the world's workshop? Can a child that has never seen a blade of grass—and they are to be counted by thousands—be regarded as much better than the slave of circumstances, a mere chattel in the aggregate of mortality?

Further, has not fashion its votaries, who struggle from year's end to year's end for what? Ah! for what, indeed! In some cases for misshapen and diseased frames, the result of a violation of Nature's laws and the rules of health, in other instances for public admiration and general applause. There are legal fashions, there are feudal fashions, there are fashions of wealth and fashions of poverty, there are fashions of dress and fashions of manner, there are fashions of language and fashions of talk. Sometimes all is innocent, at others it is a mingled mass of folly and stupidity.

But why pursue the matter further? Readers can do this for themselves. Guided by Mr. Knighton they will find much subject for reflection and thoughtful consideration. There is a complete absence of cant and intolerance in the volume, while the objects are lofty, and the aspirations worthy of all commendation.

JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.*

The career of the distinguished sinologist, Alexander Wylie, a sketch of which, from the pen of Henri Cordier, opens the present number of the J.R.A.S., was in every way remarkable. M. Cordier seems to think it needful to explain how it came to pass that he, "an alien by nationality and religion," should "discourse on the life and labours" of a Protestant missionary. Science, however, and human sympathy rise superior to differences of nationality and of creed. Wylie was born in London, and was by trade a cabinet-maker. His knowledge of Chinese was entirely self-acquired, as, up to a certain point, he actually possessed no dictionary, and had, like so many other linguists of humble origin, commenced his studies by comparing the authorised version of St. John's Gospel with its translation in the language to be studied. "I knew," he told Dr. James Legge, "that the first verse must contain the name for 'God' twice, and the character for 'word' three times." Dr. Legge at once saw the ability of young Wylie, and having procured his initiation into the management of a printing office in London, sent him out to superintend the London Missionary Society's Press at Shanghai. After twenty years' residence in China and careful study of those Chinese classics to which such importance is attached in China, he brought out, in 1867, those Notes on Chinese Literature, which M. Cordier describes as "actually the only guide to the general literature of China," and to which the same writer referred in the preface to his own great work, Bibliotheca Sinica, as "le vade mecum de celui qui cherche à s'orienter dans le labyrinthe de la littérature de la Chine." Mr. Lockhart's obituary notice of this remarkable man (p. 513) well merits attention, while the appended catalogue of his works shows his indefatigable industry.

One of Thomas Love Peacock's characters once observed, that he believed it to be "the ultimate destiny of science to exterminate the human race." Civilisation, of which Science may be called the handmaid, has, it must be admitted, managed to extirpate not a few of the aboriginal races; the process is in full swing, not only in the case of the Indians of North America, but in Oceania, where entire races with the languages which they used, have disappeared, the Bible-translations may, as Dr. R. N. Cust suggests in a very important paper ("The Modern languages of Oceania,"), ere long remain the sole monument of other rapidly disappearing forms of speech. To rescue these ere it be too late is the object of his valuable essay, which is illustrated by a language Map, and a Bibliography, showing the authorities for no less than 196 languages in Polynesia Melanesia, Mikronesia, and Australia. The probability is that English will, throughout this vast expanse, be the language of the future, though it seems occasionally to be introduced in a queer way. It was not surprising that Selwyn—perhaps as good a specimen of a Missionary Bishop as has existed since the days of the Apostles—found that the first European word known in the New Hebrides was "Bishop;" but the second "tobacco," is much less satisfactory; nor is it pleasing to hear that the "British are called in New Guinea 'Biritani Dimdim,' no doubt for the same national word peculiarity which led Froissart to call them the English 'Goddam' at the battle of Agincourt."

General M. R. Haig's long residence in Sind eminently qualifies him to comment on Ibn Batula's account of his experiences

(A.D. 1333) in that province. He traces the traveller's route from the point where the latter first touched the Indus—probably (p. 402) near Bakhar (Sukkur-Bukkur-Rohri) to Lahari in the Delta, long the port of Sind. The date of the foundation of the important city of Tatta, placed by a native of Tatta in the fifteenth century, is, with greater probability, assigned by General Haig to the middle of the fourteenth.

M. Terrien de Lacouperie's "Formosa Notes" is an interesting paper dealing with the Manuscripts, the Ethnology, and the Linguistics of this "beautiful island." It is not a little curious to find (p. 454) in India an analogue to the well-known story of the Formosan "Taylards," or "men with tayles." Mr. G. H. Damant, in the course of his duty as political officer in the Naga Hills, discovered, in 1873, a large and ferocious tribe, the men of which "wear tails about eighteen inches long, made of wood, to which bunches of goats' hair are attached." The paper is, like everything which proceeds from M. de Lacouperie, full and lucid, and its author's notes on the Indo-Pacific stock of languages should be compared with Dr. Cust's article already referred to.

Mr. H. G. Keene returns to the charge in discussing the vexed question, What were the revenues of the Moghul Empire in India? Obviously the recurrence of famines, and of invasions—plural in number in many centuries of the duration of the Moghul Rule—renders it all but impossible to fix data on which anything approaching an average could be struck. It is, indeed, highly improbable that even the most autocratic of the Emperors was himself well informed on the subject. Coryat's estimate, of "forty millions of crowns of six shillings each, say twelve millions" (we presume of pounds sterling) can, at best, be but a rough approximation (p. 498). But we are inclined quite to agree with Mr. Keene in thinking eighty millions sterling a ridiculous over-estimate.

In the "Quarterly Notes," Mr. R. Sewell's communication (with Plates) on the Buddhist remains at Guntupalle, in the Godavari District of the Madras Presidency, is most noteworthy. Though not approaching in importance many others, the names of which are familiar to all who take interest in Buddhist architecture and sculpture, these remains deserve, and will doubtless receive from the Archæological Survey, more attention than has as yet been accorded to them.

"The tender little face."

'Tis the keynote of Mr. King's most charming and enraptured strains, depicting the pleasures, the trials, the fears, the hopes, the bliss of a "Venetian lover."

First comes the joy of meeting—

"How my being glowed!
How all the pent-up current of my life
Flowed to her!"

Then followed the "consecration of our love," as with eyes all filled with tender affection she listens to the strains flowed harmoniously upon the ears of the heart-sick maiden—

"Love, if Death prove but a dream,
And we seem
Waking out of it to grow
Dearer to each far
Than we are
In this human life below."

But the course of true love did not run smooth, and it chanced that the girl was marked out by her father for another—a man of years, to whom the latter stood under the heaviest obligations; albeit the parent could say—

"I thought 'twas power, peace, delight
To which I pledged her."

The blow fell heavy. What happens? How do matters end? 'Twere no kindness to the reader to disclose the secret of this "fairy form in rustling draperies."

It is a luscious tale of love, sweet, enrapturing, and replete with those deep, soul-stirring flights of fancy which touch chords in the human heart which vibrate only when the hand of Genius strikes the lyre. Yes, Mr. King is a poet, melodious, pathetic, simple, gentle, soul-inspiring. Who but one bathed with the celestial dew could pen such exquisite lines as—

"I want to feel
The round world throbbing into harmony
With the majestic measure of our bliss;
O, passionately and divinely sweet
To know that high enraptured love was ours;
And thro' it half to guess Infinity
By that strange, vast enlargement of the soul
Which comes with love."

Finally—but supremely first in matter of importance—the poesy is linked with no gross language such as in most modern poets mars the delicacy of thought and refinement of sentiment which should characterise all attempts to clothe the actions of life in raiments of untainted imagination and spotless sweetness of diction. "A Venetian Lover" is a brilliant success, and Mr. King may be warmly congratulated upon this "flight of fancy free."

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) for the current month sustains its reputation both as regards literary and artistic merit. General Mitford's charming notes and drawings are continued; Captain Gell still discourses learnedly on military tactics, and Major-General Mitchell on the electric lighting of fortifications, barracks and hospitals. Major-General De Perry, with pen and pencil, depicts the European regimental officer in India, his duties and his troubles; and Dr. Dickinson gives again the story of the capture of Delhi during the Mutiny—a proud story which Englishmen will not willingly let die. Colonel L'Estrange contributes a couple of chapters on "General Boulanger—his influence on the French Army," which will be read with more than usual interest at the present time and the Editor deals in his own lucid manner with some of the latest inventions applicable to the Services. Besides a handsomely coloured frontispiece, showing the Insignia of the Order of the Bath, the story of which Order is told in an interesting paper by Major Lawrence Archer, the number contains several portraits and some thirty illustrations.

The August number of the Army and Navy Magazine (W. H. Allen & Co.) contains an able article on the Organization, Equipment, and Tactics of Mountain Artillery, by Captain H. C. Simpson, R.A., an interesting account of a Six Months' Ocean Tramp through the Straits Settlement, China and Japan, by A. Pill, M D., and a paper replete with information regarding the Greek Army, by Charles Martel. "Our Veterinary Class," by Yeorah, is an amusing skit on a part of the Army Examination craze. Staff Surgeon Dickinson gives an account of the Jubilee festival held by the Corps of Commissionaires, and "Furlough" sums up the news of the month in his usual crisp and pleasant manner. With the continuation of Mr. Colquhoun's story, "Every Inch a Soldier," and Lieutenant Rathbone Low's paper on the British relations with Bunder Abbas and Kism, the Editor of this deservedly popular magazine has set a varied but well selected "table of contents" before his many Service readers.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Kiungani," by A. C. Madan (George Bell and Sons); "Sedan: the Downfall of the Second Empire," by George Hopper (George Bell and Sons); "Half a Century of Changes in Men and Manners," by A. I. Snaad (Blackwood and Sons); "Lectures and Essays of Sir Stafford Henry Northcote" (Blackwood and Sons); "Food Adulteration and its Detection," by Jesse P. Battershall (E. and F. Spon).

Railway construction in Deli has resulted satisfactorily so far, and has answered the most sanguine expectations. A concession has already been asked for a railway from Lower to Upper Langkat, where tobacco planting has acquired a firm foothold. The success of the pioneer railway in Deli leaves not the least doubt that a second line to suit local wants and circumstances, and started on sound business principles, will meet with a favourable reception in the financial world.

On June 21, for the first time since Britishers settled as tobacco planters on the East Coast of Sumatra, a general meeting of Queen Victoria's subjects was held. The occasion—namely the celebration of the fact that fifty years had passed since the accession to the throne of their dearly-beloved Sovereign—was an important and joyful one to all loyal Britishers. The festival took place at Padang Brahang Estate, and consisted of athletic sports, a Jubilee dinner, and a display of fireworks.

AN ACTION has been tried with reference to salvage services rendered by the steamship Ashton to the steamship Clan Munroe, in the Red Sea. About 5 A.M. on April 19 the Ashton, while on a voyage from Rangoon for the United Kingdom with a cargo of rice, fell in with the Clan Munroe, which had run ashore on the Shab Ali reef, at the entrance to the Gulf of Suez. The Ashton proceeded to her assistance, and ultimately towed the Clan Munroe off the reef. The Court awarded £2,000 to the last named steamer.

AN "Indian Rib Roast" has been given in the Wild West encampment by Messrs. Cody (Buffalo Bill) and Salsbury, to "meet General Simon Cameron," who, although in his ninety-first year, is visiting England on a pleasure tour, and is apparently as hale and hearty as many a man thirty years his junior. General Cameron has been a Senator for fifty years. The meal, which may be fairly described as Homeric, was served in a vast tent, at the upper end of which Indian women could be seen preparing the "roast" over a great wood fire. A quantity of straw was scattered upon the floor, and on it was Red Shirt and the Indians in a semicircle, each having a stake of wood facing him, upon which he rested his rib of beef when not using his fingers to eat it. The menu was as follows, all the dishes being cooked by the Indians:—Grub stake, salmon, ribs of beef (Indian style), roast beef, roast mutton, ham, tongue, lobster salad à l Indienne, American hominy and milk, corn, potatoes, cocoanut pie, apple pie, Wild West pudding, pea nuts, and popcorn.

THE DRINK TRAFFIC IN INDIA.

AMONGST the many sins which certain would-be friends of India put to the charge of the British Government there, that of "finding India sober and making it drunken" is one which teetotal orators and Exeter Hall faddists delight in rebuking. The charge is not a new one, but it is continually cropping up, and then speeches, letters, editorial comments, questions in the House, and all endeavours to give it publicity, follow. The British and Colonial Temperance Congress summarised some time ago the extent of England's wickedness in the East in respect of encouraging drunkenness amongst the Natives in very forcible, accusatory language. "Habits of intemperance are greatly on the increase in Bengal and other parts of India and in Burma, and this is largely due to the extension of spirit licences granted for purposes of excise revenue." "The amount of such revenue has more than doubled in the last ten years, chiefly on account of the outstill system, which has resulted in the establishment, in defiance of Native opinion, of liquor shops where these were formerly unknown." "Notwithstanding the well-known fact that both the religious and social customs of India during many centuries have frowned upon the use of intoxicating drinks, and that in the greater part of India their use has been unknown, a change for the worse has taken place under British administration, the fiscal system of which fosters intemperance."

These are serious charges indeed, for they amount to this: that the British Government in India is enriching itself through the deliberate demoralising of the millions it is supposed to protect. If this were true no more damning blot could be found hereafter against British rule in the East, but happily it is not true; on the contrary, the policy of the Government has been to check, by the impositions of severe restrictions, the consumption of cheap intoxicating liquors amongst the people—to prevent smuggling and illicit distillation—in fact, to save the lower orders who would be intemperate from themselves. This is the truth, but it is a truth which fanatical temperance-mongers in England refuse to accept in spite of facts and figures. In expressing horror at the number of gallons of spirits coming into the excise revenue these philanthropists forget, or ignore, what the population of India is. From the latest Return published in India—that for the year 1885-86—it appears that Bombay, with a population of 18,142,956, had a consumption of 1,656,510 gallons, which is less than a gallon per annum for each adult male; exclude the city of Bombay and half-a-gallon only was consumed per male; Madras, population 22,331,954, consumption 1,085,477, average per adult male less than ¼ gallon; Bengal, population 66,589,859, consumption 4,510,228 gallons, average about ¼ gallon; Punjab, population 18,818,220, consumption 135,236, average about ¼ pint. In the North-West Provinces the average for each male adult is only one pint per annum.

In the face of such a Report it can hardly be said that the Government of India is making the people of India drunkards. That there has been an increase in the Excise revenue is not to be taken as a proof that drunkenness is on the increase, but rather as evidence that the Excise administration is better managed, and that smuggling and illicit consumption are being put down. And it should be remembered that the population, who will drink in spite of all moral precepts or legislative enactments, pay now in increased taxation double for the liquor they consume than they did ten years ago. "The closer check on smuggling," says the Calcutta Englishman, "which has now been enforced for some years, may be taken as an expression of the wish of the Government to put down, by all means in its power, drinking habits amongst the people."

The statement that the "mild Hindoo" was always a sober creature until he came under the evil influence of the British Excise officers is also a falsehood—not a fact. In the Asiatic Society's Journal for 1873 Dr. Rajendra Lala Mitra showed that intoxicating drinks had been extensively used in India from time immemorial—that the Ramayana frequently notices spirit-drinking with approbation, that the Puranas abounded in descriptions of spirits and drinking, and that in the time of Kalidasa drinking to excess was common among men, and also among women of high rank. The pure-minded Buddhists drank spirits from the earliest times also. Before British excise touched the Aboriginal tribes of India these tribes, men and women, drank to excess. In fact, there is overwhelming evidence to show that drunkenness was not introduced into India by the British Government. It flourished there long before British Government existed. Did not Bacchus himself, according to ancient mythology, migrate from India to Greece?

But it will be difficult to convince the philanthropists that they are mistaken, and are misrepresenting the intentions and influences of the British Government in India. All that that Government can do is to persevere in its own honest course, and allow calumny to do its worst.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF INDIA has received the following telegram from the Prince of Wales:—"I thank you very much for your telegram, and I am much gratified by the liberal amount subscribed by the Bengal Army to the Imperial Institute."

LIEUTENANT W. W. CHITTY, 2nd Battalion East Yorkshire Regiment, officiating wing officer 19th Bombay Infantry, Lieutenant A. Brownrigg, 1st Battalion North Lancashire Regiment, officiating wing officer 24th Bombay Infantry, have been admitted to the Bombay Staff Corps.

MAJOR F. M. BLANSHARD, Staff Corps, wing commander 12th Bombay Infantry, has been allowed one year's leave.

THE six additional garrison batteries of artillery coming to India next trooping season will be temporarily located at Poona (1), Roorke (3), Barrackpore (1), and Kurrachee (1), to be eventually quartered, one battery at each of the following stations:—Quetta, Bombay, Aden, Rangoon, Kurrachee and Fort William.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the inclusion of Parbatia, the language of the Goorkhas, in paragraph 1,055, Army Regulations, India Vol. I, Part 1, and for which munshi rewards will be given.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL M. F. COUSMAKER, S.C., Wing Commandant 19th Bombay Infantry, has been granted leave on urgent private affairs for four-and-a-half months.

SOME of the cavalry regiments in Burma are having a bad time of it with their horses. The 7th B.C., for instance, who managed to keep clear of "kumri" all the hot weather, are now losing horses daily from "surrab," a fever which is quite beyond the skill of the veterinary surgeons to cure. Every horse acquiring it is doomed. Even if no fresh cases occur, the regiment expect to lose sixty or seventy more horses before the end of the rains. This is especially hard in a regiment that has always taken a justifiable pride in its mounts. By the end of next cold weather, when the regiment expects to return to Allahabad, there will seemingly be few enough horses left.

THE results of the musketry competition for His Excellency's prizes by the British and Native Troops serving in the Bengal Presidency are as follows:—The silver cup presented to the British Army, and the purse of Rs. 100 for British Infantry, have been won by the 2nd Battalion Wiltshire Regiment; and the purse of Rs. 100 for British Cavalry by the 6th Dragoon Guards. The gold medal presented to the best shot in the Native Army has been won by Trumpeter Gunga Singh, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, with twenty-six points, winning the tie from Sepoy Ramsing Rajput, 2nd Battalion 1st Goorkhas, and Sowar Kishn Singh, Corps or Guides.

THE EAST INDIA AND CHINA MAIL SERVICE.

Information from Rome reports that the following arrangement in regard to the rates for the transit of the East India and China mails through Italy has been arrived at between Mr. Buxton Forman, acting on behalf of the English Post Office, and the Director-General of the Italian Post Office. The rate to be 4f. 80c. per kilogramme for letters and postcards and 32½c. per kilogramme for printed matter, &c. The minimum guaranteed to the Italian Government to be 625,000f. per annum. The convention to run for two years from Feb. 1 next. The Italian quota of 4f. 80c. to be proportionately raised should France obtain a quota above 6f. The aforesaid conditions will be submitted by Mr. Forman for the approval of the British authorities.

MARITIME ROUTES TO EASTERN SEAS.

Sir Samuel W. Baker writes on this subject:—The year 1869 witnessed the completion of a great undertaking—the opening of the Suez Canal. The commercial world quickly perceived the advantages of the new route. An immense development of the steam mercantile marine was the immediate result, and the Red Sea became the acknowledged channel or highway for European commerce towards the East. England, who had been hostile to the undertaking, became a shareholder to the extent of four millions sterling (now worth about twelve millions), and at the present time we represent three-fourths of the tonnage which annually passes through the Suez Canal. We are now informed by certain authorities that the Canal is a mistake, that the Cape of Good Hope is the only safe and dependable route for the decayed manhood of England, who cannot protect the Suez Canal in time of war, who cannot show their pale faces in the Mediterranean, who cannot defend Malta against an enemy; and therefore we are advised to give up Malta in time of peace rather than have to surrender it with a loss of prestige in time of war, for fall it must if the French fleet were at large in the Mediterranean while ours was at Gibraltar. My own experience would lead me to shun the Cape route at any time and to secure the Canal route at all times. Both routes must be rendered secure by England, and our present occupation of Egypt is simply ridiculous, unless our object is the protection of the Suez Canal.

It is a common error when discussing the relative strength of navies to ignore the enormous importance of coaling stations. Red-hot arguments are introduced pro and con certain classes of vessels, while the great fact is ignored that all the navies of the world would be useless should there be a lack of fuel. The great maritime Power must possess an unbroken line of coaling stations throughout all the commercial highways which connect our colonies; those stations must be adequately fortified. England alone possesses such coal depôts throughout the globe, and France or any other Power would be discovered helpless in time of war, should our fleets be handled with the dexterity which gained for England the renown that must always be upheld.

Captain T. R. F. B. Hallows, 6th Dragoon Guards, has been selected for the Adjutancy of the Bucks Yeomany Cavalry, on the completion of the term of service of Major H. L. Ellis, 6th Dagroons. Captain Hallows served with the Carabiniers in the Afghan War in 1879-80, including the affair at Ali Boghan, under Lieut.-Colonel Fryer, the expeditions into the Lughman valley and against the Wuzeeree Khugianis and to the Hissarik Valley and at the attack and destruction of the villages of Nargozi, Arab Kheyl, and Jokan, receiving the medal awarded. Captain J. W. H. C. Cusack, at present Adjutant or the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers, has been selected for the Adjutancy of the 3rd Battalion Connaught Rangers (South Mayo Militia), which becomes vacant on the completion of Captain C. E. Harman's term of service. Captain Cusack served as adjutant with the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers in the Egyptian War of 1882, and was present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, receiving the medal with clasp and Khedive's star, and the order of the 5th class of the Medjidie. The Adjutancy of the 6th Battalion Connaught Rangers (North Mayo Militia) has been given to Captain A. H. Wood, who served with the 88th Regiment throughout the Kaffir War of 1877-8, receiving the medal with clasp.

BROAD ARROW

AND

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxio to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle-on-Tyne,
May 25, 1887.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

(Signed) LAMB AND ARMSTRONG, Architects.

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies (Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repertory of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

 For the sale of plants, seeds, machinery, implements, &c., used in tropical (tea, sugar, fibres, &c.) agriculture, no better advertising medium exists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

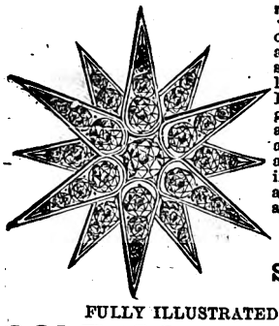
This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.
To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.



DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

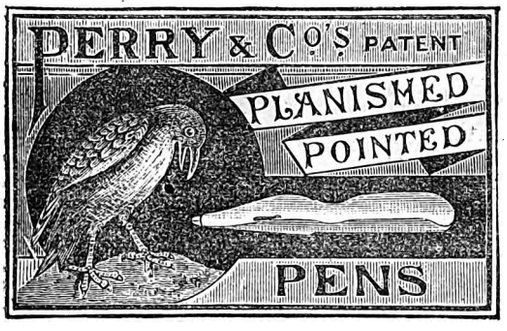
DIAMANTÉ BRILLIANTS.

The reputation of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS originally introduced into England by the SOLE AGENTS, Messrs. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established, and the success of their enterprise has surpassed their expectations. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS afford the only instance hitherto attained of the perfect representation of real Diamonds by artificial means. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real Diamonds of great value at the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense to imitations. They attracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grand monde and élite of society, and are now worn at the Court Balls and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for intermixing with and replacing parures and other costly Diamond Ornaments, and can be worn at all times with confidence and security.



Every article is Mounted in 18-Carat Gold by the best Diamond Setters, exactly in the manner of the finest Brazilian Diamonds.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 22, 1887.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 2nd August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 31st July; and from Calcutta to the 30th July.

ON July 27th the Bill for the Regulation of the Police in Burma was passed in the Viceroy's Council at Simla. His Excellency expressed, on behalf of himself and his colleagues, their great satisfaction at the manner in which the Native police had discharged their duties from the moment they were despatched to Burma. Those duties, he said, had often been as arduous as any imposed on the Military Forces, and the Police had frequently distinguished themselves in a very remarkable manner.

THE Report of the Select Committee on the Punjab Tenancy and Land Revenue Bills has been presented to Council.

THE Governor of Bombay's Legislative Council met on July 23rd, when the new Bombay Municipal Bill was introduced.

THE Governor of Madras, accompanied by his personal staff, has gone on tour.

THE HON. SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN has been granted three months' leave from August 4th, Mr. Westland officiating in the Financial Membership.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is on tour visiting important centres in his Province situated on the Ganges.

MR. CROSTHWAITE has been making inquiries into the alleged cases of land jobbing in Upper Burma which have attracted notice in the London Press.

MR. E. F. ATKINSON officiates for Mr. Westland as Financial Secretary when the latter takes up Sir Auckland Colvin's duties.

THE Hon. Mr. Peile will not leave to take up his appointment in the India Council until Sir Charles Aitchison returns in the autumn.

SIR ALFRED LYALL, who had been suffering from severe indisposition, is now rapidly improving in health.

MR. C. W. MELLOR, Judge of Gorakhpur, resigns the service on account of ill-health.

THE Government of India has re-issued the rules regarding the receipt of testimonials and addresses by public servants, and has drawn the renewed attention of the local governments to them, impressing upon all concerned the duty of exact obedience to the regulations. The Government views with disfavour all manifestations, even in the case of retired officers when following immediately upon retirement.

IT is said that on the retirement of the Hon. J. C. Hope the Hon. General Chesney, R.E., will succeed him as Public Works Minister, and that Major-General O. R. Newmarch is likely to be appointed Military Member of Council in General Chesney's place.

CHOLERA numbered 31,328 victims in the North-West Provinces and Oudh in May last, whereas in May last year the number was only 1,016. Over 200 persons died from cholera in Peshawur during July last. Up to the despatch of the mail there had been twelve cases amongst the troops there, eight proving fatal. Brigadier-General Keene, who was on leave at Simla, rejoined his command at Peshawur on hearing of the outbreak.

THE charge of libel against Mr. Grattan Geary, editor of the Bombay Gazette, in regard to the publication of Rukhmabai's letter rebutting the accusations made by her husband, Dadajee, has been withdrawn.

Under the agreement between the Government and the Bombay Trading Company, the Government resumes the management of all forests leased by the company, who extract timber on Government account.

LORD CROSS has refused to confirm the resolution of the Government of India to extend Captain Taylor's time as Master Attendant of the Port of Madras, which office he will consequently vacate in November next.

MR. MACBEAN, billbroker, Calcutta, and formerly of the Chartered Mercantile Bank there, shot himself in his office-gharry on August 1st, whilst proceeding home.

M. USSÉLE, Garde-Générale of French Forests, who is visiting India to study the Indian forest system, has arrived at Simla.

M. NICHOLAS NOTOVITCH, the Central Asian correspondent of the Novoye Vremya, is also there. He intends to visit Kashmir, and afterwards to make a tour through Bengal, Madras, and the Bombay Presidencies.

IT is contemplated to hold a Cavalry Camp of Exercise near Neemuch this cold weather. The Carabineers and the 7th Dragoon Guards marching in relief meet near that station. The Central India Horse and two Bombay regiments will also probably share in the manœuvres.

THE Roorki Committee on telegraphic service with an army in the field finished their work some little time ago, and their recommendations are now being embodied in the general mobilisation scheme.

THE Government of India have no objection to discharged Native soldiers, who are fit in all respects, being enlisted for the Military Police Force now being raised for service in Upper Burma. The question of allowing such men to count their previous military service towards pension is under consideration, and a decision on this subject will shortly be given.

THE road between Kandahar and the British frontier is unsafe for travellers. It will, therefore, be more difficult than ever to obtain news of the state of affairs in Afghanistan.

A CONFLICT is reported to have taken place between the Ameer's troops and the Herat mutineers, both sides claiming the victory. One account says that Gholam Hyder's men refused to fight, with the result that six pieces of artillery fell into the hands of the rebels.

THE latest news is that the Andari mutineers in Mizan are retiring before Gholam Hyder's advance, which may be a ruse to entice him into more difficult country. The Governor of Herat is enlisting troops locally to complete the strength of his garrison. The accounts of a large gathering of tribesmen being collected near Atarghar are fully confirmed, and any day may now bring news of decisive events.

TAIMUR SHAH, the ringleader of the Herat rebellion, was executed at Kabul on the 13th July.

OBITUARY.—Surgeon-Major J. A. Cooper, M.D., at Mussoorie; Lieutenant the Hon. E. Ward, 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, at Myngyan, Upper Burma.

Rear-Admiral C. J. Rowley, the newly appointed Second-in-command of the Channel Squadron, entered the Navy in 1845. In August, 1855, serving in the St. Jean d'Acre, Captain King, he took part in the expeditions to Kertch and Nemkall, and the surrender of Kinburn (medal with two clasps, Turkish medal, and 5th Class of the Medjidie). He then had command of the Renard, East Indies and China, from April, 1862, to 1863. Lieutenant Guy A. J. Greville has been appointed Flag-Lieutenant to Rear-Admiral Rowley. Lieut. Greville served as sub-lieutenant to the Minotaur during the Egyptian War of 1882, receiving the Egyptian medal and Khedive's bronze star.

NOTES.

THE news of the week from India is dull enough in all conscience. The Times correspondent wires that the Maharajah Holkar has arrived at Bombay, and has been interviewed. He had no fault to find with the reception accorded to him by Her Majesty or the Secretary of State for India, but he has a complaint against minor officials. His carriage was provided with two horses instead of four at the Jubilee procession, and at the Volunteer Review he had to walk a certain distance from the precincts of Buckingham Palace to the seat allotted to him. This forced peregrination was certainly a mistake, for upon such a matter all Indian chiefs are very particular and punctilious.

BUT it is rather amusing to be told by telegraph from the Times correspondent at Calcutta that the Maharajah of Indore "complained of the heat of the weather." What next? Those who have been at Indore during spring and summer time can form some idea of the heat there, and to which the warmth of which Holkar complained in London must have been that of an ice-house.

BUT not only was London too warm for him; it was not artistically enough built. It was a fine city, but there was room for many improvements, and Hyde Park and Kensington would look better if fashioned after the style of the Parisian Boulevards. And his Highness would have appreciated the Boulevards better had he known more of the French language.

Such is the nonsense wired to the leading journal by its Calcutta correspondent, who further informs the readers of that paper that the Maharajah did not enjoy his return voyage to India, as his fellow-passengers were uninteresting! Many of us who have made that voyage have possibly not been delighted with it because we were going away from home comforts or home pleasures, but Holkar going back to his own ought to have been a little less fastidious. Very possibly, however, the Times telegram must be taken more as the views of the reporter rather than as those of the Maharajah.

IT would be difficult now, perhaps, to discover who are the minor officials with whom the Maharajah found fault. Mr. Vesey Fitzgerald, the Political A.D.C. to the Secretary of State for India, upon whose shoulders one evening newspaper laid the blame of discourtesy or want of tact in dealing with the Indian Princes during their visit here, is evidently not to blame, for he has been made a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

ACCORDING to the latest reports from Afghanistan, so far as they can be relied upon, it would appear that the rebellion against the Ameer has been crushed. The telegram published from Calcutta in to-day's Times says that "there can be no doubt that the collapse of the rebellion will greatly increase his prestige." His prestige in a favourable sense was certainly not great before, nor was it likely to be increased by the story which was told of his ordering a whole regiment of mutineers to be put to death. But it may be satisfactory to those who think otherwise, to learn from the Times correspondent that his Highness is "said to be in good health, suffering only from toothache," but to cure which complaint he has summoned an English dentist from Simla.

THE Times publishes a letter from a correspondent suggesting the establishment of an asylum for the child-widows of India—an idea which the leading journal thinks "an eminently practical one." Out of 21 millions of widows in India 79,000 are under nine years of age, 207,000 under fourteen years of age, and 382,000 under nineteen years of age. We do not know how these figures have been arrived at, but, even if correct, it should be remembered that the population of British India is supposed to be close on three hundred millions to-day, and the proportion of child-widows is not—considering this fact—so very large after all.

THAT the condition of such widows is "deplorable" may be allowed. But it is not so easy to provide a remedy for a state of things which has grown out of the superstition of ages. Relief and remedy can only come from the people themselves. Interference on the part of the Paramount Power can only result in mischief, and will fail to do any good to the sufferers themselves. The subject is one beset with difficulties; but Christian zeal, however laudable, is not yet strong enough to break down Hindu prejudices. The best thing to be done is to trust to Time and its enlightening influences to bring about reforms which cannot be forced in a moment, however desirable such reforms may be.

THE Queen has been pleased to approve the appointment of Mr. W. G. Seymour Vesey Fitzgerald, C.S.I., Political Aide-de-Camp to the Secretary of State for India, to be a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

THE Queen has been pleased to approve the appointment of Mr. J. B. Richey, C.S.I., to be a member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay, in the room of Sir Maxwell Melvill, K.C.J.E., C.S.I., deceased.

THE last pillar erected by the Afghan Boundary Commission is known as No. 65, and is just south of Dukchi, being distant 32 miles in a bee line from the Oxus at Bosaga. But the frontier agreed upon in this quarter runs 20 miles east from this pillar and then goes practically due north to Bosaga, another 20 miles. There will be no difficulty in marking out these 40 miles, some five or six boundary pillars only being required. Colonel S. C. Maclean, C.B., now on special duty on the Persian frontier, and Captain Yate might well be deputed for the duty in conjunction with Russian officers. The demarcation in the Kushk Valley would be nearly as easy as that on the Oxus owing to the natural features of the ground.

THOSE who are giving forth that the British Government is encouraging drink in India may be interested in the following figures:—The spirits consumed in Bombay in 1885-86 amounted to 1,656,510 gallons, which, for the population of the Presidency, gives less than a gallon yearly per adult male. Excluding the city of Bombay the average would be half-a-gallon. The consumption in Madras for the same year amounted to 10,085,477 gallons, less than a quarter gallon per adult male. Bengal consumed 4,510,228 gallons, or about a quarter gallon per adult male. In the North-West the consumption amounted to one pint for every adult male. In the Punjab the consumption was only 135·236 gallons, or only a quarter pint for every adult male.

MR. EDGAR GALBRAITH, C.S., has written to the Pioneer, demanding an unreserved apology for the very libellous statements he alleges it has published concerning him in regard to his action as honorary secretary of the Mussoorie Band Committee. The paper declines to do anything of the kind, and deals very severely, both with Messrs. Galbraith and Macpherson (the latter the Superintendent of the Doon), charging them with rushing through the committee an offensive resolution regarding the officers of the 2nd Goorkhas, who had refused to lend their band for the occasion.

MR. GIBSON, who died in Bombay on the 14th July, was the Deputy Conservator of Forests in the Khandeish district. On the 16th April, he was out shikaring in the extreme west of the district, and was "loafing about in search of anything that might turn up," when he espied a fine tigress, and had a shot at her, slightly wounding her. The tigress, however, got away, but Mr. Gibson followed after her the next morning, with a small party. After a long search, the animal was found in a river bed, where, also, almost hidden by the grass, was found the body of a Native boy, dreadfully mauled. Mr. Gibson's party was examining the dead body when the tigress bounded out of the jungle from the other side of the river bed to that on which Mr. Gibson was standing, and charged. The followers quickly disappeared with all the spare guns, etc., leaving Mr. Gibson with only an Express rifle. When at about fifteen paces from him, Mr. Gibson fired, hitting the tigress hard, but failing to stop the infuriated beast, which rushing up to within four yards of him, received the second barrel, which mortally wounded her. Bounding into the air, she turned a somersault and in descending knocked Mr. Gibson down, falling over him. In her dying agony she bit him in the arm and in the thigh. No bones were broken, but as the nearest medical attendant was 63 miles off, viz., at Surat, Mr. Gibson had, with the assistance of Colonel Pullen, to do the best he could for the time being. The journey to Surat was accomplished in four days, and from thence Mr. Gibson, after some time was conveyed to Bombay, where he expired of blood-poisoning on the morning of July 14th.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 21.

Holkar arrived in Bombay on Monday. Shortly after landing he was visited by a correspondent of the Times of India. From the account of the conversation published in that newspaper it appears that the Maharajah said the treatment he had received in London was not altogether satisfactory, but neither the Queen nor Lord Cross was responsible, for the Queen had received him most kindly. He thought it was attributable to some subordinate officials, who seemed to lack acquaintance with the manners and customs of the people of India, and consequently were not aware of the amount of dignity attaching to representatives of the Indian Empire. On being asked for particulars, Holkar replied that his carriage was only provided with two instead of four horses, and again, on the occasion of the Volunteers' march past, his carriage was not allowed to enter the precincts of Buckingham Palace, and he had to walk to the pavilion, instead of driving there like other visitors.

He complained of the heat of the weather, and said London was a fine city, but he thought there was room for many improvements. For instance, Hyde Park and Kensington-gardens would be more attractive if fashioned after the style of the Parisian boulevards. He considered the illuminations very poor, and said they were not to be compared with those of India on the Prince of Wales's visit. He went to a London theatre, but did not think the performance equal to that at the Opéra in Paris. He was much pleased with Paris, but would have enjoyed it more had he possessed a knowledge of French. He did not enjoy the return voyage, the weather being trying and his fellow-passengers uninteresting.

The Thakore Sahib of Gondul, who returned in the same steamer, was also visited by the correspondent, and when asked about his reception in England replied that it was a broad question, but he would say that the arrangements might have been somewhat better.

The managers of Lady Dufferin's fund for supplying female medical aid announce that they propose to forward to the Queen next month the book containing a register of all the subscriptions received. They state that the movement is now taking firm root, and local committees are coming forward cordially to support the scheme, which is now recognised as capable of affording practical relief to a great deal of suffering. The record of the recent work in connection with the fund shows that the municipal and district boards in Madras are apportioning sums for the support of lady doctors and trained nurses. Arrangements have been made for placing a European lady doctor at Delhi. Qualified midwives have been established in Bombay, and the Female Hospital at Agra is rapidly becoming both efficient and popular. It is proposed to give two Indian scholarships at the London School of Medicine for Women out of the money subscribed to the fund in England.

The Indian Government has published a long resolution and a number of papers on the subject of the proposed Benares and Pooree Railway. The objects of this project are, first, to provide a quick and easy means of travelling for pilgrims visiting the shrines of Benares, Gaya, and Pooree; secondly, to open up the resources of large and important tracts now almost cut off from the rest of India, to supply these tracts with food, if scarcity prevails, or to carry it elsewhere, if a surplus be available; and, thirdly, to facilitate emigration from the overcrowded districts to those which are sparsely inhabited, and are capable of supporting a large increase of population. The result of the surveys in progress since 1882 proves that the project practically resolves itself into two portions—first, the laying of a line 308 miles long from the East Indian Railway at Mogulserai to the Bengal Nagpore Railway at Purulia, with a branch 80 miles in length to Gaya; secondly, the construction of a line 222 miles long from Panchpara on the Bengal-Nagpore Railway, to Pooree, with a short branch to Cuttack. It is expected that these lines will greatly facilitate the opening of the Chota-Nagpore coal-fields, while the pilgrim traffic to Pooree is estimated at not less than 300,000 persons annually.

A Lahore newspaper announces the discovery of coal in Hazara, the most north-westerly district of the Punjab. The seam is said to be of good quality and appearance. Should the field prove capable of development, this discovery will be one of great importance to the Punjab.

A DACOIT affair of some consequence is reported from Burma. A notable leader who has been troubling the Toungdwingyee district was surprised on the 21st by Lieutenant Jenner, of the Rifle Brigade, who shot him dead with his own hand, and killed or captured a number of his satellites. The success of this foray is expected to restore quiet to the country to the north of the old frontier.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS IN ASIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Some years ago, when examinations for promotion were yet in their infancy, the Department of Military Education in London propounded a conundrum which fairly broke the hearts of the competitors. It was this: "What are the principal conditions which have led to the success of armies in war?" An able and distinguished officer of a scientific corps replied: "The absence of contradictory orders on the part of the Staff," and was promptly disqualified; as, indeed, were all the competitors. The Board, unfortunately, are not compelled to answer their own questions; hence to this day we remain in ignorance of the true solution of the problem. But we are inclined to believe, with the late General Sir Charles Macgregor, that good communications with the base are really the principal item in the list. In this connection, therefore, it will be interesting to our readers to call attention to the excellence of the Russian communications with Central Asia at the present moment. These are, at present, the River Volga, the Caspian Sea, and the Trans-Caspian railway system. With regard to the first, we have received the following information from the work of Gospodin Togel, the officer in charge of the Karan section of the navigation. Thanks to the admirable system of inland canalisation, there is an uninterrupted waterway from St. Petersburg to the terminus of the Trans-Caspian line. The tonnage of the Volga amounts to 58 per cent. of the total river tonnage of the Empire. The actual annual traffic amounts to over ten million tons, carried by 650 cargo steamers and 3,000 barges, with a united tonnage of over three million tons. The ordinary Russian barge carries as much cargo as an average English sea-going ship, many of them exceeding 1,000 tons cargo capacity. A flotilla of these barges towed by some of the 650 tugs would be ample to convey the largest army and its stores down to the Caspian, across which Nobel's fleet of steamers built for the petroleum trade would rapidly convey them. Out of the 3,000 vessels some 200 have a cargo capacity of from 5,000 to 8,000 tons, and even these dimensions are likely to be soon superseded; but these very large vessels cannot get through the locks into the Neva, the dimensions of which are only 147 ft. by 27½. As regards the railway beyond the Caspian—bad as it undoubtedly is—it will yet bear comparison, in speed, with our mail trains in the North-West, and in point of comfort apparently surpasses them; as we are informed by the Russian newspaper that a dining saloon is attached to the "Flying (?) Turkoman" between Merv and Charjui. This, however, may be less an index of travelling luxury than of the absence of refreshment-rooms in Central Asia.

THE P.W.D. IN BOMBAY.

(Indian Engineering.)

The state of affairs in the Bombay P.W.D. is rapidly becoming unbearable, and is a scandal to the administration. For the last three months chaos has reigned supreme, and a sense of uncertainty and distrust has prevailed throughout the department. Yet the patience which has for so many years characterised the members of the Service under injustice and neglect has not deserted the officers on the Bombay establishment, though we can imagine the weariness of spirit and the half-heartedness with which their duties are carried on. Two of the senior officers on the list were retired on 1st April, and it would naturally be thought that steps of promotion would follow. No. For the last three months there has been no Secretary of Government. His duties have been carried on by the Under-Secretary, a 2nd grade Executive Engineer. Another 2nd grade Executive has been posted "temporarily," as Superintending Engineer in Sind. The Chief Engineer for Irrigation has had to take over the duties of Superintending Engineer, Central Division, in addition to his own, to the exclusion of the Senior Executive Engineer. All appointments are made as a temporary measure, and the air is full of rumours as to impending changes, concerning which, however, no one in the department knows anything, for no one has been consulted. H.E. Lord Reay has, we understand, no confidence in anyone outside the pale of the heaven-born services and thus his ideas are unknown in the P.W. Secretariat. It is generally believed that he has formulated two or three schemes, all of which have been vetoed by the Supreme Government, and one of which we presume, was that which included the placing of the department under a junior Civilian, a scheme upon which we have already commented. It is time that this playing with an important department should cease, that something definite should be done, and the tension of anxiety and unrest to which the department is now subjected be relaxed. It cannot be that the Bombay P.W.D. is incapable of furnishing an efficient Secretary, or that the whole of the 1st grade of Executive Engineers are unfit for appointments as Superintending Engineers. Of the six administrative appointments on the sanctioned establishment why should three remain unfilled? And why are members of the department deprived of the steps of promotion to which they naturally looked forward as a right? It is not fair to the department that things should any longer remain in the state they now are, and Government work will surely suffer if responsible officers have their legitimate hopes crushed, and are made to feel that their interests and prospects are matters in which Government has no concern.

THE PRIVATE SERVICES COMMISSION.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It owed its origin to a fortuitous combination of accidental circumstances; and its birthplace was the back verandah where the ferash trees shut out the road. The khansamah had insulted the bhisti's mother, and I was called upon to arbitrate.

I was all the Commission, for Absalom, my long-haired Skye, wouldn't attend to his duties as Recorder He sat in the mehter's lap throughout; and I regret to record that the levity of his behaviour was only equalled by his shameless and glaring partiality. There were present, the khansamah, my bearer, and the cook, as representing the educated classes; the khansamah's son, the bearer's sons, the cook's nephew, and the mussalchi, who was an orphan. These stood for the sons of the educated classes who hoped for employment. They were full of ungratified ambition, and wore their turbans fantastically. Apart from these were the bhisti and the bhisti's bhai, the mallee, and his mate, the ayah and the ayah's children—some hundreds—both saises, the coachman, and the two grass-cutters, besides a person who did grass cutters' work when the regular ones were sick. Last of all came the mehter and his broom. I was the State, and I had the chair with the leg-rests. The khansamah filled my pipe, in order to show that he identified his interests with mine; and the bearer brought the matches for the same reason.

The charge against the khansamah was disposed of in a few minutes. The bhisti's mamma had called him a black lizard without a backbone, and he had retaliated by comparing her to a toad before the rains break. Both comparisons were absolutely accurate; so both parties were dismissed with a warning.

But the evening was pleasantly cool, and no one had much to do, or showed any desire to get off the grass. So I declared myself a Commission, and announced my willingness to hear everybody's views on everybody's grievances. No one spoke for a long time; the witnesses began plucking the grass blade by blade, and smiling dubiously.

Then I said, "What sort of nokri is this your nokri, and what is your opinion of the nokri?" Then they all shouted, Hazur-ki-parwashti," or words to that effect, and I felt that the Commission was going to be a sham.

But the bhisti's mother saved me. She drew the chudder over her nose and growled, "The coachman is a liar, Protector of the Poor." I had often suspected this and had hinted as much to the coachman, but I did not see that it was evidence exactly. The coachman said "choop" to the bhisti's mamma, but the bhisti said, "That is truth. I water the horses and he should give me two annas and nine pie a month, but he only gives me two annas." Now I pay the bhisti seven rupees a month, and his duties are not heavy. He has no right to perquisites. But I felt that this was evidence. The coachman got angry and abused the bhisti, but the horse sais—not the sais attached to the carriage—said to the bhisti, "That is true. But who gives you the double handful of gram weekly from the sahib's bin?" Now the ayah had a tendresse for that sais, and she had quarrelled with the coachman on the same gram question. She screamed:—"And who gives the grass short weight, and takes five annas dustoorie on each shoeing. O base born and rat-hearted, inadequate one?" That fetched the méhter, whose wife the ayah was, and he said nasty things about her, till she wept, vowing that he had never swept out the drawing-room to her own certain knowledge for three weeks.

You see the bhisti had quarrelled with the coachman, who was hated by one of the saises who again was beloved by the ayah, who backed his accusation against the coachman, she being the wedded wife of the mehter who naturally did not approve of her weakness for a chumar. That is clear enough, isn't it?

From this point onward things began to get complicated. There is an enormous amount of subordinate administration about a serai if you really go into it.

When the mehter was accused of neglect of of his official duties, the evil spirit prompted the leader of the educated classes, the khansamah, who, up to this point, had been ostentatiously impartial to wag his head slowly and tell me that the mehter was, without doubt, a careless servant. Now, the ayah allowed no one but herself to abuse her husband. She came to the mehter's rescue, and the two lifted up their voices and accused the khansamah of brandy and sugar stealing from the almirah, and called upon the mussalchi to confirm their statement. Now the mussalchi was an orphan, owing nothing to any man, and he made answer that he was so busy, doing all the khansamah's work, that he had no time to watch his superior's thefts.

Here the cook, who wanted his own nephew to be the mussalchi, called the Orphan a black-mouthed gambler, a waster of time and pice in the Sudder Bazar, a thief and a vagabond. The Orphan was fighting for his own hand, with none to help him. He answered sweetly that, whatever his vices might be he did not go shares in the rupees which the bearer stole from the Sahib's pockets of a morning. He stole from the kala admi when any theft was necessary. I admired the Orphan's freedom from fear. It provoked a high-pitched catalogue of his crimes at the mouths of the cook's nephew and the bearer's two sons. The bearer retired about this point. He tendered no evidence, but said that my kamra wanted saf-karo ing. His sons were his delegates.

My mallee is a man of few words. He had no special views or grievances. He only knew that the Sahib had given strict orders that neither the cook's nephew nor the khansamah's son nor the bearer's sons should be allowed to live in the serai. He was a childless widower himself, and, besides, those young devils stole his onions. He did not recognise their right to speak at all. He was a poor man and raised onions—

"And stole vegetables from Esmit Sahib for the Sahib's dinner table," said the khansamah. "All these Arains are one. The mallee grunted, but the mallee's mate, who is evidently a man of culture and extensive reading, murmured abstractedly a proverb, which gives the chemical formulæ of khitmatgars and khansamahs. Everyone tittered—the ayah loudest of all. Which was a pity, for there is another proverb giving the formulæ of an of an ayah's composition, and this the cook's nephew made use of. The ayah wept copiously. Heaven was her witness she had served the memsahib for three years without an increase of pay, and the cook's nephew should never have been allowed into the serai.

Then the uneducated classes shouted that this was an incontrovertible fact, and the serai was full beyond proper limits. The khansamah's son and the bearer's son put their hands upon my boots and asserted I was unique among Sahibs. The Orphan had no partialities. He knew that the serai was full because the saises, all of them, took in their bhai bund, all of them; and there was a lady in a pink saree, about whom the less said the better. He was not surprised to learn that the serai was full. The Orphan gets kicked by the other servants and sleeps, like a dog, curled up in the dust of the garden. He is an Ishmael among mussalchies, and therefore a firebrand; though his light be hidden under the degchies. The khansamah professed virtuous indignation. The lady in question was the maternal aunt of one of the punkah coolies. He regretted that all the coolies had gone away to get a drink of water just then but. . . .

I don't quite understand the dialect of the villages. A pigeon-breasted old man in a blue cloth broke into the circle of the witnesses, saying that by my favour he was permitted to pull my honoured punkah. I understood him to observe that the crops had failed in his parts, but even in the wildest accesses of frivolity, his co-villagers never recognised the existence of ladies in pink sarees, and, further, the khansamah, though a Mohammedan, was a thief; which is a money-lender. Also, that that same well-scoop of abomination financed every pie of money that passed through his evil hands. The old man was a poor man and his crops had failed, but he was still virtuous and the khansamah was not.

Then the rest of the witnesses made common cause against the khansamah, not because of his lack of virtue, but because he did not pay away fairly the money entrusted to him. You must know all my household accounts pass through the Khansamah's hand, and he seems to grow fat on the process.

I heard nine different anecdotes of the perfidy of the khansamah, and a great deal of mixed bad language.

This seemed to prove the mistake of administering the bulk of the population through the educated classes; but I remembered that my subjects had desired me to do this thing.

Then I rose up out of my long chair and said:—"I am an Englishman and incorruptible; caring neither for the frowns of the khansamah nor the flatteries of the cook, nor the favour of the ayah. I will administer you personally, paying to each into his own hands his just dues and no more, and visiting with a bamboo all who would prey upon their fellows, or encroach upon their neighbours' string and grass fence, or illegally fill the serai with their bhai-bund I will extendedly employ myself among you and your belongings, and will see to your welfare, and when your wives and children are sick I will doctor them."

My subjects said:—"Hazur-ki-parwashti," in tones of very subdued delight, and whispered to one another. They did not put garlands round my neck as I had expected. On the contrary, they scowled at me. Even the promise to look after the welfare of the womenkind was not appreciated.

Then still sitting on the grass and whispering they told stories—interminable stories—of two anna oppression, and one anna wrong, and infinitely tiny intrigue. There was the bhisti's clique, which included the malli and his mate who fought against the coachman, but also against the ayah and her following, who further hated the coachman and liked the other sais before mentioned, who, occasionally and to serve his ends against the chowkidar, was a friend of the coachman. But the chowkidar's faction, which included the punkah coolies, was in the hands of the cook, as was the mehter's following—which must by no means be confounded with that of the ayah—by reason of the broken meats they received from the cook's hands, and to which they had no rights. The cook was a friend of the bhisti for obvious reasons, and this brought the cook, mehter, chowkidar, and bhisti and mallee against the coachman and the khansamah, and, semi occasionally, the other sais.

This statement, simple as it seems, was further complicated by some indirect relations between the bearer's son and the ayah's eldest daughter, and a gambling debt to the goalla. Behind all was the lady in the pink saree, who had turned the khansamah's mind from the paths of legitimate dustoorie to theft.

These things, and many others I learned while the witnesses were sitting whispering among themselves, and from what I heard I evolved a plan of Government.

Selecting the Orphan, whose voice is of a peculiar and rasping timbre, I bade him retire into the belly of the serai and there scream as though the bearer were beating him. When his yells were softened by distance to a merely melodious wail, I walked to where he stood, and with the tennis court brush, drew a white line across the serai.

Then I spoke :—

"Oh people! On the side of this line which is furthest from my house you may scream and fight and bully and intrigue as you will, for at this distance your voices cannot reach me. But if I hear noises—unseemly noises—which break my rest, I shall know that you have crossed the line, and evil will follow. The khansamah through whose hands my money passes has cheated the punkah coolies, who are rustic folk unable to protect themselves. These, therefore, I shall myself pay. The khansamah has also cheated you as you cheat one another, and all collectively rob me. Therefore I shall not now dismiss the khansamah, nor shall I dismiss you. Once a week, because the weather is warm, I shall sprinkle phenyle-ki diwai in and about the serai and shall severely punish all uncleanliness, because this is a danger to me. I shall accept no complaints. The horses must be fat, the harness must be clean, and for these things the khansamah is responsible."

All this happened eight weeks ago and, since that day, great peace has fallen on my serai.

Next month I dismiss my khansamah, and his successor only holds office for a year. For six months of that time the servants will cheat him, and for the other six he will defraud them. The phenyle sanitation arrangement was temporarily checked by a subsidised Sunnyasi, who said that it was unclean. I, however, have more funds at my disposal than a syndicate of chamars, and the phenyle is now accepted as a rare and precious balsam. I am only afraid of someone drinking it.

Beyond painting the white line in the serai from time to time, and docking, without reason given, certain rupees from the khansamah's account, my domestic administration costs me neither time nor trouble. Curiously enough, my people are happy. I think this must be because they are allowed free scope to develop their national characteristics, and never know, when I descend into the serai whether I shall give four annas to a sais's baby, or order the demolition of the chupper hut wherein the bearer strives to imprison an aged low caste female, declared by him to be a pardah-nishin.

They understand an administration which they can't understand, you see.

THE LAND POLICY IN BURMA.

(Rangoon Times.)

The more one looks at the policy pursued in the matter of land in this province, the more one is astonished at the attitude of the Administration. Admittedly an agricultural country, the necessities of agriculture demand that capital should be attracted to the land; nevertheless capital is not attracted. Holdings are small, the average in parts of Pegu not exceeding thirty acres; and though there is a great deal said of the well to-do-ness of the people at large when such assertions are brought to the test they miserably fail. The fact, is notwithstanding appearances, the masses are poor. Not long ago it was found that in a lately settled tract of Pegu the land assessment had for years been very low, ranging from seven to ten annas per acre, so the assessment was raised to Rs. 2 and Rs. 2-8. What was the result? Nearly a revolt of the people. Certainly, great hardship was caused, so much so that on inquiry being instituted it was found that nearly sixty per cent. of the people were in debt, the average amount owed by the old debtors being Rs. 579 each. Does Mr. Crosthwaite need a test of the well-to-do-ness of the Burmese, let him institute an inquiry as to how many of them are worth over a lakh of rupees, and we are sanguine he will have such an insight into the nakedness of the land as will startle him and prove instructive for the rest of his tenure of office. How is the rate of cultivation increasing? Again regard industries—see how these have increased. How many new ones have been established since our occupation of the country? Look again at the state of development of the place. How many miles of railway have we?—how many made metalled roads? Compare the number of schools to the area of country—see the proportion of revenue raised per square acre—the land revenue the same way—calculate how many policemen wil give the people per square mile of territory and per hundred of the population. When all this is done then the fact will be patent that notwithstanding all our immense latent resources, notwithstanding all natural wealth, the people are poor, destitute of ordinary public comforts and conveniences, and the province generally a howling wilderness outside of the centres of population and trade. We have on the right Bengal with its teeming millions, on the left China with its dense masses averaging some 400 to 500 per square mile, and none of these overcrowed and crushed people will come into Burma to take up her rich wastes to grow more grain, raise more produce, establish new industries. Yet there is a wealth of wood, oil gums, resins, fibres, minerals, such as gold, silver, tin, lead, precious stones, sapphire, rubies, garnets, amber, jade, all in the country, all only waiting the touch of capital and enterprise to endow the adventurer with wealth untold. Our policy is a suicidal one. We stand in the way of our own advancement, and it is our own folly that keeps us from developing as we ought to do. We have no population, hence we have not the means of acquiring the wherewithal for opening out the country. The land revenue of the united province is a little over 132 lakhs of rupees. Spread this over the surface of the country and the result is, an acre yields something like one anna per year. We ask, with all due deference, what can be got out of this miserable sum of one anna. We need railways, roads, reclamation of water-logged lands, canals, embankments, &c. We also sadly want police, justice, education. Is it possible to get all these for the people of the country where the land does not yield its due quota? Neglecting what should be made to pay we keep piling on taxes on the shoulders of the people and out of revenue, that is taxes, we not only maintain the administration but provide public works of utility and improvement. The condition of the people in the matter of administration of justice is simply scandalous. Yet we cannot give them better for want of funds. Our roads spread themselves over the face of the country at creeping pace. We have had Arakan and Tenasserim for more than half-a-century, and yet the length of made roads in the province does not exceed 2,500 miles, that is to say, we have given the older divisions such communication at the rate of fifty miles per year, and the newer one—Pegu—the same at the rate of about seventy-five miles per year.

THE IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.

(Delhi Gazette.)

The Statesman of Calcutta writes:—A correspondent of the Indian Daily News professes to publish the verbatim text of a letter which he says has been addressed by the Secretariat at Darjeeling, to a titled Native gentleman of Calcutta, asking for a subscription to the Imperial Institute, and that was couched in the following terms:—

"At the desire of the Viceroy, the Lieutenant-Governor directs me to ask what will be your subscription to the Imperial Institute. An early reply is solicited."

The writer adds:—"Similar letters, it is understood, have been addressed to several other Native gentlemen in Calcutta, whose only misfortune seems to be that they been favoured by the Government with titular distinctions." We think there must be some mistake. We have seen the letter, we believe, thus referred to; ill-advised and improper as we think the letter was, it was not conceived in terms so offensive as these. It is possible, of course, that we are mistaken, and that letters we have not seen have been couched in this language. We hope very earnestly, for the sake of the Government itself, that the writer has not given the real text of the letter, but what he thought was a true rendering of its import. We refuse to believe that his Excellency the Viceroy would permit such a letter to be addressed to any one in India, under his authority, or "at his desire," as the writer has it. There is far too much, however, of this official solicitation for subscriptions in India. It is an old and unworthy practice that received a great development in Bengal, under Sir Richard Temple's administration, when it had almost become the practice for the Secretariat to dictate to Native gentlemen of position the subscriptions they were expected to make to any project that the local Government wished to carry out. It is most unseemly that it should be revived on behalf of this Imperial Institute, and we should be glad to see the matter brought before Parliament.

To speak plainly, it is a positive indecency to ask the people of India to subscribe money for a great Institute in London, the usefulness of which is utterly discredited there, and the whole benefits of which, if there should be any, will be confined to Englishmen. It is not enough it seems that India has been made to pay the cost of such establishments as those at Addiscombe and Haileybury, and within the last few years some forty lakhs of rupees for Cooper's Hill College, but she is now to subscribe an indefinite sum of money for another educational establishment, for English youth. Any just conception of what the Jubilee means, in so far as India is concerned, would have suggested that it should be signalised by some act of Royal grace towards its people. It would have been a small thing for the Home Government to have proposed to commemorate the event in India, by the establishment of a Royal College of Technical Education therein, while the one thought has been to make India subscribe largely to a great building in London, in the establishment of which her children have no interest whatever, and never will have any. England is so poor we suppose, and India, so rich, that it is but right and just to make her contribute to the education of English youth, although her own are starved for the want of institutions that cover every district in England with educational facilities. There is but one feeling throughout India on the subject, and the pressure that has been put upon the Viceroy, to be reflected by him upon the people, is a reproach to the nation.

MILITARY CHANGES IN BURMA.

(Times of India.)

Among the military changes rendered necessary in Burma by the recent annexation of the upper country, the necessity of having a strong force near our new frontier is, of course, one of the most obvious. The old frontier station at Burma was Thayetmyo; the new one is Bhamo. As Thayetmyo, therefore, has lost its importance as a frontier post, it has been decided, we hear, to withdraw all or nearly all the troops from it, concentrating them where they will be more useful. Already, the battery of artillery which used to be quartered at Thayetmyo has been withdrawn, and it is probable that the headquarters and wing of the British regiment now stationed there will be removed after the rains, leaving only the headquarters of a Native regiment to garrison the place. Whoever is to garrison Burma in the future, whether the regiments be drawn from Bengal or Madras, or from all three Presidencies, the loss of Thayetmyo as a station (should it be really abandoned) will be a serious one. It is admittedly the best cantonment in Burma. Situated on the Irrawaddy, it occupies a site of great natural beauty, and it is well covered with large and handsome trees. Its climate, take it all the year round, is good, for though its cold weather is nothing particular, yet it escapes the fierce summer heats of Upper Burma, and its rainfall is moderate. That Thayetmyo will be altogether denuded of troops is, we think, hardly probable. It has a large jail, in which are something like a thousand Burmese prisoners; and it is well known that, however gay and light-hearted a being the Burman may be as an ordinary well-behaved citizen, yet when once he becomes a criminal he is a very desperate criminal indeed. So the jail will require some troops to look after it. Then there is the fort which commands the river, but which is no longer likely to be of any use for strategic purposes, there being no frontier adjacent. It is proposed, however, to turn the fort into a military prison for the whole of Burma, and this scheme if carried out will also necessitate the retention of troops in Thayetmyo. But it is not easy to say with certainty what will be done in Burma in the immediate future in regard to keeping up or abandoning garrisons. Much depends, of course, upon the progress made in pacifying the country, which, it is satisfactory to know, is progressing steadily. In the meantime, military police are being poured in everywhere, and should the presence of regiments now in Burma be urgently required elsewhere, it is thought that they may be considerably reduced with safety. The two most important places in Burma now are Mandalay and Bhamo, and with strong garrisons in these, the military police ought to be quite equal to the work for which they were enrolled, and which is to keep order in the districts. That Lower Burma should until recently have been giving as much trouble as Upper Burma is not a pleasant fact, considering the time that has elapsed since we annexed it. But everywhere the force of the movement against us appears to have spent itself, and if this rain passes without any revival of last year's troubles, by the end of the present year the whole country will be thoroughly well in hand.

BENGAL.

The large arrear balances due to the different Road Cess Funds have attracted the attention of the Bengal Board of Revenue, who observe with regret the little attention paid by District Officers to previous instructions on the subject. The Board observe that "if improvement is not speedily effected in this direction, they must consider what serious notice to take."

There is some probability of an innovation in the manner of payment of Government dues being introduced in the Calcutta Collectorate. Under the present rules such dues must be paid in cash, which entails all the inconvenience that has led to payment by cheques being almost universal in the commercial community. There is no real objection to the payment of Government dues by cheque, as all mercantile pecuniary obligations are paid, except the standing dislike of innovation. But the world is moving too fast even in India for bags of rupees being the one and only shape in which money is recognised at a Government treasury. The risk of a cheque being dishonoured is one against which there are well understood safeguards to be used. It does not deter merchants nor tradesmen, and it should not deter an efficiently organised department of the Government. An application on the subject is before the Commissioner of the Treasury for reference to Government.

MADRAS.

The Bishop of Mylapore purposes erecting a new Cathedral after the Gothic style of architecture on the site occupied by the present building, which is to be levelled to the ground. Several plans of the new building have been already submitted to the Bishop, who will, it is said, devote his energies to the scheme immediately after his return from Ootacamund.

The total of next year's indent of the Madras Medical Department which has gone home, aggregates £14,707. This is more than double the average of the past three years, which was only £7,180. The wherefore of this has not been explained by either the Principal Medical Storekeeper or the Surgeon-General; it is probably due to anticipated demands from Burma. It is understood that no drug or instrument, which can be obtained locally of Indian manufacture, to the advantage of the State, has been included in the present indent.

The necessity of providing more accommodation than at present exists for the staff of the Madras Railway is at present engaging the serious attention of the authorities, and during the last few months a large number of estimates for providing house accommodation for drivers, foremen, guards, clerks, signallers, porters, &c., have been sanctioned; it being considered desirable and to the advantage of the company that such accommodation should be provided, as far as possible, for all members of the staff, except in the vicinity of large towns through which the line runs, where such provision can be secured outside the company's fences. The staff occupying these quarters will have to pay a percentage of their salary as house rent, such percentage not exceeding the rental value of the quarters.

The condition of the Madras Civil Orphan Asylum premises has for some time past been the cause of considerable anxiety to the directors, the building generally being in a most dilapidated state, and some portions having of late become so much so that in the event of immediate repairs not being carried out they bid fair ere long to become too unsafe to be made use of. The cost of general repairs to the building had been estimated at Rs. 15,594, but the very low state of the funds at their disposal debarred the directors from undertaking even the most urgent of the repairs needed. This being the case, the only course open was to apply to Government for aid, and an application, which was made by the secretary, has been so far successful that the Government has sanctioned an immediate grant of Rs. 6,000 to be utilised in carrying out the most emergent of the repairs needed, with a promise of a similar amount next year. An estimate of Rs. 8,960 had also been framed for reconstructing the school chapel, which had to be pulled down owing to its being in an unsafe condition, but the Government are not disposed to aid in the rebuilding of the chapel, but have left this to be carried out by the directors when funds are available.

BOMBAY.

The Committee of the Bombay Corporation met again to discuss in detail the provisions of the New Municipal Bill. The discussions were mainly confined to verbal alterations. It is proposed in the Bill that a meeting of the Justices of the Peace held for the election of a member of the Corporation, the chairman of that body should, in the case of an equality of votes, determine the result by his casting vote. But the Corporation passed an amendment, on the motion of the Chairman, Captain Selly, to the effect that the result should be declared by drawing lots.

The recent misunderstanding between Mr. Thomas Lidbetter and his partner, Mr. Henry Stead, has resulted in a suit which was heard recently before Mr. Justice Bayley at the High Court. The plaintiff in the suit, Mr. Lidbetter, claimed to recover from the defendant, Mr. Stead, the sums of Rs. 2,500 and Rs. 660, praying that the partnership may be dissolved, that an account may be taken of the partnership dealings, and that the affairs of the partnership may be wound up. The Hon. Mr. Macpherson, who appeared for the plaintiff, informed the Court that Mr. Stead had left for China without any reference to his partner, and was not represented. The plaintiff was examined, and said he had been on friendly terms with his partner until December, 1886. Upon Mr. Stead's return from China in March last plaintiff learned that he had brought a Japanese woman with him, who eventually proved to be the cause of the rupture between the partners, and with whom Mr. Stead had now left for China. Mr. Justice Bayley ordered a dissolution of the partnership, and made a reference to the Commissioner to take an account of the partnership dealings.

Cholera seems to be increasing in Bombay, though it has not attained proportions which should cause any uneasiness. During the week ending the 26th July, 12 deaths occurred as against 9 in the previous week, and a mean of 14 in the corresponding weeks of the preceding five years. The victims consisted of seven Hindoos, three Hindoo outcastes, one Parsee, and one Mussulman.

Mr. James Hutton, agent of the Agra Bank in Bombay, on being relieved by Mr. James Greenwood, who lately acted as agent in Shanghai, will go to Calcutta to assume the management there, relieving Mr. W. Wood, the present manager. Mr. Wood, it appears, has been compelled to place his resignation in the hands of the Directors, owing to a difference of opinion in a matter in which, according to a local paper, he has the general sympathy and approval of his banking colleagues and the commercial community generally, but as there has recently been some changes in the Home management of the Bank, it is not improbable that

Mr. Wood may ere long again occupy the managerial chair in Calcutta.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH AND PUNJAB.

A CORRESPONDENT writes from Simla that frequenters of the Mall have been not a little amused of late by an annoucement in a shop window that "St. Paul has arrived." Of course, it only implies that copies of the oratorio, which is to be given later in the season, are obtainable within; but to the casual passer-by, who is in ignorance of what is coming off in the musical line, such a statement is somewhat bewildering.

THE little piece of litigation which has been going on at Meerut since the death of Mr. Alexander Skinner, son of the celebrated Colonel James Skinner C.B., has come to a somewhat abortive conclusion. On the death of Mr. Alexander Skinner in January last, his eldest son, Robert Hercules Skinner, set up a document purporting to be the will duly executed and attested, of the deceased, and applied to the District Court of Meerut for letters of administration. Before the order of the Court was passed on this application, Mr. Robert Skinner submitted a second application, praying for the grant of the probate of the will and the guardianship of the minor children left by the deceased. Notice of this application having been communicated to all persons claiming to be interested in the subject-matter, on the day fixed for the hearing, Mr. Alexander Van Cortland Skinner, Mrs. Alice Forster, Mr. A. R. Forster and Mr. C. W. Kinloch opposed the grant of the probate upon the ground that the will set up was invalid, because it was either forged or obtained by misrepresentation. The 9th of July was fixed by the Court for an inquiry into the validity of the will, and Mr. Robert Skinner then produced the two witnesses whose names appear on the alleged will as attesting witnesses. These gentlemen, however, swore that they had nothing to do with the will, and did not even know the deceased. The signatures on the will were not theirs. The application was then refused, and there now the matter stands.

THE Punjab Court scandal has not yet been finally disposed of, though the Chief Court at Lahore has pronounced an opinion on the subject. On the 25th of May, the Registrar of the Chief Court of the Punjab forwarded a copy of the judgment in the case of Macauliffe versus Browne to the Punjab Government, for such action as the Lieutenant Governor might wish to take. On the 28th of last month his Honour is said to have asked for the file of the case for perusal. An opportunity has been given to Mr. Macauliffe to submit a reply to Mr. Burney's judgment, and when the Civil and Military Gazette last heard of this reply, it extended to more than one hundred pages, and was not then concluded.

BURMA.

THE taste for whisky in preference to other spirits has spread to Burma. The imports in 1882-83 amounted to 11,576 gallons, in the next three years they were 13,344 gallons, 13,834, and 19,137 respectively, whilst in the twelve months just ended the total had risen to the large figure of 43,904 gallons. The imports of brandy were highest during the past five years, in 1884-85 69,279 gallons having been received. There was a fall to 53,791 gallons in 1885-86, and a rise again to 61,246 gallons in 1886-87. The imports of ale, beer, and porter increased from 213,753 gallons in 1882-83 to 452,009 in 1886-87, and those of rum from 47,641 to 50,471. There was a decrease in champagne and claret, and an extraordinary decline in the imports of gin, which in 1882-83 amounted to 101,654 gallons, whilst in the last twelve months they were only 63,802. The increase in malt liquors is attributed to the large qantity received from the Murree Brewery for the use of the troops.

THE Beeling correspondent of a Rangoon paper states that a Burman magistrate, two Burman sergeants of police, five Gurkhas and seven Punjabis recently started to attack dacoits reported to be near Melong village, twenty miles from Beeling. The party reached the place at seven o'clock in the evening, and, proceeding through jungle for about 200 yards, found the dacoits' hiding place, where four dacoits were cooking and thirteen were concealed in a hut behind a rock. The police opened fire, killing one dacoit, and the dacoits in the hut replied with a volley, which killed one Gurkha and wounded one Punjabi, and then they bolted, leaving four guns and eight dahs. The correspondent states that the European police officer had lately been transferred, and that, had the police been under a trained officer, probably the whole gang would have been captured. It was, he adds, absurd to send trained police out after dacoits under a Burman who could neither speak Hindustani nor even utter English words of command.

A DACOIT affair of some consequence is reported from Burma. A notable leader who has been troubling the Toungdwingyee district was surprised on the 21st by Lieut. Jenner of the Rifle Brigade, who shot him dead with his own hand, and killed or captured a number of his satellites. The success of this foray is expected to restore quiet to the country to the north of the old frontier.

THE presence of a strong military force in Upper Burma last year, for which large quantities of provisions, oil, sugar, &c., were required, had a favourable influence on the import trade of the province to the extent of one crore of rupees. The improvement, however, was also due to the more settled state of the country, as was shown by the better demand from stations on the Irrawadi beyond the old frontier at Thayetmyo. The most important increases in imports were—wearing apparel 3¼ lakhs; cotton piece-goods, 2½ lakhs; coal, 3; earthware, 1; fruits, 2; grain and pulses, 7; hardware, 4½; jute, 1; leather, 1¾; liquors, 11¼; matches, 1¾; metals, 1¾; oils, 10¾; provisions, whatever they may include, 21; silk piecegoods, 6; sugar, 12; and tobacco, 1½. There was a falling off in the exports, but the whole of the diminution in value took place in the teak trade, the demand for that product in Europe having become much less. There was a considerable increase in the quantity of several exports, but a decrease was very noticeable in mineral oil, and was attributed to American competition in both Lower Burma and India.

THE TRICKS OF TRADE.

A perusal of the evidence given before the Select Committee on the Merchandise Marks Act (1862) Amendment Bill leaves (says the St. James's Gazette) an impression on the mind that almost every branch of British manufacture and commerce is based on fraud of the most shameful character. The middlemen make use of their command of the market to coerce the manufacturer into assisting them to swindle the consumer; and from beginning to end—what with pirated trade-marks, false descriptions, stolen reputations, short weight and measure, and inferior quality—the whole fabric of our trade and commerce looks like a mass of organised dishonesty. The first point that strikes one is the shameless way in which the names of certain places which have made a reputation in some particular industry have been appropriated and traded upon. A great deal was said before the Committee about the grievances of Sheffield. No doubt that town made out a strong case. Goods manufactured at Solingen, in Germany, come over here or are sent to our colonies marked "Sheffield," "Warranted Sheffield," &c. One instance is given in which the well-known firm of Rodgers was concerned. The German maker stamped his cutlery "Rotgens, Sheffield." In another case goods were found to be selling largely in India and other places under the name of the "Sheffield Knife Company, Victoria Works, founded A.D. 1837, Queen street, Sheffield, Cutlers to her Majesty"—Queen-street, Sheffield, being a street occupied mainly by lawyers. But Sheffield herself has been no small sinner; for there are plenty of firms there which import German cutlery into Sheffield and then re-export it as genuine Sheffield make. Besides, Sheffield, even if she herself were not to blame, is only resisting a piracy which in scores of other cases has been only too successful. Brussels has long since been deprived of her specialty in carpets. Cardigan jackets are no longer made in Cardigan, but in Leicester; so also with Guernseys, Jerseys, Grampian hosiery, and other textiles. "Tweeds" are made all over the country. Not a single Kidderminster carpet is now made in all Kidderminster; the name was stolen and the industry taken up by Axminster. Wilton carpets are now made at Halifax, and no longer at Wilton. Dutch tapes are made in Manchester. The French cambrics we use come from the North of Ireland, and the largest quantity of Barnsley sheetings are also made in Ulster. American cloth, Saxony velvet, Stilton cheese, Limerick lace, Balbriggan hose, Havana cigars, Swedish amber—all these are made and sold under their original names, although their manufacture is carried on in twenty different places, and has practically disappeared, in some cases, in the place where it originated. Almost everything we eat or drink or clothe ourselves withal sail under false colours. It was high time indeed for the Legislature to step in and check these fraudulent designations, which have not only been used to defraud the public, but have absolutely ruined many a local industry, whose good name has first been appropriated and then brought into contempt. The hosiery trade of the Midlands has been carrying on this system of piracy for hundreds of years. The only victim that showed fight before the committee was Balbriggan. It was proved beyond doubt that certain great firms had long been sending out from Nottingham and elsewhere so-called Balbriggan hose, and their competition very nearly killed the genuine Balbriggan industry. Indeed, there is now only one mill in Balbriggan; and, instead of making reparation now, these great firms contend that, having used the name unmolested for fifty or sixty years, they have established a prescriptive right to it, and that the original seat of the industry must go definitely to the wall. Then there are the German and British cigar pirates. For cigars made in Houndsditch or Bremen they have appropriated some of the best-known Havana brands; and every single box of cigars they send out is labelled as being real Havana. The watch business is another notable example. English-made cases are hall-marked here, sent over to Switzerland to be fitted with Swiss works, and then brought back to be sold as genuine English-made watches. We import all the materials for the manufacture of umbrellas; but as we put them together here they are, of course, "best English make." "Best English pipes" consist, too, of a mouthpiece from Germany and a bowl from France. The "real amber," so fondly loved by the smoker, consists partly of "ambroid," which is made in Vienna, and partly of "celluloid," which catches fire like sealing-wax. The well-known firm of Curtis and Harvey, gunpowder manufacturers, has to contend against pirates styling themselves "Cortis and Hadney," "Cubtis and Marvey," &c., and using identical labels. These are the examples of the appropriation of a well-known name either of a place of manufacture, a firm, or a thing, for the purpose of deceiving the public; and they stand on precisely the same footing as "butterine," now happily expunged from the dictionary.

But even these are not so reprehensible as certain customs of trade which have grown up and are in some quarters accepted as quite legitimate. For years our Indian and Chinese customers have been cruelly swindled in Manchester piece goods. Originally, figures were stamped on each piece denoting its length, breadth, and quality—the length in yards and the breadth in inches; while the quality was indicated by a number. Gradually, "yards" has been changed to "folds" and "fids.," so that the innocent native now buys thirty-seven "folds" in the belief that he is buying thirty-seven yards. Similarly, the ticketing of yarns gives to the uninitiated an utterly false idea of the length. Innumerable little tricks of this sort exist in the textile trades, and they have gone on so long now that they are regarded as perfectly honest. Now, it seems to us a mere waste of time to discuss the causes of the depression of trade while this sort of thing goes on. Here we see local industrial reputations snapped up and traded upon with inferior goods until the pirated name itself is made a byword; imitations palmed off as the real article; short measure and short weight given; colourable infringements of well-known brands right and left; a conspiracy of manufacturers, middlemen, and retailers to cheat the consumers—in brief, a gigantic system of fraud carried on in the name of business; and yet on every side there is wailing over the decay and depression of our trade.

RUSSIA AND CHINA.

(BROAD ARROW.)

Russia and China are destined to play a striking part in the future of Asia. That is a simple, geographical, and ethnic fact not to be overcome by any amount of sophistry. There is little use in arguing metaphysics with any man who will not concede that human beings are conditioned by time and space. There is about as much use in discussing Asiatic questions with persons who rule out Russia on the one side, or China on the other. We are not contending that the two Powers exhaust the factors in the Asiatic question. That is quite another matter. India will not play a less significant part, but it may be as goal or prize and not as a mobile force. Are Russia and China going to be enemies or allies? Everything depends on the answer we can obtain to this question, and it must be confessed that it is difficult to meet with two intelligent Englishmen who agree upon the point, or with any clear statement of the latest aspects of the problem. It has been sanguinely assumed that England has entered into a good understanding with China, and that we may now count upon Chinese assistance whenever Russia should be troublesome in Afghanistan or on the Pacific. This impression is widespread, and it has formed the groundwork of many reassuring articles of that ultra patriotic type we are all supposed to admire. We could have wished there had been more data than can found in official documents and well-known facts for this pleasant view of a great question. Our own opinion is that we have really no reliable ground for imagining that China will befriend us, but that she now holds herself free to act as circumstances arise, and that Russia can put as much diplomatic pressure upon her as we can, at any time, and with more chance of a subtle and successful effect. China is not troubled with an inquisitive Parliament and the tendency there is in democratic countries to discuss quarrels in the open market place. Russia is just as free. The two countries are not called upon to publish despatches for the benefit of the curious and for the annotation of the "enemy," whoever he may be. They can make an engagement and keep it an absolute secret. They can establish and renew the most delicate understanding without much comment in the papers, or with comment of the inspired kind that is intended to delude the people of both countries. England cannot do this, and so we are not in a position to be on even terms with Russia in negotiating with China. It is an ugly fact, but it is our duty to look at ugly facts as well as pleasant ones. As an illustration of China's attitude towards the two countries, take the evidence given in the recently issued Blue Book about Port Hamilton. Could anything be more conclusive as to the difference in the action of the Chinese Government towards us and towards Russia? The occupation of Port Hamilton has the assent of China at first. The Marquis Tseng assured Lord Granville that "His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China would offer no objection to such occupation; and Earl Granville having taken due notice of this declaration, it was mutually agreed that from the day on which Her Britannic Majesty should deem it advisable to occupy those islands they should be acknowledged by His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China as lawfully occupied and administered by England." This agreement was made in April, 1885, some days after Admiral Sir W. Dowell had obeyed his instructions to occupy Port Hamilton. News of that occupation had probably not reached Russia, as we find a Russian volunteer steamer, the Vladivostock, entered the port on May 10 to find the British flag flying there. Between the date of the Marquis Tseng's agreement and May 10, China, in response to the Russian Minister's remonstrance at Pekin, had changed her attitude and practically backed out of the agreement of April 28. Our ships continued to remain at Port Hamilton, and there was a temporising acquiescence in their presence until Russian diplomacy was once more active. When it was known that our Government had offered to rent the islands constituting Port Hamilton for £5,000 a-year it was intimated to us by China that if the Korean Government made the bargain "a demand would be presented from another quarter within ten days for the cession of other territory on the same terms." If we went on with our occupation, it was subsequently stated, Russia would be compelled to occupy some other Korean port. In the end we were induced to evacuate the place on the understanding that Russia would not seize the islands or take possession of any Korean territory whatever. These negotiations seem to give a sufficiently explicit answer to the question we have asked. The illusion that England and China were allied against Russia is dispersed. It was a beautiful dream, and it vanished almost as rapidly as it had appeared. But there are many persons who still cling to it, and fancy that it means a good deal. Two facts may be cited from the recent Blue Book, however, that are pregnant with meaning on the main question we are discussing. It is clear, in the first place, that we were diplomatically manœuvred out of our position in the Pacific, and that it was Russia who supplied the pressure at Peking as well as at Tokio and Soul that made retention dangerous, whether we fortified the islands making Port Hamilton or not. In the second place it is not less clear that the guarantee of Russia, on the strength of which we eventually left Port Hamilton, was given to China and not to Great Britain. The net result of the whole of these Port Hamilton negotiations is to convince an unbiassed reader of the despatches that China is far more likely to be an ally of Russia than an enemy in questions which may involve British interests and Russian interests also. This may seem a large inference to draw from a special case, and it will be said at once that Russia and China have been at war in Kuldja, not so many years ago, and may be so again if the advance of Russia westward from Bokhara should begin with serious intent. But the recent turn of affairs has given us a clearer view of Russian policy, which has to be studied in the light of facts, and cannot be observed in the clear language of Parliamentary exposition. China then, is likely to play an increasingly important part in Asiatic politics, and to act in closer agreement with Russia than will be agreeable to this country, or in accordance with our position in the Pacific whenever war should break out. It is as well that our military men, not less than our statesmen, should take this contingency into account in present ideas and future plans.

THE NEW TARIFF IN INDO-CHINA.

It is some consolation after all to English traders whose intercourse with the French possessions in Indo-China was brought to an end upon June 1 by a harsh and rashly-applied tariff that the French traders at Hanoi, who got it carried, and the local authorities who recommended it, have deeply injured the interests of the Dominions. A large Customs revenue was necessary to balance the Budget, and a highly prohibitive tariff was required to satisfy influential cotton-spinners and others at home. At the desire of the Hanoi Chamber of Commerce the French Parliament extended to Cochin China and Tong-King the general tariff, that is to say, the highest scale of taxation, such as is only applied to goods entering France from countries which neither have a treaty of commerce nor, as is the case with England, enjoy the most favoured treatment. Between France and her Eastern possessions trade was to be free. An interesting letter to the Temps from its Hanoi correspondent in date June 14, shows how utterly the attempt to seize the trade of a whilom open country has broken down. Among the chief articles of import was Chinese moist sugar shipped from Hong Kong at 26 shillings the picul. Under the new tariff it was subjected to a duty of 32 shillings. From the first days of June official traffic in that produce stopped. Smugglers began to bring it in by land and water, and their calling, subventioned, as it were, to the extent of 120 per cent., has risen to be a national one, in so far as supplying an enormous native need. As for their buying French refined sugar, it is out of the question unless they made ounces last as pounds. The cotton trade is similarly crippled. Whereas red cotton stuffs paid 7½d. before June 1, they are now taxed 2s. 2d. On blue twills the duty is 11d. instead of 4d., on fine coloured prints 3s. 8d. instead of 6d., and the monstrous duty of 1s. 11d. instead of 2½d. is now exacted on English and American cottons. Many manufactures come from Bombay, where handiwork and raw material are cheap, but now the Indian cotton spinners are erecting mills at Pondicherry, thus thwarting the plans of the Rouen monopolists. It is anticipated that the Customs receipts of the Port of Hanoi will fall below £4,000 for June, having been £10,400 in May, and by the time the French have supplanted foreign traders they will dwindle down to nothing.

The free-trade newspapers—rari nantes in gurgite vasto—strongly condemn the protective tariff to be introduced into French Indo-China. The Débats urges that the French merchants settled there will be ruined, for they chiefly sell foreign manufactures.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

M. Ferdinand de Lesseps has addressed a letter to the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company. He states that the general meeting of June 4, 1885, instructed the directors, as the works for the improvement of the Canal were carried out, to raise the means necessary to meet the expenses to the extent of f.100,000,000. The chairman of the directors had on a previous occasion stated that in whatever way the funds necessary for the completion of the works were raised, he should propose to reserve for the shareholders a privilege in the formation of this capital. It is in fulfilment of this promise that the board of directors places at the disposal of the shareholders of the company the bonds now issued to meet the improvements which are being carried out in 1887, or are to be carried out in 1888. Each shareholder is entitled to one bond for every three shares held by him. The form will be that of a three per cent. bond, second series, yielding f.15 per annum, payable half-yearly, with deduction of taxes, repayable in seventy-five years by means of an annual drawing. The price of these bonds to the shareholders has been fixed at f.380. To make use of his privilege the shareholder must appear with his share certificates at the Rue Charras, Paris, or at the agencies of the company in France or abroad, between Sept. 1 and 10.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

At Kiungani, one mile from the city of Zanzibar, is a Boys' Home, tenanted by liberated slave children from Equatorial Africa. Amongst them Mr. Madan has laboured for a period of five years, seeing in the while many strange sights and hearing many a marvellous story. Impressed with the value and importance of getting a true and accurate account of the adventures—or rather misadventures—of these helpless waifs, he induced several lads to put down in their own dialects the story of their lives, and, this done, he translated the MS., and now presents it to the public under the title of "Kiungani."

"Geographer, anthropologist, philanthropist, all may find material to their hand, not very abundant, perhaps, or exact, but of its kind genuine, and as here presented almost unique." Such, in the words of the author, are the results of his labours. The narrative is chiefly interesting as serving to throw light upon the slave trade of Equatorial Africa, with all its horrors and all its cruelties. From this point of view the work demands careful perusal. But apart from this humanitarian aspect of the matter, there is much to interest in the stories which embody the "folk-lore" of the African Continent. Amongst them are to be found much that is curious and more that is quaint. Our old friend the fox appears as the rabbit whom no one can deceive, but who deceives all. The episode of Joseph and his master's wife finds expression in the fidelity of a slave who is tempted in like circumstances. Why do rats always infest houses? One of Mr. Madan's tales will explain the reason. "Man, when you get wealth use it with self-restraint, and God will bless you by it," is the moral of another story replete with instruction, and by no means lacking in dramatic interest.

Such, in brief outline, is "Kiungani." Plain, simple, unpretentious, it is a new chapter in the world of letters, and an hour or two may be worse spent than in learning how they "live, move, and have their being" in the wilds of a region hallowed by the memories of one of England's greatest sons—the honoured missionary, Livingstone.

THE SILVER POUND.†

"No measure short of restoring a fixed par between silver and gold at a rate as near as possible to that which formerly obtained will meet the requirements of the time." This is plain and clear, showing distinctly that Mr. Horton is a "Bimetallist." The sentence also is refreshing, as indicating an amount of perspicacity quite unusual in works on currency; but as the reader proceeds further the golden dream of finding somewhat which can be "understanded of the people" vanishes like thin air, and the volume is read and re-read with an air of bewilderment and regret—bewilderment that so much ability is brought to bear upon the subject as to display the writer in a higher atmosphere not breathable by poor ordinary folks; regret that with so much ability there is an entire absence of the power of conveying to others what the author himself knows at his fingers' ends.

Why and how is this? The fault, or peculiarity, is common to all who treat upon financial matters of the nature at issue, and it must, therefore, be supposed that there is an inherent abstruseness in the sight which defies all attempts at simplicity. Take an instance. What is the plain purport of such a paragraph as this:—"The reader can obtain a glimpse into the subtleties of this matter of 'preference for gold' if he dwells thoughtfully upon the psychological condition of the plexus of business communities to Europe, &c., &c." We plead ignorance as to the meaning of the last phrase. It may allude to bimetallism, or to anything under the sun so far as we can interpret its hidden mysteries.

To attempt to analyse a work which, we confess, we do not ourselves understand, would be little better than the "blind leading the blind." As far as we can gather the drift of the writer's arguments, the introduction of a double standard would not only restore the poor rupee to its proper and normal rate of exchange, but would render the agricultural profession profitable, and the farming of land financially successful. If this be so, in the name of Heaven let the measure be tried. To an uninitiated mind it seems a simple means to ensure a grand result; but surely something must be done in the direction of the tillage of the soil. Be it free-trade that is wrong, be it the coinage that is the offender, it matters not. So long as a remedy be found, that is all which concerns the public. If to this inestimable boon of fertile and productive fields be added the further good fortune of a rise of exchange, which will bring up the rupee to par, it may well be conceded that the author of such good things as pass man's understanding is worthy of a niche in the temple of fame. It may be hoped that Mr. Horton's theories are as sound as his enthusiasm in his cause is genuine and sincere.

THE GREAT SILVER RIVER.*

So much has been written as to Brazil that Sir Horace Rumbold can scarcely expect—indeed, does not pretend—to have much that is new to tell the public; but, even from this point of view, his work conveys a fair amount of information in an eminently readable form; and, as he himself points out, his account of a visit to the out-of-the-way regions of Uruguay, amidst the scenes of early Jesuit triumphs, is attractive and novel, though, en passant, it may be questioned whether all his readers will extend to the worthy Fathers the unqualified praise which the author places at their disposal.

The portion of the work, however, which is entitled to, and will doubtless receive, most attention is the chapter wherein Sir Horace examines the question as to the advantage or otherwise of Brazil as a field of emigration from home. Possessing, as Minister on the part of England, a position of huge responsibility, it may be assumed that he has kept in mind the necessity of weighing well his words in regard to a question of such surpassing magnitude, while his official standing exempts him from the temptation of "writing up" a country to serve some individual interest. And what is his verdict? On the whole, decidedly favourable. "To those in England who may be allured by the prospects so temptingly displayed, I would say—Come out by all means, but do so with your eyes well open. Bear in mind that if there is much that is good here, there is not a little that is evil. No better field probably exists for patient, self-relying industry, backed by a moderate amount of capital; but whoever comes here to settle, and try his hand at farming or stock-breeding in the Pampas, must first of all be prepared for rude contests with uncontrollable natural forces, in the shape of destructive tempests and desolating droughts, plagues of locusts and wide-spreading murrain." He then proceeds to point out the loneliness and insecurity of life which a settler must be prepared to face before he can pocket his large returns or capital, or reap the harvest of success. This is plain, honest, practical advice, and stamps Sir Horace as a sound and sincere adviser, upon whom the public can bear with confidence and safety. Pleasure and profit is the motto which may fitly be inscribed on the frontispiece of the "Great Silver River."

SIR MAXWELL MELVILL, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., died at Poonah on the 5th inst. After serving in the Bombay Revenue and Judicial Departments as assistant collector and magistrate, he was sent to Scinde as Judicial Assistant Commissioner in 1866, and in the same year he became Judge of the Sudder Court. In 1868-69 he was appointed one of the Commissioners to inquire into the failure of the Bank of Bombay. In 1871 he was appointed Judge of the Bombay High Court, which post he held until, in April, 1884, he was nominated member of the Governor's Council. In 1886 he was made a C.S.I., and his name appeared among the first recipients of the new honour of a K.C.I.E. He was tempted more than once to give up his career in India for a seat on the India Council at home, but his health forbade it.

General Edward Price, C.B., Colonel Commandant of the Royal Artillery, died on the 13th inst., at his residence in Gledhow-gardens, in his seventy-second year. The deceased officer served in India at the outbreak of the mutiny in 1857, and commanded the artillery at the siege and capture of Kotah, in Rajputana, the action at Saugor, and the defeat of the rebels on the right bank of the Bunnas. His name was mentioned in despatches, and he received the Indian medal, with the Companionship of the Bath. From 1865 to 1876 he was inspector and purchaser of horses for the remounts of the Royal Artillery. Since 1883 he has been Colonel Commandant of the Royal Artillery.

THAT most expensive of hill-stations, Darjeeling, is said to be—not under a cloud, for it is in that state during most of the year, but—under some mysterious ban. It is deserted by all but the permanent "children of the mist"—the school-girls and school-boys, nurses and babies, and wives mourning for their husbands far away on the burning plains. The place is so dull that invalids sent there to recruit their strength have been obliged to flee precipitately to the places whence they came, dreading melancholia more than malaria, and the club is said to be inhabited by the honorary secretary and one unhappy companion. "It's an ill wind," &c.—the proverb is sometimes musty; but if the result of this desolation is to reduce house rents and hotel and boarding-house charges to something within the limits of reason, Bengal will eventually have cause for jubilation.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE STORY OF THE RUBY MINES.

THIS story has at length been told officially in a Parliamentary paper, but not very satisfactorily after all. It is curious why there should have been any concealment about the matter, but the information which has now been made public appears to have been dragged out of the Government only after much outside pressure. On the 25th of February, 1886, the Viceroy telegraphed to the Secretary of State for India that it was proposed to give a provisional lease of the Burma Ruby Mines to Messrs. Gillanders Arbuthnot of Calcutta and Rangoon, on condition of an annual payment by them of two lacs of rupees and a free examination by the Government of the firm's accounts; the lease to be terminable at the end of any year by Government or lessees on six months' notice. This telegram, which seems to have been founded on a Report from Mr. Bernard, further stated that this appeared to be the best arrangement which the Government of India, with the information at its disposal, could make. "Gillanders Arbuthnot," thus ran the Viceroy's telegram, "have had much to do with the Ruby trade and present Native lessees, and are ready to work with the latter as far as may be necessary, and generally to give satisfactory assurances. Do you approve?" To this the Secretary of State for India wired back to the Viceroy on March 4, 1886, "I have no objection to offer." On the 27th of that month, however, the Viceroy of India telegraphs to the Secretary of State: "Captain Aubrey Patton, representing Syndicate which comprises Streeter, offers three lacs per annum for lease of Ruby Mines. Could you make inquiries, and inform me whether the proposals are bonâ fide, and the Syndicate good for the amount?" The Secretary of State telegraphs back: "Proposals bonâ fide. Streeter believed to have sufficent means, but, as Syndicate is to be formed after concession received, I advise caution lest it might fail, and so damage value of property." About a fortnight afterwards there is a third bid for the Ruby property, and the Viceroy telegraphs: "Local house offers three lacs, and Streeter's agent offers four. Do you consider that latter offer may be accepted?" The Secretary of State thinks that there are some "obvious advantages" in securing a local firm, but leaves the decision with the Viceroy. In the meantime a newspaper report has got abroad that a concession has been granted to a French company. This alarms the Secretary of State, who wires to the Viceroy to "telegraph facts." His Excellency replies that the report in question is unfounded, and that the highest offer for lease of the mines was made on behalf of Messrs. Streeter, and that the intention of the Government was to accept that offer if certain details could be satisfactorily arranged. In accordance with this decision a draft agreement was actually drawn out between Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, on the one hand, and Messrs. Streeter and Co., of London, on the other, in which, for the consideration of the payment of an annual sum of four lacs of rupees in quarterly instalments, the lease of the Ruby Mines was to be granted to Messrs. Streeter and Co. for five years and six months from November 1st, 1887, under certain conditions. Under these conditions the rights of Native miners were fairly secured, the lessees guaranteeing that they would not mine within twenty-five yards of any licensed claim, and consenting to submit all disputes or questions to the decision of the Deputy Commissioner of the district. Very elaborate draft rules were drawn out defining this contract with Messrs. Streeter, whose agent was allowed to accompany the field force, which advanced and took possession of the mining district. But further complication arose. Another competitor came upon the scene. A Mr. Moritz Urger, the representative of "certain unnamed European capitalists," did not make a definite offer, but hinted that better terms might be secured through him as the agent of a "very wealthy syndicate in Paris" when geological and other surveys had been made, and the country become "sufficiently safe." This was rather discounting the future, but Mr. Unger, not producing any credentials and not making any definite offer, the Government of India inclined to rest upon the arrangement which they had almost concluded with Messrs. Streeter. That arrangement has now fallen through, owing no doubt to the agitation which has taken place in the Press and in Parliament about this matter. Under the Native dynasty these mines never produced a revenue exceeding one and a-half lacs of rupees per annum. Messrs. Streeter offered four lacs, and this appears to have been a very good bargain on behalf of the Government of India. It has, however, now been quashed, and the latest despatch from the India Office, dated August 4th, informs all the competitors that "in the absence of full information with regard to the value of the Burmese Ruby Mines, or the probable effect of bringing to bear upon them, for the first time, the application of capital and the results of modern invention in the shape of machinery and explosives, Viscount Cross does not feel justified in sanctioning at present any lease or engagement."

His Lordship proposes without delay to take steps to inform himself upon these points.

In the meantime, if newspaper reports can be trusted, the Mines are being worked by the Government of India officials on the spot at a loss. The competitors for the concession are all dissatisfied—there is a talk of legal proceedings being taken against the Government—and this has been the result of what has been called "healthy agitation" in Parliament on this subject.

COLONEL W. P. LATOUCHE, S.C., will succeed Colonel J. M. Sexton, S.C., as Superintendent of Army Clothing.

MAJOR REGINALD HENNELL, General List, Infantry, having completed twenty-six years' service, has been appointed to be Lieutenant-Colonel, and Captain John Newman Walker, S.C., having completed twenty years' service, has been promoted to a majority.

DEPUTY SURGEON-GENERAL L. S. BRUCE, I.M.S., having been allowed furlough to Europe for 182 days, Brigade Surgeon W. E. Cates will act for him, with the temporary rank of Deputy Surgeon-General.

SURGEON-MAJOR FRANCIS JONES, I.M.S., will retire on the 2nd prox. on a pension of £292.

THE proposed scheme for the reduction of the Mhow Arsenal and conversion of the Poona Ordnance depôt into a Second Class Arsenal has been shelved, the Government of India holding the opinion that the latter would be utterly unprotected by defensive works.

THE 18th Bengal Infantry on return from the Chindwin Valley goes to Jubbulpore, displacing the 2nd Madras Infantry, which proceeds to Secunderabad.

AN officer absent on leave in India when the order for his removal from the Indian Establishment is received at his regiment or station, will, from the date he ceased to draw Indian pay and allowances, be granted the personal allowance until his departure from the country, provided he is entitled to British pay, half-pay, or retired pay, and a passage, and proceeds to the part of embarkation with the least possible delay.

THE tenure of the appointment of Administrative Medical Officer, Quetta District, has been limited to four years.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the formation of a Company of Sappers and Miners for service in Burma, to be composed of half Burmans, quarter Shans, and the other quarter of Ka-Chins and Karens. The Company will be affiliated to the Madras Corps of Sappers and Miners.

GARRISON batteries at a distance from arsenals and depôts will under the sanction of the Inspector-General of Ordance, be allowed a reserve blank ammunition of not more than one year's supply for firing salutes.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR CHARLES GOUGH, Commanding the Oudh Division, has been granted privilege leave to England from the 15th August, 1887.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JACKSON, Second in Command of the 12th Bengal Cavalry, has been appointed to the command of the 5th Bengal Cavalry, vacant by the death of Colonel Shakespear.

A MAN, named Bhagat Singh, of Amritsar, claims to have discovered an invention which can be used for committing notes of reconnaissance, &c., to paper on occasions when ordinary writing is difficult or impossible, such as on very dark nights, or in the open in stormy and wet weather. His instruments are a stick with several cross bars and a reel of thread. He winds the threads about the bars according to the observations he wishes to record, and, on unwinding the thread, writes off his memoranda from its convolutions. He claims to be able to twist up a memo in the greatest darkness, to be able to put his record into his pocket, and to be able to unwind and read it off hours afterwards. He has a special alphabet, and reads off his thread backward. The whole process is very slow and laborious, and is not likely to be of much practical value.

THE following appointments in the Bengal Army have been made:—

1st Bengal Cavalry—Captain W. H. Cazalet, Squadron Commander, to move up in grade succession, vice Captain R. F. Gartside-Tipping, seconded; Captain C. H. Hayes, Squadron Officer, to be Squadron Commander, vice Captain Cazalet; and Lieutenant H. L. Roberts, attached, to be permanent Squadron Officer.

2nd Bengal Cavalry—Lieutenant S. F. Crocker, attached to the 18th Bengal Infantry, to be officiating Squadron Officer on probation.

4th Bengal Cavalry—Captains H. C. Lamb and E. H. H. Montressor, Squadron Commanders, to move up in grade succession, vice Lieutenant-Colonel D. Adamson, retired; Captain W. G. Yate, Squadron Officer, to be Squadron Commander; and Lieutenant H. G. Stainforth, attached to the 2nd Bengal Cavalry, to be permanent Squadron Officer.

6th Bengal Cavalry—Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. Fletcher, Squadron Commander, to officiate as second in command, vice Lieutenant-Colonel E. G. Newnham, deceased.

10th Bengal Lancers—Lieutenant Cardew, attached to the 33rd Bengal Infantry, to be officiating Squadron Officer, on probation.

12th Bengal Cavalry—Lieutenant C. H. Schlesinger, 18th Bengal Infantry, to be officiating Squadron Officer, on probation.

1st Bengal Infantry—Lieutenant W. E. F. Burlton, attached to the regiment, to be permanent Wing Officer, vice Major D. W. Hickman, transferred to the 34th Pioneers.

15th Sikhs—Lieutenant W. A. L. Cowie, from the 6th Bengal Infantry, to be permanent Wing Officer, vice Lieutenant Cole, transferred to the 2nd Battalion 2nd Goorkhas.

16th Bengal Infantry—Lieutenant A. B. Harvey, attached to the regiment, to be permanent Wing Officer, vice Captain A. Montanaro, promoted.

26th Punjab Infantry—Lieutenant C. I. H. Williamson, from the 16th Bengal Infantry, to be permanent Wing Officer, vice Lieutenant C. C. Anderson, seconded.

37th Dogras—Lieutenant Campbell to be Quartermaster.

39th Bengal Infantry—Lieutenant R. E. H. Dyer, West Surrey Regiment, to be officiating Wing Officer, on probation.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA HEADQUARTERS.

The despatch of the Government of India on the annual transfer of its headquarters to Simla went Home some time ago, and although the reply of the Secretary of State has not yet been received a telegraphic summary is understood to have reached the Viceroy. The following is quoted as a trustworthy summary of the final conclusions of the Government of India, as sent home to the Secretary of State :—

1. That it is essential that the Viceroy should spend a portion of the year on tour in the Indian provinces.

2. That it is impossible to separate the Council from the Governor-General, except during the period of his tour.

3. That the duties of the Government of India to the Empire, as a whole, will be best discharged by appropriating the year.

(a) to residence at Calcutta during its busiest season, for a time adequate to the importance of its interests and those of Bengal, and sufficient for the legislation which is the most appropriately undertaken there ;

(b) to movement among other provinces as circumstances may require ;

(c) to residence at a hill station, where, at a season when heat and rain render residence in the plains unfavourable to administrative vigour, the Government of India may exercise its control of all local administrations, may be in contact with Army Headquarters, may carry on the preliminaries of its legislative business, and enact such laws as may best be dealt with at such residence.

4. That the permanent location of the Government of India at any Presidency town would be adverse to efficient supervision of the interests of the Empire as a whole, and would establish a disproportionate provincial influence at the seat of Government inconsistent with impartial and well balanced rule.

5. That while in regard to facility of communication and proximity to the localities of greatest political interest a summer residence in Northern India is preferable the fact that a large expenditure has been incurred in adapting Simla for that purpose is adverse to any change which is not recommended by an indisputable superiority on the part of any other hill station ; and finally,

6. That the recurring annual expenditure incurred in the movements of Government and its residence at Simla is to a great extent inseparable from any movement, and therefore inevitable unless all movement is to be abandoned, and that the cost is inconsiderable compared with the great advantages thereby secured to the administration of the Empire.

It is believed that the India Office despatch in reply to this expression of opinion will be of a colourless character, and that no desire will be expressed to upset the arrangements of the Government of India in the matter, or to interfere with the Viceroy's entire liberty of movement.

A TRIP TO INDIA.—There are comparatively few who have realised that a trip to India and back, with a stay of two to three weeks there, is capable of accomplishment within the compass of a two months' holiday or even less. The P. and O. Company have done well to bring the fact prominently before the public in a practical form, and the tour which they are now organising bids fair to be as instructive as it will undoubtedly prove popular. Their fine new steamer Victoria, of 6,500 tons, the latest and most luxuriously fitted of their large fleet, is to leave London on the 1st October for Bombay, touching at Gibraltar, Malta, Egypt and Aden en route—a stay of twenty days at Bombay will give ample time for a visit to Ahmedabad, Ajmere, Jeypoor, Agra, Lucknow, Lahore, Benares, and numberless other places of interest ; and on the 11th November the Victoria will return, calling at Naples on her homeward journey. By making use of the ordinary mail route, vid Brindisi, one way, the time occupied in transit can apparently be much lessened, and the duration of stay in India lengthened, so as to suit all tastes ; while the cost to Bombay and back seems moderate enough, only £90. A more thorough rest and change to body and mind can hardly be conceived.

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxio to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle-on-Tyne
May 25, 1887.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

(Signed) LAMB AND ARMSTRONG, Architects.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

THE course of instruction is designed to PREPARE BOYS (Sons of Gentlemen, from 7 years of age) to occupy the positions of Land Owners and Occupiers, Land Agents, Surveyors, intending Colonists, &c. The education secured at this institution is of a very superior character, the whole object of the School being to impart a thoroughly practical and scientific knowledge of all agricultural subjects; a thorough moral, intellectual, and physical training, it pledges itself to send forth its pupils practically religious and sound scholars. The school is most pleasantly situated in a healthy locality. The greatest possible care is bestowed upon the health and domestic comfort of the pupils. The diet is excellent and unlimited. The school is very strongly recommended. References throughout Great Britain.—Address for prospectus the PRINCIPAL, Maypole Road, East Grinstead, Sussex.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scne from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 29, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 9th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 7th August; and from Calcutta to the 6th August.

THERE is little news of a political nature from the Headquarters of the Government at Simla. The plan for the Viceroy's annual tour had not yet been decided upon, but it was believed that his Excellency will probably visit the North-West Frontier during the autumn.

THE tour will include visits to Quetta and Karachi.

IT was intended to hold an Afghan dinner at Simla on September 1st, Sir Frederick Roberts presiding.

SIR MAXWELL MELVILL, who died at Bombay from dysentery on the 5th inst., was buried on the following day at Kirkee. General regret has been expressed throughout India at his loss. In a notification in a special Gazette his Excellency the Governor of Bombay paid a high tribute to the deceased for his "unaffected modesty, his tact, his generosity, and his unvarying courtesy towards all members of the European and Native community."

THE Governor of Madras is still on tour in his Presidency. His Military Secretary, Major Stewart Mackenzie, returns to England shortly, and will, it is said, be succeeded by Major Scott Chisholme, of the 9th Lancers, who exchanges into the 7th Dragoon Guards.

THE Government of Madras has reconsidered its decision not to permit the enrolment of Natives as Volunteers, and has now given permission, as the request was made "in a thoroughly loyal spirit at a time when war seemed imminent."

IT is reported that Sir West Ridgeway on his return to India will not go back to his appointment in the Foreign Office, but will be suitably provided for in the Political Department.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOT succeeds Sir Theodore Hope as Member of Council in charge of the Public Works Department when the latter retires in December next.

MR. BROUGHTON, Administrator-General of Bengal, takes six months' extension of leave from September 1st.

MR. SMEATON, Financial Secretary N.W.P., has returned from leave. Mr. Woodburn, Chief Secretary, takes three months' leave to England, his place being filled by Mr. Benett.

THE illness from which Sir Alfred Lyall has been suffering was a carbuncle on the leg, the pain and exhaustion from which were so great that at one time it was thought he would have to take leave to England, but this has fortunately now been averted.

THE Secretary of State has intimated that final orders on the Exodus Question will be delayed until all reports bearing upon the Local Governments and their annual transfer of headquarters to the hills are before him and have been considered.

THE Survey Department are busy on the preparation of a series of Indian crop maps, which will be the first of their kind yet published. The series will represent the cultivation of such important staples as wheat, cotton, rice, tea, tobacco, jute, and coffee.

THERE have been tremendous floods at Sandoway, over 35 inches of rain having fallen in five days.

CHANDA, in the Central Provinces, has been the scene of extraordinary floods.

THE Bengal-Nagpur Railway will not only provide a more direct railway route between Bombay and Calcutta than hitherto exists, but it will justify the laying of a new telegraph between those two ports.

MR. PRESTAGE, of the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway, has informed the Government of India that he is prepared to raise a company in England to undertake the construction and working of the Nilgiri and Umballa projected hill lines on the "adhesive system."

COLONEL MALLOCK, Deputy Director-General of Telegraphs, goes on a six months' leave shortly, when Mr. Brooke will officiate for him, and Mr. Luke as Director of Construction for Mr. Brooke.

ON return from leave Mr. W. R. H. Merk, C.S.I., will officiate as Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, vice Mr. E. O'Brien, as originally arranged. Mr. L. W. Dance's appointment to officiate for Mr. O'Brien has been cancelled.

THE mortality from cholera in Bombay is increasing.

THE Native papers comment very strongly on the reversal of the Bombay Government's decision in the Cambay case.

THE net receipts from Indian sea and land customs revenue, exclusive of the salt revenue, for the first three months of the current financial year, have amounted to Rs. 31,84,000, as compared with Rs. 30,44,000 during the corresponding period of last year.

CAPTAIN R. C. TEMPLE, Cantonment Magistrate, Mandalay, is about to open a Masonic Lodge and a Mark Master Mason's Lodge at Mandalay.

THE adventurous Frenchmen, MM. Bouvalot, Capus, and Pepin, who have chosen to travel to India by way of Central Asia and the Pamir, have reached Gilgit in safety, their way from Chitral having been made smooth by the Government of India.

CHOLERA is reported to have appeared at Kabul. The Amir has gone to his summer residence in the Paghman hills.

A SOLDIER of the Connaught Rangers shot himself at Jullundur recently, and left a note bequeathing his property to his brother.

FIVE and twenty candidates who used unfair means or misbehaved themselves at the recent Middle School Examinations of the Punjab University were duly "posted" in the Punjab Gazette.

THE progress of the new Oriental Bank has corresponded so closely with the revival of our planting industries, says the Ceylon Observer, that it is scarcely possible to attach too great importance to the evidence that its reports afford of its continued well-doing. It must certainly be taken into calculation that the business of the new Bank is carried on in many other places than in Ceylon; but it will, we think, be generally admitted that, since in the case of the institution it superseded the heavy losses sustained, due to the depression of our coffee industry, contributed largely to the failure of that Bank—so must the revival of our planting industries have specially contributed towards establishing the success of the new concern. The report before us is in singular contrast to the statement lately published of the course of business of one of the chief rivals both of the old and the new Oriental Bank and the Chartered Mercantile Bank. The transactions of the latter institution do not appear to have resulted at all prosperously during its last financial year, while those of the new Oriental Bank certainly may claim to have done so. It is difficult to see why it is that the causes which have been assigned in the report of the Chartered Mercantile for its temporary ill-success should not have been equally operative in the case of the new Oriental Bank. That they have not been so is patent from the report now before us. It is true that the additions to assets shown since the issue of the previous report have not advanced by the leaps and bounds which characterised the earlier experience of the Bank, but it was scarcely to be expected that the same proportion could continue.

NOTES.

THE escape of Ayoub Khan and his Chiefs from Teheran could hardly have happened without the connivance of the Persian Authorities, or to put it in the more delicate way of Reuter's telegram, "Ayoub Khan had not been very carefully watched." If it be true that a week elapsed before his flight was discovered, the surveillance must have been slight indeed. That "it is believed" that he saved systematically a portion of the allowance made him by the British Government is likely enough, but it may also be believed that he did not want for funds from other sources. If he has got safely into Russian territory he will no doubt meet with a hearty welcome at Moscow, where he will find Dhulip Singh, Suchait Singh, and other malcontents.

BUT he, as a soldier and as a commander who has proved his ability on the field of battle, will win more respect from Muscovite Generals who are anxious to gain glory in Asia that fugitive Indian princes who have been only followers of pleasure and intrigues. Suchait Singh, however, would not have been one of the latter had justice been done to him in the matter of his claim to the Chamba succession. He had the instincts of a gentlemen and the heart of a soldier; but soured by misfortune, and what he held to be a cruel wrong done to him by the Government of the Punjab, he became despairing and dissipated. His case is altogether a sad one, and very different from that of Dhuleep Singh's.

MR. NICOLSON, the British Chargé d'Affaires at Teheran, if telegrams tell truth, must have great confidence in Persian veracity. It is said that he gave many warnings that Ayoub Khan was not being very carefully watched. After the escape of Taj Muhammed Khan and other of the Afghan chiefs "suspicions were aroused," but the Persian authorities assured Mr. Nicolson that Ayoub was in his house. And Mr. Nicolson believed this until he discovered that Ayoub had made his escape with the others a week previously.

THE rumour that Ayoub has taken flight in the direction of Herat is thus commented on by the Novoe Vremya, of St. Petersburg:—

The Persian Government has no interest whatever in interfering with the events which may ensue after the appearance of Ayoub Khan in Herat. It may even surmise that such events will be far from unpleasant to Russia, whose good will the Shah continues to value more and more. It may easily transpire that Ayoub, anxious to consolidate his position at Herat, will apply for Russian protection for himself and his country on bases similar to those governing our relations with Bokhara. It would hardly be possible to refuse such a request in view of the position which we occupy in Central Asia. No doubt this would be highly unpalatable to the British Government; but what is to be done if events are leading with such fatality to the solution of the Central Asian question foreseen and predicted many years ago by the Duke of Argyll—a solution discredited among English Conservatives, who believed, or pretended to believe, in the famous theory of the "Afghan buffer?"

This is candid enough in all conscience. Persia is in the hands of Russia, and all the tall talk in certain quarters here of the advisability of England immediately taking steps to regain her influence with the Shah is nonsense. It is too late now to make the attempt.

THE work done by the Survey Officers with the Afghan Boundary Commission certainly deserves special notice, for they surveyed no less than 120,000 square miles of Afghan territory. The whole of the province of Herat, including the hitherto unknown Tunani and Firozkuhi country, was mapped; almost the entire province of Afghan Turkestan, with a large portion of the Hazara country, in the neighbourhood of Bamian, was reconnoitered, and on the return march of the Commission all the important passes in the Hindu Khush were surveyed. In Gilghit Colonel Woodthrope, while attached to the Ghilgit Mission, executed surveys of the districts of Yasin, Chitral, Hunza, and Wakkan, which contain a mass of valuable information hitherto unknown.

THE Madras Mail says:—"The Press reporter, who lately interviewed the Nawab Sir Salar Jung of Hyderabad at Constantinople, allowed his zeal to outrun his knowledge. Sir Salar Jung is a Shia Mussulman, and even granting that the thirty millions of Sunni Mahomedans in India look upon the Ottoman Sultan as the legitimate successor to the Kaliphate, the Shias at all events can only regard him as a heretic and an impostor. This little difference of creed would seem to cast some suspicion on the report of Sir Salar Jung's interviewer, who was probably not aware of it."

IT is of course, gratifying to see that so hearty a response is being made in all directions to Lady Roberts's appeal for homes in the hills for the lady Sisters in the military hospitals in India, but it should be borne in mind that lady Sisters are not so urgently needed as nurses. A correspondent to an Indian contemporary very properly calls attention to this fact. He points out that Sisters are ward superintendents, and not actual nurses. He is correct in saying that nursing does not exist in Indian hospitals, mainly because the Native Hospital corps is a wretched farce—a body of underpaid coolies without training or organisation. His suggestion is that 200 European soldiers should be trained for war use in the front and in the field hospitals, as female nurses could not be expected in case of a campaign to serve beyond the base of operations. Many, however, would volunteer to do so.

THE Native Press of Bengal has long been under the ban of reproach for its self-conceit and arrogance in attempting political attention in order to get power and place for the Hindus. It is a surprise, but not the less a gratifying one, to find the following in a late issue of one of those journals:—

Our social, moral, and religious debasement is the only cause of our present national degradation. How to remove such degradation should be our constant care. The discussion of politics will not help us much in this matter. Our Press should devote more space to the ventilation of social, moral, and religious questions. Our public bodies also should be more mindful of such questions, and steps should be taken at once to hold a national gathering annually for the purpose of considering all matters coming under the category we have mentioned.

This is from a Native paper printed in English, but a paper printed in the vernacular reproduces it with approval. This is more gratifying still.

THE Bombay Gazette calls the attention of Mr. Charles Marvin, who, it says, "is as excited about petroleum in Burma as Mr. Samuel Smith is about toddy in Bengal," to the increasing demand in Burma for kerosine oil from the United States, showing that the Burmese are not as persuaded as Mr. Marvin is of the value of their own oil. American kerosine is stated to be rapidly superseding it, and this notwithstanding the fact that the monopoly in it formerly held by the Native governments has been done away with since our annexation of the country.

THE Rangoon Press opposes the policy which has found favour in high quarters at home of pushing on a railway towards the frontier touching the Shan States, advocating rather the development of the country we already hold and letting the Trans-frontier trade grow in its own way. The true policy of the British Government, it says, is to extend railways wherever they are most needed within its own boundaries, and let extensions in the Shan States, or Siam, or any still nominally independent territory wait until the people through whose land they are to run ask for them.

THE following, taken from the letter of a Simla correspondent, looks like a repetition of old times. Patronage as well as history repeats itself:—"Now is the time for anyone with a good voice, who is gasping on the plains, and is hard up for an appointment, to come up for ten days to Simla and sing on the Ridge. As soon as his presence is known he will be offered a berth in the Foreign Office, the Intelligence Department, the Post Office, or the Revenue or Agriculture, or any other department in which the emoluments are large and the work light. It is an acknowledged truth that no one who can act or sing need come up to Simla with the hope of bettering himself in vain."

INDIA.

[CALCUTTA, AUG. 28.

Two more accounts of interviews with Native chiefs who have returned from the Jubilee festivities in England have been published. They differ altogethee from Holkar's complaints.

Maharajah Sir Pertab Singh of Jodhpore, who arrived in Bombay on Monday, informed a representative of the Times of India that he was most favourably impressed with what he had seen during the Jubilee celebrations. The arrangements had been perfect and everything had passed off well. He thought England a mighty country, inhabited by a mighty people. He did not know that any Native Prince had been insulted; in fact, the authorities had done all in their power for the convenience and comfort of their charges. For himself, he had no reason to grumble, but on the contrary every reason to feel grateful for the kindness and courtesy shown him during the whole trip. Holkar, he thought, had his own views in certain matters; but for himself, he would not have felt insulted if close and unremitting attention had not been given to him by the authorities—fully occupied as they were.

The Maharajah of Bhurtpore's deputation, who returned on the same day, stated that they had enjoyed the trip immensely. The Jubilee celebration was the grandest spectacle they had ever witnessed, and the illuminations were especially magnificent. The treatment which they received had far exceeded their expectations; they had experienced nothing but kindness and courtesy wherever they had been. They had seen the Queen three times, and they describe her as "awfully gracious." On being questioned about Holkar they replied that all the Native Princes had been treated very well, and he as well as the rest. They had heard nothing to the contrary while in London.

The Pioneer is publishing by instalments a long account of impressions of England written by one of the Native Cavalry officers. He and his comrades seem to have enjoyed themselves thoroughly, and to have been delighted with everything they saw.

Promising accounts are received from the Punjab regarding the prospects of obtaining a supply of petroleum near Rawul-Pindi. The boring effected last May has now a quadrupled outturn, and an expert has pronounced the oil to possess very valuable illuminating and lubricating qualities. It is hoped, if the Government sanctions the use of the newest kinds of apparatus and deep borings, that a large quantity of oil may be produced, and effect considerable economy in working the State railways.

Thakore Singh Sindhanwalia, a Sikh nobleman who has lately been intriguting in India in the interests of the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, died at Pondicherry on the 18th instant.

It is believed that Sir West Ridgeway, on his return to India, will be appointed to the important post of Governor-General's Agent for Rajpootana.

The French travellers, MM. Bonvalot, Papas, and Pepin arrived in Simla on Wednesday, and after an interview with the Viceroy started on Friday for home. The Lahore Civil and Military Gazette, gives a summary of their journey. They left Teheran in April last year and proceeded by the Meshed and Herat boundary, and visited Khorassan, Sarakhs, Merv, Bokhara and Samarcand. Thence they were ordered back, but eventually they went by Kokan, Margilan, Osch, Toultcha, and Akbasvga to the Yadish Pass, and across the Alai mountains. The cold there froze the mercury, and the air was so rarefied that they could hardly breathe. The snow was seven feet deep, and sometimes they were obliged to travel at night to avoid avalanches, and to follow the follow the footprints of wolves in order to find the road. They could only travel about four miles daily. They started with 150 horses, but their followers deserted daily, taking horses and baggage. They next went to Kizi Arvat, crossed the Karakul Lake to Ohtach, and thence went to Wakhan, Serhod, and Chitral. At last they had almost nothing left, and lived eight days on flour and mutton. At Chitral the Indian Government sent them three thousand rupees.

BURMAH.

RANGOON, AUG. 28.

Mr. Crosthwaite has returned to Mandalay from the Chindwin valley. He proceeded as far as Paungbyin, visiting all posts situate along the river. The people assembled in large numbers along the route to see the Chief Commissioner. Small durbars were held at Alon, Mingin, and Kendat to enable Mr. Crosthwaite to make acquaintance with the notables of the various districts. There is no appearance of scarcity in the Chindwin Valley. The Chief Commissioner was much impressed by the promising appearance of the districts traversed.

On Mr. Crosthwaite's arrived in Mandalay on the evening of the 25th a conspiracy to cause a rising in the town was detected and suppressed. It is stated that the plans were prematurely divulged, owing to the leaders of the plot having been alarmed by the salute fired in honour of the Chief Commissioner's return. The conspiracy appears to have been a petty affair, no men of importance being engaged in it.

Mr. Fforde, Superintendent of Police at Mandalay, who was recently granted five acres of valuable public land in Mandalay at a nominal price, professedly as a site for a residence, has been transferred to the Ruby Mines district. No house has been erected on this land, which Mr. Fforde is at liberty to resell, and of which he will certainly be able to dispose at a greatly enhanced price.

LADY ROBERTS'S SCHEME.

(Bombay Gazette.)

No appeal that could be made to the European community in India, and to all at home who are interested in the European army serving in this country, could come with more urgent claims upon their help. Happily, the essential features of Lady Roberts's scheme have been adopted by the Government of India. They have undertaken, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, to bear the cost of a staff of nursing sisters at Rawul Pindi and Umballa. There will be a lady superintendent and six Sisters in the one case, and a lady superintendent and twelve Sisters in the other, and it is hoped this will be the beginning of a much larger undertaking, which will embrace Poonr, Mhow, Secunderabad, Bangalore, and the large military stations in Bengal. The need for this work is very easily demonstrated. Nowhere but in this country, with few exceptions, is the British soldier deprived of the skilled and gentle nursing which the trained Sister alone can give. At home, where the need for it is less urgent than here, the nursing sisters have been found a necessity. They have been found a necessity also in every recent campaign—a necessity and a blessing. They have saved life, and when this has been beyond their power they have soothed the dying hours of the British soldier with a gentle presence and a devoted attention. But the best way of appreciating the need of them is to consider the lot of the British officer or soldier in India who has to pass through an illness without them. He is dependent upon the orderly on duty for the day, that is to say, upon one who has no knowledge of the art of nursing; whose hand is heavy, who has no interest in his duty, and who, even if he does his best, and does not discharge his duty in a perfunctory way, still makes a most indifferent nurse. We have to think of the provision that is thus made, and then we have to think of the necessities which it often has to meet, of the enteric fever to which the younger portion of the army are so prone, and in which the hope of recovery, with scarcely an exception, depends upon the nursing which the patient gets. It is one of the commonplaces of the subject of enteric fever that as much or more depends upon the nurse than on the doctor. The part that the public are invited to take in the enterprise is the provision of hot weather resting places in the hills for the ladies who, for the greater part of the year, will labour in this good cause in the plains. To bring them to India without making provision for the conservation of their health would be to run the risk of failure, and this part of the burden the public in India and at home will surely share between them. Ladies are now being selected in England for the work; they will come out in November, and it is hoped that by next hot weather some refuge from the heat will be prepared for those who have toiled in this work of mercy in the plains.

CORONERS' INQUESTS IN BOMBAY.

(Bombay Gazette.)

In reference to the necessity, to which we recently drew attention, of providing a check upon the practice which is believed to prevail of carrying off people by arsenical poison, especially during a time of cholera epidemic, the symptoms being similar to those of choleraic poisoning, a Hindu gentleman of experience says that a serious difficulty in the way of holding coroners' inquests in cases of suspicion arises from the delay that is involved when one coroner has to hold the inquests required in a population of some eight hundred thousand people. According to Hindu custom no member of a household in which a death takes place can eat or drink until the body be consumed by fire. The enforced abstinence applies even to women and young children and the ailing. The notice that a coroner's inquest will be held must in most cases delay incremation for twenty-four hours or more. This is so well known that the dread of the delay causes the relatives and neighbours to hurry the funeral in cases where sudden or unexplained death might, if the police came to hear of it, bring about an inquest. The body is borne to the burning ground and consumed before the police can hear of the death; then, of course, inquiry is impossible. What is required, our informant says, is a coroner in each of the seven districts of the city, who can hold an inquest, and if necessary order a post mortem examination without delay, so that in any case the body may be incremated the same evening. There is no objection to the autopsy provided a medical man of fitting caste be employed. The suggestion is worth consideration, and there ought to be no difficulty in carrying it into effect if the Government and the Municipality approve of it.

INCENDIARY FEES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

We are glad to see that the serious attention of Government has been directed to the crime of rick-burning, which is so prevalent at a certain period of the year. During the hot, dry months of May and June the harvested crops lie collected in the fields at wells, or in some parts on the open space adjoining the village site, like so much tinder that a spark will ignite. Day after day during this time the heart of the District Officer is made sad by reports from all quarters of the occurrence of fires by which the cultivator in a few minutes loses the whole of his store—all that he has to depend on for the support of his family and of his cattle and for the payment of his revenue. The injury is often much more extensive, the greater part of the crops of a whole village being destroyed. These fires are in many cases due to accident—the overturning of a hookah, for instance; but they are more often the work of incendiaries, and no more easy or safe way of paying off a grudge could be devised. It is the easiest thing in the world for the operator, on a dark night, to slip up and apply a light to one end of a rick while the watcher peacefully slumbers at the other end, quitely retiring when he has done to watch the result from a safe distance. When the fire occurs, and the police are called in, it is the most natural thing in the world that the owner should at once say, "An enemy hath done this thing;" and witnesses are forthcoming who will swear that they recognised some one with whom he has a standing feud running away from the spot at the time of the occurrence. The courts are not, however, as a rule inclined to believe such evidence, and convictions are consequently rare. The amount of loss that is annually inflicted on the agricultural population in this manner is far greater than is generally known. The District Magistrate of Lahore refers to the terrorism which bad characters are able to establish over respectable men by this form of crime, and remarks that "there is hardly any offence in which it is more difficult to obtain proof." He suggests as a remedy that the District Magistrate should be empowered, "where the mischief is proved to have been malicious, to award full compensation, and levy it on the village, or on a larger area, as may suit the circumstances of the case." It may be doubted whether, as he adds, "this would at once remove the motive for firing stacks and the terrorism of the bad characters." But, at all events, it is satisfactory to find that Government is inclined to favour some system of "mutual insurance against the injury done by undetected crimes of this kind."

MR. BRIGHT AND THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.

(Times of India.)

The subject under discussion by Mr. John Bright before the members of the East India Association was the advisability of affording increased employment to Natives in the administration of India. Mr. Bright's arguments did not travel beyond the broad general question, and, therefore, his expression of approval of the objects of the meeting carries little more weight than the notoriously useless "abstract resolution" that sometimes gets passed in the House of Commons. The public mind is at present not so much exercised with doubts as to whether Natives should be granted a greater share in the government of the country, as with working out the problem how the thing is to be managed without impairing the efficiency of the administraton. In arriving at a solution of this most difficult question, an ounce of practice will count far more than a ton of theory. Mr. Bright is on safe ground when he gives forth such rhetorical platitudes as that we shall more securely hold our position in India by a policy of justice and generosity than by government with the sword; the proposition is an axiom that no reasonable man will dispute. But Mr. Bright's arguments are very much more debatable when he comes down to the hard practical part of the problem. For example, he speaks of the free vernacular Press as truly reflecting the opinions of the Native population. Every one who has actual experience of India is aware that this is quite a false hypothesis to start from. Then, again, he reasons that the spread of education gives to the Natives a title to demand a greater share in the Government. He forgets to ask, however, whether the share already granted during recent years has not been fairly commensurate with the progress of education hitherto. "We must walk before we run" is an excellent old adage which Native agitators might take more to heart when dealing with this question. Mr. Bright's general advice is excellent. By all means let us be just and generous. But, by being over-just and over-generous to the fraction of the population who have acquired sufficient education to yearn for Government employment, we may be falling into the opposite error against the millions who are perfectly contented and fairly prosperous under the present regime, and who want to have nothing to do with "your educated Babu."

THE PUNJABIS AND INFANT MARRIAGE.

(Indian Messenger.)

In speaking of the Punjab, a distinction is to be made between the inhabitants of the large towns and those of the country. Then it is to be borne in mind that all Punjabis are not Sikhs—the Sikhs forming only a limited sect in that province. Amongst the Punjabis of the towns there is early marriage, in the sense in which it obtains in Bengal, and we mark its consequences on the physique of the race. The average Punjabi of the town, a Ghhetri or Brahmin boy, for instance, is hardly better in point of physique than the average Bengali boy. And the town-residing and early-marrying Sikhs are also fast degenerating in point of physical strength. Not so the Sikhs and the Jats of the country; there is no early marriage amongst them. Their men are not married till an advanced age, nor are their girls—as far as we have been able to gather from persons who have resided in the Punjab, and freely mixed with the people for upwards of a quarter of a century—married before they are of age. Turning to the Rajputs and Deswalis, we find there obtain two customs in those parts of the country. First, the men do not marry until pretty well advanced in life. Secondly, their girls, though married in childhood in many cases, are never allowed to see or live with their husbands till they have arrived at the age of puberty. A ceremony called gowna takes place when a girl arrives at puberty after which her parents begin to think of sending her to her husband's house and not before that period. Do not these customs practically obviate many of the physical evils consequent upon early marriage?

BENGAL.

NOTHING is now visible in the Hughli of the stranded steamer Maharatta beyond the top of her funnel and the upper part of her two masts, and these only at low water. Application has been made on behalf of a number of the Native passengers to the Port Officer for permission to employ a diver to examine the sunken wreck for the money and valuables which went down with her, and the required permission has been granted. One of the Natives who was on board lost several hundred rupees which were in his possession when he left Chandbally.

The Burdwan Adoption case has reached the final stage, but it is doubtful whether the litigation in the matter will now cease. On Saturday Lala Bun Behari Kapur's son was formally adopted by the Adhirani Maharani of Burdwan. The boy was made over to his adoptive mother with all the usual religious ceremonies in the presence of many Native and English spectators, and afterwards drove through the town in state. Before the ceremony the young Maharani had an interview with the Dowager Maharani, the first interview for some years, and although the Dowager Maharani did not formally sanction the adoption, it is believed a reconciliation took place.

REFERRING to the suggestion made by a correspondent of Calcutta paper that the Government of Bengal should, under the provisions of Regulation V. of 1823, punish the creditors of Mr. Beames for having lent him money, the Hindu Patriot says:—"The idea is a good one. The Mondals were in his jurisdiction, not in one but in three districts, viz, Hughli, Dacca and Balasore, and well knew what they were about. They should certainly be hauled over living coals. Unfortunately this cannot be done without resort to a Civil Court, and if the Government sends the case up to a Civil Court, Mr. Beames will have to appear as a witness. Is he prepared to stand the fire of a smart cross-examination? There's the rub."

THE Englishman gives the following account of the suicide of Mr. W. McBean:—"Last evening Chowringhi-road was a scene of unusual bustle and commotion caused by the announcement that a European gentleman had shot himself in his carriage. It appears that while Mr. W. McBean, a broker, was going in his carriage along Chowringhi-road, opposite Messrs Whiteaway Laidlow and Co.'s premises, with the doors closed, the coachman heard the report of firearms inside, and stopped the conveyance. On opening the door he found that the deceased was lying quite dead, with a revolver near his feet. The bullet had traversed his skull and lodged in the roof of the conveyance. The conveyance having been engaged by the deceased from Messrs. Brown and Co. at job work, the coachman knew his residence, and drove him to the Cullinga Bazar Thana, which he thought was the place where the inquiry should be instituted, as deceased resided in Middleton Row. The police at this station directed that the deceased should be taken to the Park-street

Thana, where the matter was reported to the Superintendent of the division. The body was then taken to the police dead-house, in the Medical College Hospital. The deceased, it would appear, had purchased the revolver from Messrs. Manton and Co. for Rs. 35 during the day, with fifty cartridges, and a packet was found on his person which disclosed the fact that he was in pecuniary trouble.

MADRAS.

LOCAL manufactures are receiving that attention which they ought to from the authorities in the Madras Presidency. The Government of India have just authorised the Superintendent of Army Clothing, Madras, to enter into a two years' contract with the Egerton Woollen Mills Company for the supply of the great coat cloth required for the Madras Infantry. The Government of India view with satisfaction the progress that is being made in the direction of utilizing local manufactures in this Presidency.

THE official returns of the outturn of the cotton and late indigo crops in the Madras Presidency up to the 31st of May last, show that the total outturn of cotton, calculated at 40lbs. clean cotton per acre was 11,110 tons, and that of indigo, calculated at 95lbs. manufactured indigo per acre, was 8,571 cwts. The estimated yield was indifferent in the base of cotton, but fair in the case of Indigo, and both of these estimates have turned out to be fairly correct.

THE Governor and party returned from Humpi on August 1. Every member of the party, including his Excellency, was attacked with sickness at Kamalapore, where some cases of cholera occurred among the villagers. The party consequently did not visit the Humpi ruins except briefly.

HIS Excellency the Governor's tour in the Cuddapah and Bellary districts has so far been pleasing to all concerned, the various addresses from the different communities being cordially received and considered as far as practicable on the spot, the result being a favourable impression of the Governor on the part of all classes.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR held a levée in the Munro Cutcherry at Anantapur. Replying to four addresses he said he was pleased to stand on classic ground, associated with the memory of that great man, whose example Indian administrators would do well to follow. He promised to consider the Bukkachirla irrigation project. He hoped the Forest rules would work prudently. His Excellency afterwards visited the high schools, hospital, new buildings, and jubilee park, and returned to Gooty.

BOMBAY.

THE Viceroy has agreed to the Nizam's proposal to raise Colonel Marshall's pay to Government Rs. 3,000 a month, in consideration of the services he has rendered to the State during the last four months.

IT is stated that the Syndicate of the Bombay University intend to recommend the Senate to introduce the Zend and Pehlvi languages as optional subjects in the final examination for the Degree of Master of Arts.

MR. DOSABHOY FRAMJEE, Second Presidency Magistrate, on return from leave, will take charge of his office from Mr. Patrick Ryan. Mr. Ryan will revert to his appointment of Third Presidency Magistrate, and Mr. Hamilton, who was acting for him, has proceeded to Ahmednagar to take charge of his office of Deputy Collector.

MR. K. C. KIERNANDER, Deputy Comptroller-General, having completed a minute inspection of the Paper Currency Office, at Bombay, consequent upon the Thomas frauds, left for Allahabad. Mr. G. H. R. Hart has arrived from Calcutta, and taken charge of the office, Mr. Sterndale having proceeded on leave to Simla.

THE following Secretariat appointments are notified to take effect from the date on which the Hon. J. R. Naylor assumed office as temporary member of the Governor's Council:—Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, C.S., to act as Chief Secretary to Government, during the absence of Mr. J. B. Richey, C.S.I., with charge of the Revenue, Financial, General, and Separate Departments; and Mr. W. Lee-Warner to act as Secretary in the Political, Secret, Judicial, and Educational Departments, during the absence of Mr. Richey.

THE following is the official summary of the Bombay Presidency Season Reports for the week ending Aug. 2:—More or less rain throughout the Presidency; more still wanted in parts of five districts. Khariff sowing and transplanting not yet finished in some districts; young crops slightly injured by excessive moisture in parts of Gujarat, Khandesh, Poonah, and Karachi. In Sind the river continues rising. Fever and small-pox in parts of eight, cattle-disease in parts of eleven, and cholera in parts of fourteen districts.

THE Committee of the Bombay Municipal Corporation made some further progress with the new Municipal Bill. Section 42 was so far amended as to exclude the Municipal Commissioner from occupying ex officio a seat on the Town Council. The section as it now stands provides that this body should consist of thirteen members, consisting of nine members appointed by the Corporation and four by the Government. The Chairman was decidedly of opinion that it was now time for the Government to give up the right of appointing members to the Town Council. He thought they should have a sufficient number of men to represent them on the Corporation, and then they should leave the Corporation "to work out its own salvation."

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

An explanatory memorandum has been issued by the Under-Secretary of State for India, giving the accounts and estimates for 1887-8. Owing to the difficulty experienced in distinguishing between pounds sterling and tens of rupees, the notation of £ for the former and Rx. for the latter is adopted in the paper, with the view of ascertaining whether it is generally approved before being introduced into the accounts and estimates. For the ydar 1886 7 the revised estimate of revenue and expenditure was Rx. 76,081,223 and Rx. 76,021,150 respectively, showing a surplus of Rx. 60,073. The Budget estimate for 1887-8 anticipates a surplus of Rx. 16,700, the revenue being fixed at Rx. 77,460,200, and the expenditure Rx. 77,443,500. Apart from other considerations, the revenue and expenditure of India are continually increasing owing to the opening of additional railways and canals. Thus the net revised estimate of revenue for 1886-7 was Rx. 43,880,566, and the Budget estimate for 1887-8 Rx. 44,478,100, the next expenditure being Rx. 43,820,493 and Rx. 44,461,400 respectively, leaving the surpluses as given above. Comparing the financial position at the beginning of 1885-6 with that of the present time, the revenue shows an increase of Rx. 1,759,700, and the expenditure of Rx. 2,389,600, and a surplus of only Rx. 16,700, as compared with Rx. 646,600 in 1885-6, or a falling off of Rx. 629,900. The increased expenditure is accounted for under the heads of assessed taxes, Rx. 870,900; Upper Burma, Rx. 405,100; other heads, Rx. 483,700; total, Rx. 1,759,700, while the increase of net expenditure is thus explained; Upper Burma, increase, Rx. 2,175,600; exchange, increase, Rx. 1,833,600; total, Rx. 4,009,200. Less famine insurance, reduction, Rx. 1,146,500; other heads, reduction, Rx. 473,100; total, Rx. 1,619,600; or a net increase of Rx. 2,389,600. The total charge for exchange in the 1887 8 Budget is put down at Rx. 5,515,000, as against Rx. 5,616,000 in the revised estimate for 1886 7; in 1886 6 the amount was Rx. 4,299,000, while in 1881-2 it was only Rx. 2,988,000. The revised estimate of the expenditure on account of Upper Burma for 1886-7 was Rx. 1,955,600 and the Budget estimate for 1887-8 is Rx. 2,175,600; while the net revenue for the two years is put down at Rx. 1,741,400 and Rx. 1,770,500 respectively. The net expenditure on the army, which in 1884-5 was Rx. 16,149,000, and in the following year Rx. 19,134,000, is put down in the revised estimate for 1886-7 as Rx. 18,098,000, and in the 1887-8 Budget at Rx. 18,300,000. In 1885 6 the net expenditure was temporarily increased by Rx. 2,116,000 in consequence of the organisation of the Quettah field force, and by Rx. 605,000 on account of the Burma expedition. There was an additional expenditure on the pay and allowances of the forces in India of Rx. 157,000 for the European troops (of which about Rx. 49,000 was due to the fall in exchange), and Rx. 150,000 for the Native army, and also Rx. 40,000 for other charges. In England the payments for ordnance stores were increased by £287,000, and for other stores by £181,000, while the charge for exchange was greater by Rx. 194,000; but the other payments were reduced by £745,000, mainly owing to the new system of paying, on account of the British troops serving in India, only the amount of pension accruing in the year, instead of the capitalised value of all pensions granted during the year. In 1886 7 the charges in India exceed those of 1885-6 (excluding the Quettah field force) by Rx. 935,000, of which Rx. 555,000 is due to the Burmah expedition. The permanent increase of the army causes an additional charge of about Rx. 500,000 for the British troops (including Rx. 51,000 due to the fall in exchange), and of Rx. 265,000 for the Native army. But in other directions a net saving of Rx. 335,000 was effected; in England the sterling expenditure is reduced by £92,000, but the charge for exchange is increased by Rx. 187,000. In 1887-8 the expenditure in India is reduced by Rx. 440,000 on account of the Burma expedition, and increased by Rx. 345,000 for the permanent charge (including Rx. 161,000 on account of the additional pay of the European troops owing to the fall in exchange), to which must be added Rx. 25,000 for other charges. The sterling expenditure in England is increased by 210,000, of which £118,000 is for non-effective charges, £110,000 for stores, and £30,000 for deferred pay, while there is a reduction of £48,000 in transport and other services; the exchange is, moreover, increased by Rx. 62,000.

CAPTAIN R. E. GOLIGHTLY, 4th Battalion 60th King's Royal Rifles, Special Service Officer, Upper Burma, has been invalided to England.

COLONEL J. B. LEGGATT, Madras Staff Corps, has been appointed Commandant 10th Madras Infantry.

CAPTAIN MASSY, 19th Bengal Infantry, Special Service Officer, has been appointed to officiate as Brigade-Major, 3rd Brigade, vice Captain Hamilton, transferred to India.

MAJOR R. E. D. REILLY, S.C, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and Surgeon A. S. Faulkner. I.M.S., in charge of the 12th Bombay Infantry, have been granted six and twelve months' leave respectively on urgent private affairs.

LIEUT. J. EZECHIEL, Bombay Commissariat Department, has been appointed Post Transport Officer, Pyinwana, relieving Lieut. J. Nelson, 29th Madras Infantry, ordered to join his regiment.

LIEUT. S. W. LINCOLN, 22rd Bombay Light Infantry, having been appointed to the Commissariat Department, has been ordered to proceed from Burma to Bombay for duty, reporting himself to the Commissariat Storekeeper-General.

CAPTAIN E. W. ST. G. WELCHMAN, 2nd Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent, has been appointed to command the Mounted Infantry in the Chindwin district.

CAPTAIN LUGARD, Norfolk Regiment, Staff Officer to the Director of Transport, Burma Field Force, has been ordered to rejoin his regiment at Sitapur, where his services are urgently required.

LIEUT. R. WAPSHARE, 3rd Cavalry, Hyderabad Contingent, has been appointed Post Transport Officer at Yeu, vice Lieut. Hendley, 21st Madras Infantry, relieved.

IT has been decided to continue the system of Remount Purchasing Committees for the Bengal Cavalry for another year.

IT is proposed to hold a Camp of Exercise at Secunderabad about the middle of November next. Some of the regiments which are under orders for transfer to other stations will take part in the manœuvres while en route to their destination.

LIEUT.-COLONEL W. P. SYMONS, 2nd Battalion South Wales Borderers, has passed with great credit the examination in Burmese by the Lower Standard, and Captain H. H. Young, 27th Madras Infantry, has passed with credit the Elementary Standard in Burmese.

THE question of camp followers in the field has been under the serious consideration of the military authorities lately, with a view to the reduction of their number on service. Experiments may be carried out next cold weather with a reduced establishment in small camps, under conditions similar to those which would obtain on a campaign—minus, of course, the fighting.

THE following condidates for the Staff Corps have been appointed to Native regiments:—Lieutenant W. C. N. Woodcock, King's Liverpool Regiment, to the 11th Bengal Infantry; Lieutenant G. P. Campbell, Worcestershire Regiment, to the 25th Punjab Infantry; and Lieutenant A. T. Walling, Lincolnshire Regiment, to the 43rd Regiment, Ghurka Light Infantry.

THE following changes of appointments of Transport Officers in Burma have been made:—Captain H. Capel Cure, Transport Officer, Ruby Mines Command, has been appointed Brigade Transport Officer, 1st Brigade, Mandalay, vice Lieutenant C. Finch, ordered to India. Lieutenant J. L. Stewart, on transport duty, Ruby Mines Command, has been appointed Transport Officer to the Ruby Mines Command, vice Captain H. Capel Cure, transferred to the 1st Brigade.

INDIAN LOYALTY.—A Native paper contains the following remarks:—"In proportion as the bear's rage is waxing hotter and hotter, the lion is cooling down and becoming softer and softer. There is no help for it; the bear will not be cowed down by mere empty vociferations. The Russians are fast pushing on towards Afghan territory. There is no doubt that this is a matter of great anxiety. If the Russians succeed in coming to Kabul, they will try to come to India also; the Russians must be kept at a distance from India. We shall on no account leave the protection of the lion, the king of beasts, and go to the Russians. We are here in India twenty-five crores of peoples loyally attached to England, and they are ready to lay down their lives fifty lakhs at a time in a single day on the side of the English. England should keep the people of India content by reason of its good government, and England will thus be able to keep India out of the grasp of the Russians."

OBITUARY.

GENERAL C. C. McINTYRE, C.B.

General Colin Campbell McIntyre, C.B., late 78th Highlanders, died on the 24th inst. at Grandholm, Teignmouth, aged eighty-one years. General McIntyre served in the Persian Campaign of 1857, and commanded the 78th Highlanders on the expedition to Borazjoon, in the night attack and in the battle of Kooshab, and was present at the bombardment of Mohumrah, being mentioned in despatches, and receiving medal with clasp. He accompanied Havelock's force in September for the relief of Lucknow, and was in the actions during that advance. On the morning that the force entered the city he was thrown into the Alumbagh with 250 men for its defence, from 25th September to 7th October, and was surrounded by the enemy and all communication cut off. He was then reinforced from Cawnpore by 250 men and two guns, and again on 25th October by 500 men and four guns. He held the position, still surrounded by the enemy, for fifty-two days, until relieved by the approach of the Commander-in-Chief's force, and was mentioned in despatches for his services. The gallant officer then proceeded with the Commander-in-Chief's force for the relief of the garrison in the Residency, and commanded the advance-guard in the attacks on the Dilkoosha and La Martiniere, and was again mentioned in despatches as "conspicuous" in the attack on La Martiniere. He was with Outram's force during the re occupation for three months of the Alumbagh, and was present at the repulse of all the attacks made on that position. General McIntyre was also present with Brigadier Campbell's force in the third advance on Lucknow, and in the operations of that force until the final capture of the city. He received the medal with two clasps, the C.B., and a year's service for Lucknow.

MAJOR-GENERAL A. D. BUTTER.

Major-General A. D. Butter, F.S.C., after passing through the Honble. E.I. Company's College of Addiscombe, proceeded to India shortly before the outbreak out of the Mutiny, and served with the 1st Bengal European Fusiliers during that crisis in the campaign of 1857-58 (medal). He joined the Bengal Staff Corps on its establishment, and was attached to a battalion of Goorkhas for about two years. His extraordinary talent as a draughtsman now attracted the attention of the authorities, and obtained for him an appointment in the Revenue Survey of India, and he was employed in that department for some years in the survey of Assam; but he finally elected to revert to military duty, and was posted to the 42nd Assam Light Infantry. He served with that regiment during the rest of his service until the beginning of the current year, when, owing to bad health, he was obliged to vacate the command of the regiment and retire on a pension. After a long and painful illness he died on 30th July. During his service in Assam he held the appointment of brigade-major of the N.E. Frontier District for five years, and served as aide-de-camp to Brigadier-General Bourchier, C.B., in the Loshai Campaign of 1871-72, and subsequently in the Duffa Expedition of 1873-74, in both of which expeditions he was mentioned in despathes (medal and clasp). His skill as a draughtsman brought his name early in his career into notice, and his clever contributions to the Delhi Punch earned for him a great reputation as a caricaturist. His unlimited hospitality, his amiable disposition, and his genial nature will long be remembered as his loss will be deplored by a large circle of friends, both in and out of India.

A VETERAN.

Last month there died at Allahabad Private J. Turner, aged eighty-six, one of the oldest privates in the British Army. This man was born in 1800, in Lancashire, and for the first twelve years of his life found occupation with his parents and in his own village. In 1812 he joined the Navy, and a year subsequently was sent out to the American station in the Asia. After being in commission for three years, he returned, and passing Plymouth, his ship saluted the Bellerophon, with Napoleon I. on board, the Emperor having just given himself up as a prisoner to the British. Shortly after this he left the navy, and settled down in his own country, and worked at a mill, but a few years of this sufficed for the roving and venturesome spirit that was in the man, so in 1825 he joined the East India Company, and served his full time, during which he was present at most of the battles that occurred in India at that period, including the first Afghan War. In 1847 he retired, and lived at Buxar near Benares, on his pension. At the time of the Mutiny of 1857, he, with many other old soldiers, formed the Invalid Battalion, and marched and garrisoned Allahabad and Cawnpore, and, although they were not actually engaged, their presence doubtless tended to quell mutinous spirits at those places. At the end of the mutiny these old warriors were given full pay for the rest of their lives, and Turner returned to Buxar. He was church clerk there till 1876, when he went to Chunar. His death was the result of an accidend. Smoking one day in bed in the hot weather his bed caught fire and he was burnt in the leg very severely. The wound became gangrenous, and he died. Turner was a fine man, with an enormous chest measurement, and bore all the characteristics of a genuine Englishman, and had it not been for his untoward accident had every chance of making his century.

MARITIME ROUTES TO EASTERN SEAS.

Sir Samuel W. Baker continues his subject as follows :—It has been suggested by certain eminent authorities "that England should abandon the route through the Suez Canal to India, that Malta should be given up, and the Mediterranean evacuated by the British forces, as we should be unable to protect the sea route to India during a war with France." Should England pursue such a fatal policy she would never again obtain an ally ; Italy thus deserted would be left alone, with an immense extent of coast exposed to an attack by France, as the Mediterranean without an English fleet would be reduced to a French lake. On the other hand, a cordial alliance between England and Italy would absolutely paralyse the maritime power of France. The route to India vid the Suez Canal would be assured, and by the patrol of gunboats throughout its length the security of the passage would be effected through the isthmus. Egypt would remain in the military occupation of Great Britain. England would not only possess the advantage of a line of coaling stations from Gibraltar to Port Said, but she would have the dockyard of Malta for repairs, at the same time that the Italian ports would be always at her service, both in the Mediterranean and the Adriatic.

I will now change the scene by accepting the proposal of those who would abandon the Suez Canal route to India, evacuate the Mediterranean, and forsake the great stronghold Malta, thereby depriving England of all coaling stations and her only dockyard between Great Britain and Hong Kong. The first step would be the interruption of our telegraphic communication. India and the entire East would be completely cut off, and we should receive no tidings except by the circuitous and long Cape voyage of from forty to fifty days. We should have returned to the dark age of the last half-century. France would establish a great military and naval station at Suez, and in a short time she would drive us out of Aden, which would be forced to capitulate for want of water and supplies, as the whole power of our enemy from Toulon to the Red Sea entrance could be concentrated against that point, with an unlimited coal supply only five days distant at the French base of operations, Suez.

I will not venture upon the complications that might ensure throughout the Indian Empire should our prestige be lowered by the stoppage of telegraphic communication with England, the loss of the Mediterranean, and the capture of Aden and Colombo by an enemy ; but I feel convinced that should we retreat from the Mediterranean, or abandon the Suez Canal through fear of France or any other Power, the step will be fatal to our reputation, and will be justly regarded throughout the millions of the East as the "beginning of the end of British rule." A movement upon Afghanistan and the Indian frontier by our persistent rival, Russia, probably in alliance with the Sultan, Caliph of the Mahomedan race, when a panic should have seized the minds of those who are now governed by the belief in England's power, would complete the catastrophe, and we should then indeed have need of all our naval forces for the protection of our shores. A retreat from Egypt and the Mediterranean by Great Britain would be national suicide, a political "happy despatch" that would induce the verdict of felo de se from a jury of those Great Powers from whose society she had been ignominiously expelled.

Captain P. H. Colomb also writes strongly on the suicidal nature of any policy which dictates the abandonment of Malta and the Mediterranern route to the East. He points out to Sir William Gordon, who advocates such a policy, that :—

"The state of affairs with the Canal closed to all ships is one thing and it brings us back to what obtained in the days of Nelson. The state of affairs with the Canal open to all ships except our own—which is Sir William Gordon's position—is quite another thing."

MAILS VIA CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE.

About three hundred members representing all sections of the House of Commons have attached their signatures to the letter forwarded by Mr. Baden-Powell to the Prime Minister on the subject of an alternative mail route to the East. The text of the document is as follows : "We understand that proposals are before the Government for opening additional routes for mails, passengers, and goods to Japan and China, and eventually to Australia, via Canada, whereby a considerable saving of time will be effected as compared with other routes. But we also understand that unless a decision is come to without delay to provide a moderate subsidy (which is asked for to supplement that offered by the Colonial Governments), foreign steamship lines will in all probability secure the Pacific services on this new route. We are convinced, however, that great advantages will follow if these new routes are served by British steamers of high speed and fulfilling Admiralty requirements. Several of our largest colonies will be materially benefited, the growth and predominance of British trade in the Pacific will be promoted, fresh openings will be afforded for British trade to Japan and China, and the defences of the Empire will be most materially strengthened, by thus enabling our possessions in the India and China seas to be reinforced in time of war by men and stores and ships, even if both the Suez and Cape routes were closed to us. We learn that the Canadian Government, in connection with the opening of this new route, have advertised for tenders for a new Atlantic service, and we are of opinion that arrangements should be made to secure, with the aid of this new service, and in conjunction with the Canadian Pacific Railway, a guaranteed through service to trans-Atlantic ports, and one which would be of inestimable value to our whole Eastern commerce in the event of a European war. We therefore venture to express the earnest hope that Her Majesty's Government will, at the earliest possible date, decide to take such steps as may be necessary to enable private enterprise to place on the Pacific Ocean a British line of mail steamers connecting China with England, via Canada." To this letter the Prime Minister has, it may be remembered, replied that the subject is receiving the serious consideration of the Government.

THE NEW THROUGH ROUTE TO INDIA.

The Constantinople official Gazette of Aug. 8 confirmed one of the most important announcements that have been made to the public of Constantinople for many years past, namely, the issue of an Imperial irade granting to a group of British financiers the privilege of constructing a railway to Bagdad. It marks a new departure in the political economy of Turkey, the dawn of renewed prosperity, and the approaching restoration to Constantinople of her lost commercial crown as the emporium of the East. The experience of the last few years in the Aidin Vilayet has abundantly shown how trade and commerce increase as the railways are pushed inland, and what material prosperity follows the removal of physical difficulties to freedom of intercourse. Where there was previously nought but the scrubby heath or bare steppe, as the iron horse makes its appearance, cotton and corn fields spring into existence, for their owners know that there is no fear now of their having to leave their crops to rot upon the ground owing to the impossibility of reaching a market. The Imperial Government, as a guarantee, grants the increase of the tithes naturally expected to follow this development of ways and means, but even without such help there is every prospect of good returns from the traffic receipts, as the line will be the great through route for Asia Minor to Kurdistan and Persia. The existing Ismid section is to be relaid, the sharp curves that at present prevent a higher speed than 25 miles per hour being improved away, and the whole line is to be so constructed as to admit of travelling when necessary at the rate of 50 miles an hour. The line is to be brought in from Haidar-Pacha to Scutari, so as to offer a port at its terminus protected from wind and sea in all directions.

The fortunate possessors of this concession, the winners, as it may well be said, of the Grand Prix of enterprise in Turkey, are Messrs. Alt and Zeefelder, the lessees of the Haidar-Pacha and Ismid Railway. Great credit is due to them for their perseverance, for their rivals have been many, and the contention sharp. Unless, however, the shrewd perspicuity of the Sultan had been brought into play, the matter would still have remained in the field of unsettled issues, for it is but the other day that a very severe blow was struck at the Alt-Zeefelder proposals, in the strong recommendations sent in by the Military Council to the Sultan to adopt the narrow gauge system as the one best suited for Turkey. This was the system advocated by the French group, but fortunately the Sultan was wise enough to see that, although the constructors would benefit by the reduction of first cost, the country would suffer in the increase of mileage and reduced speed.

In reply to Mr. BADEN-POWEL, Lord G. HAMILTON said arrangements have been made with the P. and O. Company under which, in consideration of an annual subvention of about £3,500 payable in respect of each of three of their new ships—viz., the Victoria, Britannia, and Oceana, of 6,300 tons each—that company engage to hold these steamers at the disposition of the Admiralty for service as armed cruisers or transports whenever required. That company also engage to hold in the same manner at our disposal and for the same purposes, but without further charge, seven of their other steamers—viz., Arcadia (new), Valetta, Massilia, Rome, Carthage, Ballaarat, and Parramatta. All these vessels, representing over 48,000 tons of shipping, especially the four new ones, possess a high rate of speed, and have an unusually large coal endurance. In the event of the company building further steamers which the Admiralty consider more suitable than those named in the agreement we retain the right of substitution. The prices for hire or purchase are specified in the agreement. The agreement is determinable at twelve months' notice on either side. The vessels are to have such fittings placed on board as will enable them to be prepared at the shortest notice in the event of contingencies.

THE number of emigrants from India to Grenada is not very large, the total of those in the island at the end of 1886 being only 1,953 ; but as 1,387 of these were time-expired labourers who had elected to remain at the island, it is evident that they are well satisfied with their treatment. The conduct of the emigrants last year was fairly good. There was one case of wife murder, for which the murderer was hanged ; but the other eleven cases against emigrants were only ordinary ones, and convictions were only obtained in seven. Not a single charge was made by the coolies against their employers, and the wages of the men show a satisfactory increase, as they have got through 2,648 extra days' work. The health of the coolies is also very good, there being a large decrease in the number of cases treated in the hospitals ; while the death-rate was only 4·19 per cent. But few of the coolies seem to have saved money, or, at any rate, they do not invest it in the Government Savings Banks, though some, we are told, entrust their small savings to their employers. The ten years' term of residence of 419 emigrants will shortly expire, but up to the end of last year only 82 had given in their names as wishing to return to Calcutta.

Miscellaneous.

MESSRS. BAKER AND COMPANY, London, recently addressed the Madras Government, asking to be allowed them to supply medicines and instruments to municipal and local board dispensaries and hospitals in this Presidency. The matter having been referred to the Surgeon General for his opinion, that officer disapproved of the proposal on the following grounds:—Apart from any other consideration, it would be most injudicious to give one firm of general agents, who can have little or no knowledge of drugs and surgical instruments, a monopoly of the kind solicited. One great advantage of the present arrangement is that it secures the supply of genuine articles, as Her Majesty's Secretary of State requires that all drugs, &c., sent to the depôt shall be specially tested and reported on by an expert; whereas, if purchases were made direct by local bodies or their agents in the English market, ther would be exposed to imposition by the supply of impure or effete articles. In no trade, perhaps, is imposition so freely practised as in that of drugs. Another objection to the proposed arrangement is, that it would be difficult to secure punctuality of supply, and impossible, in case of supplies running short in consequence of any sudden outbreak of sickness, to get the required medicines in time. Considering the distance of Madras from the Home market, it must always be necessary to have a local reserve, such as the medical store depôt affords, on which to fall back. Another important advantage of the existing system is that it enables the head of the department to control the expenditure of hospitals, which would not be possible were local bodies allowed to make their own arrangements for purchases. If some supervision of this sort were not exercised, past experience proves that excessive and unnecessary demands would frequently be made, which the local authorities would be unable to check, not having the necessary knowledge. It is therefore manifestly to the advantage of local boards and municipalities that they should, as at present, draw their supplies from the Government medical store depôt, as this arrangement protects from their imposition and waste, and renders unnecessary the maintenance on their part of a reserve stock of highly perishable articles. Finally, a medical store depôt must always be maintained for military supplies, so that the expenses connected with it do not fall exclusively on the civil department, their share of the cost of establishment, loss by effects of climate, &c., being covered by a percentage on all purchases, viz., on the total value of Europe stores at stock book rates (20 per cent. on account of loss by exchange; and on the sum of these, 20 per cent. for deterioration, and 3 per cent. for transit to destination; on country stores, 20 per cent. for deterioration and 3 per cent. for transit). Messrs. Baker and Company have accordingly been informed that, for the reasons above stated, the Madras Government are not prepared to urge on the Government of India any change in the existing rules, which precludes such an arrangement as is proposed by Messrs. Baker and Company.—Madras Times.

A DISPENSARY report is not usually remarkable for thrilling interest, but there is one point of note in the Central Provinces Dispensary Report for 1886. The matter of Native subscriptions has been under the consideration of the Chief Commissioner for two years. It appears that, while the scanty European population of the Central Provinces subscribe about Rs. 4,000, the entire Native community only subscribe Rs. 16,000; and more, the Native subscriptions are falling off year by year. Mr. Fitzpatrick took the matter up and suggested a subscription book and a subscription box. The former was to be circulated among the Natives just as a similar book is circulated among Europeans, so that their liberality should be neither secret nor unsystematic. But the plan does not seem to have answered, and its fault seems to have lain in the fact that Government officers were neither to see, nor to circulate, nor to take any interest in this book. The collection was to be done by Municipal members, who did not much relish the unpopular rôle of dun. As to the subscription box, it was to stand in the dispensary that men in the moment of healing might drop in a rupee. But it is unusual to carry money in India, and easy to say that you have none about you; and the obligation to pay for healing is not realised, especially where the dispensary is supported from octroi taxation; so this scheme also failed, and hospital assistants shook their boxes in the faces of their patients in vain.

TESTIMONIALS AND ADDRESSES TO GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.—The rules issued in May, 1885, regarding the receipts of testimonials and addresses by Government servants are re-issued. The Governor-General in Council invites the renewed attention of local Governments to the subject with which they deal, and to impress on all concerned the duty of exact obedience to them. The rules do not apply to the head of any Government or Administration. Under these rules officers are forbidden to receive addresses or testimonials, or attend public meetings or entertainments held in their honour. Similar manifestations in case of retired officers when following immediately upon their retirement will be viewed with disfavour. It is not intended to prohibit farewell entertainments given by an officer's personal friends, but such entertainments should be substantially of a private and informal character. Local Governments are authorised to forward to officers who have left their districts or stations public resolutions recorded in their honour. The rules do not prohibit medical officers from receiving pecuniary recognition of their services, but previous sanction of local Governments must be obtained by the medical officers before receiving any public complimentary address. Government officers are not prohibited from sitting for their portrait, bust or statue, provided these articles are not for presentation to the officers concerned. The participation of Government officers in proposals for founding scholarships or for procuring portrait, bust or statue in recognition of services of a Government officer is not forbidden, but solicitations for subscriptions, not spontaneously given, is disapproved of by the Government of India. The previous sanction of the Government of India must be obtained to any relaxation of these rules in particular cases.

WHILE the English have been celebrating the Queen's Jubilee, the French have been holding their National Fête, and the little French colony at Pondicherry has not been behindhand in doing honour to the occasion. On the evening of the 13th of July the fête of the morrow was notified by a salute of twenty-guns, followed by the playing of the "Marseillaise." Then came a torchlight procession of the Native troops and the letting off of rockets and fireworks. On the morning of the great day itself visitors flocked in to the town from all quarters—from Madras, Cuddalore, Negapatam, and Trichinopoly—and from an early hour till late at night there was one constant round of festivities. At six A.M. the troops were reviewed in front of the bronze statue of Dupleix. This was followed by a regatta, horse races, foot races, and other sports. Next succeeded a pageant that recalled one of the most deeply-interesting chapters of Indian history, a scene in the year 1750 being re-enacted with all the mimicry of exactly reproduced grouping and costume. It was the entry into Pondicherry of Murzapha Singh, who had been appointed by Dupleix Subedar of the Deccan, and who came to the town to thank his French ally. The procession on the afternoon of the 14th July was an exact representation of that interesting historical event. A mock fort had been erected on the esplanade to represent the buildings of last century, and elephants and camels were got down from Tanjore. The cavalcade is described by an eye-witness as being one of great splendour and magnificence, the beautifully caparisoned elephants, camels, and horses being ridden by men jewel-bedecked and dressed as Rajahs and Subedars, while the procession was flanked by sepoys wearing the costume of the time. In the evening there was a great dinner at Government House, and this was also marked by a truly dramatic ceremony. A battery of mountain pieces had been brought up in position, and at the moment the Governor proposed the toast of the evening, "A la France! A la Patri!" the guns boomed forth amidst the strains of the "Marseillaise," and the deafening cheers of the guests and the populace outside. The indispensable fireworks and illuminations, carried out on a most extensive scale and with brilliant effect, completed the proceedings of the eventful day. It must be admitted that the programme was both admirably conceived and admirably executed. From the spectacular point of view nothing could have been better. To the Frenchmen, however, who organised the day's rejoicings there must have been a grinning skeleton at the feast. The statue of Dupleix may have been covered with garlands, the "Marseillaise" may have swelled upon the air, the eye may have kindled and the pulse beat faster at the cry of "Vive la Patrie!" but in all their hearts there must have been the whispered regret, "Alas! what might have been!" One little turn in Fortune's wheel, and not England but France might to-day be the ruler of India, and the National Fête might have been celebrated, not in magnificent Pondicherry, but in Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras. Is this bitter reflection one of the causes that keeps up to this hour the unfortunate but undeniable national jealousy of France towards England?—Times of India.

THE Indian Cantonment Magistrate has delicate duties to perform. He is a soldier by training, but has to master all the difficulties of ordinary law. He has to hold the balance between the military and the civil elements in his district, and to steer a middle course and avoid offending one or other sections of the community is no easy matter. It is abundantly clear, therefore, that good Cantonment Magistrates cannot be turned out in great number or at short notice. The Indian Government, however, seem to think otherwise, having recently promulgated an order limiting the tenure of office by Cantonment Magistrates to five years. The result of this change will be, as the Times of India points out, that when a man gets really to know his work he will find himself superseded, and there will not be the same incentive to excel in the discharge of his duties.

RETURNING to the subject of India resources in the event of a war, the Sind Gazette, in noticing the aid the Native Princes can afford to Government, says:—"To sum up, the total of troops maintained in the Native States that might possibly be available in war we find in round numbers to consist of 1,050 guns of sorts, 15,000 regular cavalry, 33,000 irregular cavalry, 93,000 regular infantry, and 182,000 irregular infantry, or a total of 1,050 guns and 300,000 men, inclusive of artillerymen. There are probably, however, none of them sufficiently trained and disciplined to be set in line of battle against Russian troops, though there might be many good enough to be utilised on the communications in a war in Afghanistan. We think it would be highly advantageous to draw a considerable portion of them, notably of the Hyderabad troops, for service of that kind.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE APOTHEOSIS OF ANTINOUS.*

To criticise poetry is always a somewhat unpleasant task, owing in a measure to the circumstance that the line which separates the finest and mere second-rate effusions though marked is slender. It frequently needs but little to make a verse magnificent and enchanting. Nor would it be easy to illustrate this by example. Take, for instance, Milton's Paradise Lost and Paradise Regained. Both are fine, the first incomparable; but would anyone (save perchance the author himself) compare the two conceptions? And yet what a little would serve to place them both upon the same level! Yet, withal, that "little" is the touch of genius, the hand of immortality. Miss Youngs is also a case in point. Her language is fine, her sentiments are noble, her imagination vivid, and her scenes dramatic. Yet there lacks a something — an indescribable something—ere she can dwell amidst the heavenly portals of the highest poetic art.

She soars high, too. Blank verse is the most trying of all ordeals, so trying that Milton almost stands alone as a god amidst the humble poets who are eclipsed by the splendour of his stupendous powers. When Mrs. Youngs deviates into rhythm she is, to our judgment, more successful, pace the lines on Khartoum. Take a random extract:—

Raise a monument unto him?
Ay, but shrink not, though thus late,
There to write "We did undo him;
Write no lie, O England blandly, urged by party, bribe, or pride,
Tell the truth to future ages, who betrayed, and how he died.

There is much in these lines that is fine—there is more that is noble.

But the fair authoress is at her greatest when drawing attention to the scenes of misery and woe which fill up the goblet of London daily life—when misery, destitution, and want meet in conflict with charity, love, and kindness—then sweet strains are wafted which touch the heart—and make chords of nature vibrate in sympathy with the widow, the orphan, the tainted, and the fallen, as the reader listens amidst

"Court and stair,
Where—while our rulers seek repose
Vice and corruption leave their lair."

Miss Young's aim is pure, her language is free from all taint of ill-veiled impurity; and if she has failed to

"Weave
Such laurels round her brow as should survive time," she has at least endeavoured to improve mankind, to raise an interest for the waifs and strays of life by poetry which is sweet rather than great, and ennobling rather than brilliant. She is the poetess of "Woman's mission to woman."

LECTURES AND ESSAYS.†

These Essays are a reflex of the author, in so far as there is an under-current of plain, straightforward commonsense, for which Sir Stafford Northcote—we prefer the name by which he was so long known—was so noted. Few men ever approached a subject with a clearer insight into the "points" of the question than did the late revered leader of the Conservative party—fewer, still, pursued their inquiries with a greater determination to arrive at the truth. All this is evident at every turn in the accompanying volume; not a page but shows some point in the author's character, not a line but denotes sound judgment and plain sense.

It is pleasant, also, to linger for a while in the society of a public character who, perhaps, to an extent never equalled of late years, was beloved by the many who, unacquainted with the man, had learned to respect a spotless reputation, and an unsullied escutcheon. It is fascinating to step aside for a while from life's busy scenes, and accompany the statesman as he withdrew for a while to the haunts of his life in the country, where, amidst a people who loved him and whom he loved, he was wont to direct, instruct, and amuse. His lectures, moreover, are singularly calculated to awaken thought—"to set some on inquiries which are likely to lead to good" was the aim and object which he set before him. He sought rather to present to his audience a series of well-considered and thoughtfully-matured suggestions than to lay before them carefully worked out problems and minutely-studied theories.

A few quotations will serve to illustrate alike the man and the remarks which we have written. Talking of democracy he says, "Whenever any great success is owing mainly to the exertions of the populace, it will speedily follow that they will be so swollen with pride and annoyance as no longer to brook restraint." Again, "If you convert the British Empire into a republic it could only be an insular republic."

Anent cramming. "I am not disposed to be quite so severe upon cramming as some persons are. To have the power of getting up a subject, even superficially, in a short time, is very useful. It shows no small power of mind, and it may be taken as a proof of a kind of readiness which is likely to be called often into play."

Thus much for his sound sense, now for his honesty. "Set your faces alike against the use of cribs and translations, and against the skipping of difficult passages. Do not try to turn the flank of a difficulty, but brace up your mind to overcome it." What could be more plain-spoken than to tell the good people of Exeter, "Few work harder than we do when we are at work, and few are more rigid in excluding from our business hours anything like relaxation; but when we are at leisure, too many of us are prone to make up for this sacrifice by giving ourselves up to frivolous, and even to merely sensual amusements in no respect qualified to improve or instruct the mind."

These Essays are sure to find many readers. The success d'estime is assured; but over and above this there will be not a few ready to recognise in the volume a fitting memento of the unaffected life of an unaffected man—the much-respected and deeply-lamented Earl of Iddesleigh.

A POPULAR EXPLANATION OF BIMETALLISM.*

It is but a few brief hours since we reviewed a work teaching mankind that bimetallism would be a cure for all the financial ills to which flesh is heir to, and now we have before us a brochure endeavouring to prove that the aforesaid "ism" is fraught with deadly peril to mankind at large. The problem is terribly bewildering. We do not pretend to solve or even to discern it. Suffice it to say that Mr. Harston's pamphlet is at least clear and intelligible. Whether it be sound who shall say?

THE Madras Mail concludes an article on Indian railways with the following sage advice:—Let our University graduates renounce political agitation and mischievous declamation and rather apply themselves to stirring up, not the waters of strife, but the pool of Siloam. Let them rouse men of affluence to embark some portion of their riches in works beneficial to their neighbours and not unprofitable to themselves. Let them urge men of moderate means to combine their resources and enter upon a career of useful and honourable activity. Encouragement would not be wanting on the part of the Government. Europeans of good character and tried experience would co-operate with perfect sincerity in the attempt to bring about a new era of prosperity in Hindustan, in which the arts of peace should supplant the brutalities and selfishness of constant warfare. It is not absolutely necessary to look upon railways as the Alpha and Omega of national development. They are only one of many means to a common end. The appliance of science to agriculture, the cultivation of tea, coffee, cotton, jute, and other economical plants, the establishment of manufactures of all kinds, the working of mines and coalfields, and the manipulation of mineral ores lead each and all to personal wealth and influence, and to the diffusion of comfort and the elements of civilisation among the less fortunate classes of the community. It is surely time to wipe away the reproach that has too long attached to the people of this country that they can do nothing of themselves, and are content to walk as guided and upheld by the leading strings of the English Government.

THE Pioneer says that the comments of the Native Press on the Central Asian politics of the Government of India are, as a rule, of no great moment, the failure to understand Imperial as distinguished from local politics being very apparent indeed. But when we find a newspaper, which can claim that the support given to it enables it to be issued daily in Calcutta, giving currency to such "facts" as that "the three horrible phenomena of Burma War, Afghan Boundary Commission, and Abdur Rahman Subsidy, have taken place within the term of one Viceroyalty," we begin to see that malice is at the bottom of the attempt at criticism of Goverment action. The annexation of Burma has certainly been carried out during Lord Dufferin's Viceroyalty, but the policy of subsidising the Amir Abdur Rahman, and of sending a Joint Boundary Commission to Northern Afghanistan were the acts of Lord Ripon and the Liberal Ministry at home. Any schoolboy should know this, for it is part and parcel of the history of the last seven years; but then writers with a mission are above all facts. In the same breath the action of Lord Dufferin's Government in giving the Amir Rs. 20,00,000 since the Rawal Pindi Durbar is denounced. The subsidy of Abdur Rahman was settled by Lord Ripon and his councillors at one lakh per month, and a simple sum in arithmetic will show how many months' payments have had to be made under this arrangement since the Pindi Durbar held in April, 1885. It is, we fear, but of little use in exposing inaccuracies of this kind; Native critics make their "facts" to suit their arguments, and then cry out that their "appeals for justice" are disregarded.

MONDAY, AUGUST 29, 1887.

EAST INDIA ABKARI ADMINISTRATION.

THE British and Colonial Temperance Congress, Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P., and the Rev. Mr. Gregson, ought to be satisfied that they have brought the fierce light of public discussion to bear upon one of their favourite hobbies, although they may not be equally satisfied with the result which has followed. The hobby in question was the action of the Government of India relating to the sytem of licenses for the distillation and sale of spirituous liquors in force in the various provinces of India, which action they declared was to offer facilities for drinking among the Natives, and thereby to cause misery and ruin throughout the country. The Bishop of London, President of the Temperance Congress, begged that a full inquiry might be made into the matter, and that "steps may be taken to check the serious growth of intemperance in India." Mr. Samuel Smith, on the strength of a letter from a missionary in India, brought the matter before Parliament, and the Rev. Mr. Gregson, since he retired from his active sphere of usefulness in the East, has been devoting his oratorical powers to the ventilation of the subject here. The good intentions of these philanthropists cannot be questioned, but the effect of the agitation which they have raised has been to show that their zeal for the cause of temperance has greatly outrun their discretion in searching for the truth. We said in a previous article that were the accusation which they formulated true no more damning blot could be found against British rule in the East, but that happily it was not true. This assertion of ours has now been fully confirmed by the publication, by order of the House of Commons, of a return containing copies of a despatch from the Government of India to Her Majesty's Secretary of State, giving cover to memoranda and reports from the local Governments of the three Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, from the Government of the Punjab, from the Commissioners of the Central Provinces, Assam, Lower Burma, Coorg, Berar, and Ajmere, and the Deputy Commissioner of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills. It will be thus seen that the information given comes from the whole of British India. It cannot, therefore, be said that the investigation asked for by the Bishop of London on behalf of the Temperance Congress has not been thorough. The result has been the complete refutation of the charge so recklessly made against the Government of India. In the Despatch signed by Lord Dufferin and his colleagues in Council it is pointed out that the information which had, from whatever sources, reached the Temperance Congress, and on which the charge was based, has been entirely erroneous, and a very quiet but forcible rebuke is thus administered to the complainants :—

"It must be remembered with what large tracts of country, and with what a large population we are dealing. Judged by a European standard, the people of India are a remarkably abstemious people. Drunkenness, in the English sense of the term, hardly exists in India. Writers whose comparisons are based on Oriental experience describe as 'drunkenness' and as 'spread of misery and ruin' a condition of things which, if it existed in England, would be regarded almost as a millennium of temperance. The average consumption in India is only a bottle or a bottle and a-half of spirits a year for every adult male, and in some provinces is even less than that. It may be conceded that, however small the rate of consumption, any increase of it is equally to be deprecated ; but, at the same time, it should be borne in mind that such terms as 'drunkenness,' 'drinking classes,' and 'spread of drinking' when used by natives of India, or in connection with Indian administration, bear a meaning wholly different from that which they convey to a mind familiar only with the English aspects of the temperance question."

This truth is, however, unfortunately one that pseudo-philanthropists and would-be reformers at home do not trouble themselves to acquire in dealing with Indian questions, and hence the cruel misrepresentations to which the Government in that country are being continually subjected. It has been said that "a little learning is a dangerous thing," but ignorance, when combined with fanaticism, is a more mischievous thing than that want of knowledge which the poet referred to. And this is the ignorance with which English officials, responsible for the honour of England in India, have so often to contend against at the hands of their countrymen here.

THE

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxio to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, th school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons have been deceived by purchasers by false representations.

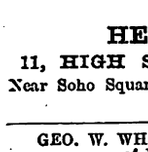
To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.



DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he ought to be prosecuted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which the old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scene from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1887.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 16th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 14th August; and from Calcutta to the 13th August.

No business is reported as having taken place before the Legislative Council at Simla, except the substitution of the name of Mr. Westland on certain Committees for that of Sir Auckland Colvin. The Council then adjourned for a fortnight.

THE Viceroy and Lady Dufferin intended making a short trip into the Himalayan hills as far as Narkanda.

THE Government offices break up in Simla on the 29th of October, and reopen for business in Calcutta on the 14th of November.

THE Viceroy leaves Simla about the 15th of October.

ABOUT two-thirds of the new Government loan have been taken up at Calcutta, and one-third at Bombay. The price of Government paper has since gone up from 97-7 to 97-15.

THE list of recommendations for honours and rewards on account of the Burma Campaign has been returned to India for revision, the Horse Guards objecting to the length of the list of names sent in by the Commander-in-Chief and the Government of India.

THERE have in all been 28,000 Snider rifles issued to the police in Burma, an index of the size of the force that has been so quietly and unobtrusively raised in less than a twelvemonth. A large reduction in the numbers of Regulars will be made with safety at the next relief. Probably only two, or at the outside three, British Infantry regiments will be retained in Upper Burma.

TELEGRAPHIC intelligence from Rangoon proves that the reports about the starving Shans in the Eastern Division are much exaggerated. Engineers employed on the railway in this division experience much difficulty in procuring sufficient labour, and could employ double the number of coolies at present working.

CAPTAIN JENKINSON, with the Hyderabad Cavalry and mounted police, surprised a gang of dacoits near Mogyke Yeu on the 9th. Pongyi Nandyal, a leader, was killed, and Captain Jenkinson wounded in the thigh.

THE Madoya district, twenty miles north of Mandalay, is greatly disturbed again.

THE Sawbwah of Wuntho, it is reported, still allows dacoity, and declines coming in.

THROUGH the influence of Mr. J. G. Scott, alias Shway Yoe, and friendly Sawbwahs, the fighting between Theebaw and Theinnee Sawbwahs has come to an end.

THE Chief Commissioner leaves Mandalay in the course of a few days to visit the Chindwin Valley, where General White also is just now inspecting and looking after the military police. From Chindwin Mr. Crosthwaite goes straight to Rangoon.

CHOLERA in Bombay is increasing, nineteen deaths having been recorded last week as against seventeen the week before.

H.H. THE MAHARAJAH HOLKAR of Indore and H.H. the Thakore Saheb of Gondal have returned to Bombay; the former from Venice, and the latter from London.

MR. TOWNSEND, the petroleum expert, who has been engaged in exploring for oil near Sibi, will shortly make a thorough examination of the petroleum wells in the neighbourhood of Rawal Pindi. He resumes work in the Sibi district in the autumn.

THE Government of India have sanctioned an allowance of Rs. 1,000 per annum for life to Sirdar Sher Ahmah Khan, C.S.I., Extra Assistant Commissioner, in recognition of his services with the Afghan Boundary Commission.

THE man Jardine, who attempted to murder his wife by firing three shots at her on the platform at the Delhi railway station on the 19th of May last, has been tried at Delhi, and sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL J. H. BROOME, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, has died of cholera at Bannu; and Lieutenant-Colonel G. E. Beecher, 2nd Goorkhas, from the same disease at Mussoorie.

THE sudden death is announced of Mr. C. W. P. Watts, C.S., Judge of Moradabad.

THE Punjab Government have not yet issued any orders upon the "Sialkot Case" of recent notoriety. They have, however, been in possession of Mr. Macauliffe's lengthy reply to Mr. Burney's Judgment for more than a week.

THE Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta have resolved to recommend that an application be sent to Government for permission to raise a 5 per cent. debenture loan of 15½ lakhs, repayable after thirty years.

THE average time occupied in the transmission of messages from Calcutta to the United Kingdom by the Indo-European Telegraph during the last fortnight in July was 1 hour 23 minutes.

THE Secretary of State having sanctioned the admission of superior officers of the Indian Telegraph Department to the benefit of the Civil Engineers Provident Fund a revised set of rules has been issued.

THE total amount of Indian salt revenue for the first three months of the current financial year was Rs.1,77,81,000 on 9,201,000 maunds, as compared with Rs. 1,67,66,000 on 8,799,000 maunds in the corresponding period of last year.

THE late Sir Maxwell Melvill, by his will, dated 24th July, 1877, has left £19,000 to members of his family in England, and the remainder of his property (£20,000) to Mrs. Portman, wife of Colonel Portman, B.S.C.

COLONEL CONWAY GORDON proceeds shortly to Quetta and Pishin to inspect the Frontier railways.

THE Amir has been duly informed of the close of the Boundary negotiations, and has expressed his satisfaction with the arrangement come to.

THE action of the 26th July between General Ghulam Haider and the insurgents was fought at Kotal Dap Pass between Sura and Margha. The insurgents apparently intended holding the pass in force, but Ghulam Haider arrived a day earlier than was expected, and drove in the Andari troops and some Nasaris, posted at Kotal before the main body of the Ghilzais could arrive; 150 prisoners were captured.

AFTER their surprise and defeat near Khelat-i-Ghilzai the Afghan rebels retired some thirty miles due east to Tarwab, being vigorously pursued by Gholam Hyder. The rebels are now in the Suleiman Khel country, but are not likely to get much assistance there.

THE demand of General Faiz Muhammad Khan, Ghilzai, to be permitted to pass through India to Mecca has been rejected by Government.

NEWS from Meshed, dated the 9th August, shows that Herat was quiet up to the beginning of the month at least, and that there has been no renewal of the insurrection.

LATE reports from Lundi Kotal show that work upon the fortified serai there is progressing satisfactorily.

IT will be remembered that over 23,000 prisoners were released in India on the Jubilee Day in February. The criminal returns now to hand, after being carefully examined, show that there has been no abnormal increase in crime, and that Her Majesty's clemency has not been abused.

IT is reported from Simla that a Commission will be appointed in the coming winter for delimitating the frontier between Burma and China.

A MUNICIPALITY is about to be established at Mandalay.

THE Secretary of State will, in the course of the next three months, give notice to the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway that the Government will take over the line on July 1st next year.

MR. H. A. HARRISON, Judge of Meerut, at present on furlough, has announced his intention of retiring. This will make vacant another first grade judgeship in these Provinces. Mr. E. J. Barton, of the Lower Provinces Service, also retires from August 30th.

CHOLERA seems to be widely distributed this season. It has appeared in Kohat, where there have been a number of cases among the garrison. Cases are also reported from Mussoorie, Ranikhet, and Almora. In Mirzapore it is known to be severe. The disease has broken out at Bannu also, whence several cases, two being officers, are reported. Oudh appears to have suffered heavily. A report from Lucknow states that 10,332 deaths from cholera alone have occurred in the Barabanki district during the three months ending August 3rd. The disease is bad at Indore also, the deaths in the city averaging from 50 to 60 daily.

NOTES.

THE Times publishes this morning a telegram from Calcutta, dated yesterday, stating that as nothing had been heard of Ayoub Khan since his escape from Teheran it is presumed that he has eluded the vigilance of the Persian authorities and crossed the frontier, with the view either of taking refuge with the Russians or of making a dash for Herat. The probabilities, it is said, appear to point to his proceeding to the Herat Province, where he is likely to gain a large number of adherents, and has a fair chance of getting possession of the city itself.

THIS is likely enough, and with Herat in his hands there can be little doubt, as suggested, but that he would push towards the Ghilzai country with a view of inciting a fresh rising. This, of course, would not be a difficult task to accomplish. With the discontent at present said to be prevailing throughout Afghanistan, owing to the unpopularity of the present Ameer, it would be easy enough to get up a serious rebellion, which would imperil his throne. Ayoub Khan is a soldier and a politician, and he would quickly rally thousands of discontents to his standard. The Ameer has, on his side, money, well armed troops and artillery, and also the prestige of having British support. But, as the Times correspondent puts it, "What the end would be it is impossible to say."

THE turbulent tribes who would join the standard of revolt are not likely to trouble themselves much about the prestige of British support, but if the Ameer's troops remain faithful—and this will possibly be a question of pay—Ayoub's irregular levies might sustain a signal defeat. But in case of the Ameer's army deserting him and going over to his enemy it is very possible, as the Times correspondent telegraphs, that we should be asked to interfere. That is to say, not only with money and arms, but with men. To move troops into Afghanistan to help to prop up a tottering throne will be, of course, to repeat the old story of the past. The people of England cannot desire to have another Afghan campaign upon their hands. As Russia does not appear as a factor in the problem, it would be better to let Ayoub and Abdurrahman solve the question of rule between themselves.

THE Times itself, however, commenting upon Ayoub's flight, has a crumb of comfort for us: "Our ignorance whether Russia has had anything to do with this temporary disappearance of Ayoub justifies the view that he is still within the limits of Persia, and if the result confirms this supposition by his recapture, we may look forward to the renewal of our arrangement with the Shah for Ayoub's maintenance with some fresh stipulations for his safer custody in the future." There is much virtue in your if. It is a pity, however, that our arrangement with the Shah did not secure safer custody in the past.

"SAVE me from my friends!" is an orison which Sir West Ridgeway must have put up on reading the questions asked in Parliament on Friday last. On that afternoon Mr. Coghill wished the Secretary of State for War to inform him in what way he proposed to recognise the services of Sir W. Ridgeway and the other officers associated with him in the negotiations for the delimitation of the Afghan frontier line, which had been brought to such a successful issue. Sir J. Fergusson very properly replied that it was not desirable that statements in advance in regard to the bestowal of rewards for good service should be made to Parliament, but that the question in the case referred to would receive the consideration of Government as a whole. The hon. member for Newcastle-under-Lyme no doubt acted as he did under the idea that he was doing a good turn to Sir West Ridgeway and his colleagues, who, of course, had no idea that so injudicious a question was to be put to the House. It was not likely that the Government would fail to reward in due time the good services of these officers, but Mr. Coghill should have "let well alone."

IRRESPECTIVE of any stragetic reasons for England holding Malta, the result of the withdrawal of the troops and men-of-war from that Island would be the impoverishment and ruin of thousands. At present, owing to the quarantine imposed against ships from Malta in consequence of the outbreak of cholera there, ships have ceased to call, and the Mediterranean Squadron has not visited the place. The result is told in an appeal which the Governor, Sir Lintorn Simmons, has made to the Lord Mayor of London for funds to aid the distressed. "Work in connection with the harbour has ceased, which work has been computed as affording employment to about 4,000 men, and an existence to five times that number, or to 20,000 souls, including women and children." There is no doubt but that the appeal will be liberally responded to, but this incident ought to open the eyes of those who are so glibly recommending that England should withdraw her fleet and garrisons from the Mediterranean as to the happy consequences which would follow. We gave up Corfu and the Ionian Islands; in what sort of prosperity are they now? Their inhabitants would welcome us back with acclamation.

THESE facts inculcate a lesson for the benefit of those also who advocate that we should withdraw from India and Burma as speedily as possible, and leave the Native Governments to look after their own affairs. Of course, notwithstanding all the sentimental talk to the contrary, England never intends to relinquish her hold on either country so long as she has the power to hold her own; but it is a pity that the sentimentalists will not look at current history as it is, and profit thereby. Let them take that of Lower Burma, for example. Before the advent of the British its history was one of war, murder, pillage and devastation. To-day it is a history of progress, prosperity and increasing knowledge among the people at large.

This has been accomplished by British rule, making life and property safe, and administering equal justice to all.

THE latest papers to hand from that Province tell us that the same happy change is coming over the fortunes of Upper Burma. There is still now and then a story of a dacoit raid, but dacoity is being rapidly stamped out and the result as depicted by a local journalist is that, "Horrors which historians of the old school used to delight in recording are gradually ceasing, and giving place to the kind of history which is recorded in blue books and trade statistics. This," continues the writer, "may be less exciting; it affords fewer themes for sensational writing, or for politicians anxious to secure a cheap and fleeting notoriety; but it is infinitely better for the people themselves." We should think so; and such matter-of-fact argument ought to be an answer to those "over-righteous" people who preach that evil must not be done even if good may come of it. But war and annexation are not always evils.
